New Theft Record

HAMILTON, Mar. 26. (C.P.) New and then such unwieldly things as iron safes, pianos, etc., are stolen but all records were broken to-day when the city suddenly realized that missing from its possessions were one freight shed and one harbor dock.

Some time ago the city purchased from the Canada Steamship Lines, the passenger and freight terminal located at the foot of James street.

The large buildings were fairly modern and the dock in excellent condition, being big enough to accommodate lake passenger steamers. A visit to the spot to-day shows that not only has the building disappeared but the dock itself has been removed.

Some of the massive piles have been sawed off at the water level.

Ambitious builders of chicken houses, persons short of fuel, etc., are suspected.

ONTARIO LABOR SHIFTS TACTICS UPON UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

Favor Scheme Paid For by State and Employer, Eliminating Worker.

MAN, WIFE $25 WEEKLY.

WINDSOR, March 26 (C.P.). — Ontario Labor, in annual convention here to-day, abandoned its championship of employment insurance toward which the employed, as well as the employer and the state would contribute, and espoused a form of insurance financed only by the employer and the state —the system the Communists have been advocating in demonstrations and in hunger marches on Toronto and Ottawa.

Only one vote against the non-contributory plan was cast. Decision of a resolution calling for non-contributory insurance took most of this morning's session of the Ontario Labor Party convention, and found such leaders as President Arthur Mould of London, and Controller James Simpson of Toronto, an executive member of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, heading the fight for the non-contributory system.

Debate broke out soon after the convention opened, when a special committee headed by John W. Buckley, secretary of the Toronto Trades and Labor Council, and Labor candidate in West York, offered a resolution for contributory insurance.

His Own Obituary!

He said he was preparing the copy in advance as his contribution to help good things along. The obituary said:

"Robert Quillen died last night of a bronchial asthma. He was a writer of paragraphs and short editorials. He always hoped to write something of permant value but never got around to it.

In his youth he felt an urge to reform the world but decided he would be doing well if he kept himself out of jail.

The funeral service was held at the Baptist Church this afternoon. Complying with Mr. Quillen's last request his wife had imported a uniformed brass band which marched in front of the procession playing "The Old Gray Mare Came Tearing Out of the Wilderness."

Mr. T. H. McGee joined the widow to express his sympathy. "It is a great loss," he murmered.

"Yes", she agreed absently, "but it's fully covered by insurance."

Municipal employees of Birmingham, England, have purchased a theatre in which plays will be given entirely by those on the city payroll.

HUNT FOR BABY TAKES NEW LIFE AT LATEST CLUE

Norfolk Police Instructed Not to Interfere in Any Negotiations.

EARLY RETURN HINTED.

Mysterious Visits Continue to Lindbergh Esate in Sourland Hills.

NORFOLK, Va. Mar. 26. (CP)—Three reticent negotiators and a police force instructed not to interfere to-day stood ready to do what they could to bring about the prompt and safe return of the kidnapped Lindbergh baby.

What has been done by the Norfolk residents between the famous flying colonel and those who are believed to hold his infant son was shrouded in mystery almost as deep as what they expect to do and in each case there was room for speculation—and little else.

The position of the Norfolk police force was clearly stated last night by Chief S. W. Ironmonger, who said the first aim of the police should be the recovery of stolen property, and this is the attitude of the Norfolk police have adopted in the Lindbergh case. He added that two members of his force have been assigned to the case but were not instructed to make any arrests.

Detective Leon Nowitzky, one of those having the assignment, said he was investigating a number of letters from persons claiming to have some knowledge of the whereabouts of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr. He promised the next development will be so airtight that there'll be no chance for a leak. He also expressed confidence that the child would be returned at an early date, possibly to-day.

Hopeful of Results

Similar confidence was expressed by the Rev. H. Dobson Peacock. He

Mr. Stone had recently undergone an operation at Toronto General Hospital, from which he was making a good recovery. He was out and about as recently as Thursday last, but took a seizure from which he succumbed.

He was a native of Percy township, having been born at Norham. He served for many years on Percy township council, of which he was deputy reeve for several terms. He was also a president of the Norham Cheese Factory.

He came to Campbellford 15 years ago upon his retirement from farming, and also served on Campbellford Town Council of which he was reeve at the time of his death. He had occupied every chair in the council with the exception of the Mayoralty. At the time of his death he also held office as secretary-treasurer of Seymour Agricultural Society, and was an official of St. John's United Church.

In political circles he was past president of the Ontario Liberal Association, County of Northumberland.

End Is In Sight

End of the depression is near, according to an old-timer who, from his own long experience and the accumulated wisdom that has come down to him from the two preceding generations, has evolved a rule for measurement that is infa'lible.

As a measure of the length of any real depression, he says, one must wear out three pairs of trousers. He is now wearing his third post-depression pair, and the seat has worn so thin that he can sit on a nickel and tell whether it is head or tail up.—Wall Street Journal.

RESUME TALKS UPON SEAWAY IN WASHINGTON

Herridge Visits State Department in Company With Hume Wrong.

MUCH SKEPTICISM.

Proponents Express Anxiety of Short Time to Get Treaty Before Senate.

By Ken Clark, C. P. Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, March 26. — Washington conferences on the St. Lawrence waterway were resumed at the state department this morning.

The Canadian Minister, Hon. W. D. Herridge, who returned from Ottawa yesterday went to the department accompanied by Hume Wrong, counsellor of the legation, and they were in conference with Assistant Secretary of State James Rogers, and John Hickerson, in charge of Canadian affairs, for some time.

Despite optimistic accounts of the recent conferences in Ottawa between the Dominion authorities and those of Quebec, there was skepticism in well informed quarters this morning concerning the prospect of immediately setting to work upon the drafting of a treaty.

Proponents Anxious

Proponents of the project here express some anxiety because of the apparent necessity of getting a treaty signed with a few weeks in order to enable the senate to debate and ratify before adjournment of congress. It is pointed out, however, that if the opinions of Senator Robinson, Democrat, Arkansas, and Senator Moses, Republican, New Hampshire, indicating it may be necessary that congress sit all summer, should be established, there would be plenty of time for ratification by Washington.

GASOLINE PRICE IS UP ONE CENT

Additional Provincial Tax Increases Price of Gasoline.

COST PETERBORO $21,000.

One cent increase in the gasoline tax will, it is estimated, cost the motorists of Peterborough $21,000.00.

At every automobile service station throughout the city and province, motorists yesterday commenced to pay one cent per gallon more for their gasoline to meet the demands of the increased tax imposed by the Provincial Government. The Provincial treasury now collects a total of six cents from every gallon of motor spirit sold in Ontario.

Imperial Oil Company officials estimate that the average amount of gasoline consumed by one vehicle per year amounts to 350 gallons. With a total registration of 6,314 vehicles in Peterborough last year, including cars and trucks, it is thus computed that the available market in this city equals 2,100,770 gallons of gasoline per year.

Taking these figures as something like a fair average, it is estimated that the approximate revenue to the Provincial coffers from the gasoline tax from this city alone, will this year be $126,000.00 an increase over last year of $21,000.00.

RANGERS BEAT HAMILTON 5-2 IN SEMI-FINAL

KILMARNOCK WINS 3-2.

Everton and Chelsea Battle to Scoreless Tie in First Division.

GLASGOW, Mar. 26 (C.P. Cable). — Rangers and Kilmarnock won their way into the final of the Scottish Football Association Cup competition to-day when they triumphed in semi-final matches. Rangers defeated Hamilton Academicals by five goals to two, while Kilmarnock beat Airdrieonians by three goals to two. Rangers won in easy fashion, putting in their five markers before Hamilton could score. They got three goals in the first half. Kilmarnock also always looked like winners. They led by two goals to nil at half-time.

Rangers and Hamilton played a keen even game for twenty minutes when Marshall scored for the former. English added another two minutes afterwards, and the Rangers went three up before half-time.

The Kilmarnock-Airdrie struggle opened with fierce end-to-end rushes, with Kilmarnock holding a slight advantage. For nearly twenty minutes there was no score, though Armstrong missed a great chance of opening Airdrie's account.

Scores First Goal.

Eight minutes from the interval Aitken scored the first goal for Kilmarnock, netting on a low cross shot. McEwan, who had been shooting from long range, added a second goal for Kilmarnock four minutes afterwards from thirty yards out. Paterson, the Airdrie goalie, was hampered in his attempts to clear by the onrushing Killie inside forwards. Kilmarnock well deserved to be in the lead at the half-way mark.

Airdrie broke into the scoring column two minutes after resumption, but at the end of ten minutes' play in the second half Maxwell goaled for Kilmarnock, to give them three markers to Airdrie's one.

At Parkhead, Archibald scored a fourth goal for Rangers in the second half with a shot that almost burst the roof of the net. Archibald goaled seven minutes after the restart, and two minutes later Marshall added a fifth goal for Rangers.

J. Patterson, Airdrie's centre-half, got their second goal four minutes from time.

Ten minutes from time Herd scored for Hamilton, and King completed their tally in the last minute.

ANDERSON CASE TAKES NEW TURN

REMANDED TO TUESDAY.

HAMILTON, Mar. 26.— Charged by Provincial police with having attempted to commit a grossly indecent offense against Harry Brightwell, on Jan. 17 last, George Anderson, wounded singer, was arrested this morning, brought before Magistrate Vance in county police court and remanded until next Tuesday morning. He was allowed bail of $10,000.

Brightwell himself will stand trial next month on a charge of shooting Anderson with intent to do grievious bodily harm.

The charge against Anderson is the result of a statement given the provincial police by Brightwell, the 22 year old Montreal youth whom the singer is alleged to have carried as a passenger in his car on the night in January.

This morning two constables of the provincial police force, Officers Armstrong and Keeler went to Anderson's home. They brought the singer to the court house, his head swathed in bandages.

During the hearin this morning the court room was cleared of all but those involved in the proceedings.

KINSMEN HEAR FINE ADDRESS ON CITIZENSHIP

J. J. Duffus Addresses Local Club on National Observance Night.

MESSAGES READ.

Duty of Citizens is Fully Outlined in Splendid Address.

"Citizenship Building" was the appropriate theme on which J. J. Duffus addressed members of the local Kinsmen Club on Thursday which was the annual celebration by the club of National Observance Night.

The gathering, presided over by President G. Wilson Craw, was held at the Empress Hotel, and commenced at nine o'clock to synchronize with the hour at which Kinsmen from one end of the Dominion to the other were gathering in similar observance.

Mr. Duffus' address contained a wealth of inspiration. To quote the words of Dr. E. M. Crough who moved a vote of thanks to the speaker, "It takes a man like Joe, who has lived the life of a true citizen, to expound the philosophy of citizenship."

Messages were read during the course of the evening from Sandford English, the national president of Kinsmen Clubs of Canada, by Dr. Ralph Honey; from the Governor of District No. 1, by Bob Leeming; and from Hal Rogers, the founder of Kinsmanship, by vice-president Emmett Sheehy.

"Kinsmanship is not a luxury in your life. It is an absolute necessity. Let every Kinsman realize that fact to-night. Realize it fully, and this National Observance Night will mark a great milestone of progress," was a portion of the message from the District Governor.

"This celebration must bring to you, as it does to me," said Hal Rogers, the founder of his message, "a very direct realization of the tremendous possibilities of this ever growing organization. The very character of our meeting to-night

GANG BANDITRY CONTINUES TOLL

One Slain—Two Innocent Bystanders Wounded in Second Attack.

NEW YORK, Mar. 26.—A number of things have thrust murder and gang banditry from local front pages during recent weeks, but murder and banditry still go on.

Adolph Greenberg, 37, walked two blocks to a hospital yesterday and said:

"I am bleeding from the head. I don't know what they did to me."

Three hours later he was dead. There was a small wound in his head. Police have been able to learn nothing either as to the identity of his attackers or the motive of the attack.

Bungling gunmen shot at a man, killed a woman and sent strollers on Harlem's "Broadway" scurrying in panic early today.

John Dempsey was the target for three gangsters who fired as they rolled past in a blue sedan.

Free State Army Ordered Confined to Barracks to Prevent Clashes.

DUBLIN TO CELEBRATE.

Noted Women Leaders Plan Demonstration [illegible] ties Cavan and

DUBLIN, March [illegible] (C. P.). — Easter Eve, the sixteenth since the revolution of 1916, found the Republican spirit more active in Ireland today than in years, with some trepidation over the possibility of trouble before the morrow passes. It is the first time in years the organization of the Irish Republican Army have been permittd a free rein for their memorial celebrations in honor of the 1916 revolution.

On that fact, however, officials of the Government to-day pinned a confidence that the day would be peaceful. Clashes, they said, were not likely to occur when there was no opposition.

As a precautionary measure, however, the regular Free State Army was ordered confined to barracks over the week-end, to prevent any possibility of clashes with the Republican Irregular forces.

Army Sells Emblems.

The Republican Army, in collaboration with the Cumann Na Mban, Republican women's organization, began selling white muslin Easter lilies, emblems of the cause of the Republic, in the streets yesterday. The flowers were worn in hundreds of buttonholes before the day was over, backed by the white, green, and orange colors of the Republican flag.

They also covered Dublin with posters reproducing the proclamation of the republic during the week of Easter, 1916.

Last year the Easter ceremonies of the Republicans were prevented by the Free State Government under President William T. Cosgrave. The Government of Ulster also forbade meetings scheduled for several places in Northern Ireland.

Thousands of individuals visited the cemeteries, however, and laid wreaths upon the graves of Republicans. At the town of Bellair three arrests were made for attempting to make speeches and passing out Republican handbills.

Dublin Prepares

Plans for the celebrations in Dublin to-morrow include a special mass at the Carmelite Church and a parade afterward from St. Stephen's Green to Glasnevin Cemetery where there will be speeches over the graves in the Republican plot.

Madam Conn'e McBride, the Irish "Joan of Arc" will lead a demonstration in County Cavan and Mary McSweeney, sister of the Mayor of Cork who died on a hunger strike, will lead another in County Cork.

The grounds of Kilmainham Jail will be thrown open for the first time since the jail was turned over to the Free State and a large crowd was expected to visit the graves of the leaders of the 1916 rebellion.

SINO-JAPANESE TRUCE PARLEYS NEAR COLLAPSE

Delegates Adjourn Till Monday to Refer Issues to Their Governments.

TROOPS HOLD LINES.

(By Morris J. Harris, A.P. Staff Correspondent)

SHANGHAI, March 26.—Negotiations for a Sino-Japanese armistice were near a breakdown to-day as the delegates of the two countries adjourned until Monday in order to refer controversial issues to their respective governments.

The meeting to-day ended with a deadlock on the issue of withdrawal of Japanese troops, and only the possibility of substantial concessions of both sides offered any hope of saving the conference.

The negotiations reached a crisis late yesterday, it was understood, when Lieutenant General Kenkichi Uyeda, chief of the Japanese delegates, informed the conference that the Japanese would not withdraw before six weeks and then only to a secondary defence line, running through Chenju, Tachang and Tsetzeling.

Close Calls

The Chinese delegates immediately prepared to leave the conference, it was learned, and agreed to remain only after Sir Miles W. Lampson, British Minister, and the United States representative promised to use their good offices with the Japanese in an attempt to secure more conciliatory terms. Mamoru Shigemitsu, Japanese Minister, also was understood to have agreed in bringing about a compromise.

Under the Japanese plan to withdraw to a secondary defense line they would still control the territory for a five-mile radius around the city. Complete withdrawal, a spokesman for the Japanese said, would depend upon circumstances entirely.

The only major agreement reached since the opening of the parleys concerns the composition and functions of a joint commission to certify the withdrawal of the forces. It was agreed that the commission should include representatives of Great Britain, United States, France and Italy, the four powers that have been assisting in bringing about peace overtures.

ROME REJOICES, BELLS PEAL OUT

Special Rituals Commemorate Day—Thousands Throng Squares.

OLD RITES IN FLORENCE.

By Andrue Berding, A. P. Staff Writer

ROME, Mar. 26.—Lifting the head hung in mourning over the death of Christ for 40 days, Rome rang out the bells of her 400 churches at noon today and removed the sombre black and purple coverings from her statues and crucifixes.

Lent was over officially at noon and church bells and organs, silent since Holy Thursday morning, apprized the capital city of the Roman Catholic world that the time had come to rejoice over Christ's resurrection.

Special rituals commemorated the day. In St. Peter's the Pope's paschal candle, eight feet high and three inches in diameter, was blessed by Cardinal Pacelli. The cardinal lighted the Easter fire by striking a spark from a flint. The "new fire," as it is called, was suggestive of Christ's resurrection. At the conclusion of the mass the cardinal imparted a benediction with relics

COTTAGE PARTY ENDS IN COURT

Lindsay Girl and London Friend Arrested During Drinking Bout.

Slow Progress on Bridge

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LINDSAY, March 26. — A sad case came up in the police court Wednesday. It told the story of a well known local girl who had been in the habit of staging parties in a summer cottage on the Scugog River. A few evenings ago Provincial Constable Nelson and Constable Hodgson visited the cottage and found the girl and a man named McLean from London.

Drinking had been indulged in during the night, and a charge was preferred against the man for having liquor. He was fined $100 and costs, and was given a couple of days to try and raise the money. Two charges were laid against the girl, but trial was adjourned sine die., the accused promising to live elsewhere for a period of two years.

His Honor Judge Swayze has rendered judgment in a peculiar case over a school levy in favor of Fenelon Falls School Board. The Board entered suit against the Township of Verulam for the balance of a school levy made for the year 1929, which amounted to about $8,000. Every five years the amount of the levy is agreed upon. In 1924 it was fixed at 2 per cent. for the township. The levy for 1929 should have been made in July of that year, but was deferred until October, when the assessors made quite a reduction in the township levy. In giving judgment against Verulam Township, Judge Swayze claimed that the levies had been sent out and had been collected, according to the 1924 award, and that the township should pay up.

Owing to the fact that the new bridge on the Peterborough-Lindsay Highway will not be completed for some months, steps are being taken to induce the government to erect a temporary structure over the Scugog River and thus avoid the detours.

reiterated expressions of confidence in the successful outcome of their efforts and said he expected negotiations to be completed within the next few days.

Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage, retired and John Hughes Curtis, boat builder, remaining members of the trio, declined to add to their statement that what transpired at their conference earlier in the week with Colonel Lindbergh was a matter of the strictest confidence.

The Virginian pilot said that the three men had made a contact with a representative of the kidnappers since their return from Hopewell, N. J., and that the meeting occurred early Thursday morning. Asked specifically about this, Mr. Curtis told the Associated Press, "I am not in a position to answer that."

The optimistic expressions here were in sharp contrast with New Jersey police reports that Colonel Lindbergh himself placed no specific significance on the Norfolk investigation.

May Win Appeal

HOPEWELL, N. J., Mar. 26. — While three Norfolk citizens did their best to restore kidnapped Charles A. Lindbergh Jr., to his parents today, his father was believed to be considering issuing a fourth appeal to the persons who stole the child March 1.

Thrice Col. Lindbergh, willing to pay ransom to get the child back, has issued public pleas to the kidnappers to open negotiations, but these have failed to accomplish the desired object. Information from friends of the family was that he might try again. He has pledged himself not to try to injure the kidnappers if they will return the child.

Speculation was rife as to the Lindbergh statement of yesterday that the information furnished by the Rev. H. Dobson-Peacock and two other Norfolk men was considered to have no sifnificance.

Two French Fliers Set Up New Record

ORAN, Algeria, March 26 (C.P.). —The French flyers Lucien Bousoutrot and Emil Rossi broke the world record for sustained flight over a closed circuit to-day when they had covered 10,600 kilometers and been in the air 76 hours and 43 minutes.

The record formerly was held by Marcel Doret and Joseph Lebrix, their distance was 10,372 kilometers.

Bousoutrot and Rossi made an attempt last June at Istres, France, to break the record, but they abandoned the attempt after 72 hours in the air.

Four Killed in Belleville Crossing Crash

Their car struck by a passenger train three miles east of Belleville Tuesday night, four residents of Point Anne village were killed, the victims and the automobile being dragged by the train from Gibson's Crossing to the heart of the town. Dorothy Darkington (1), and Renotta Storr (3), each 14 years old, and Miles Cummings (5) were killed instantly along with the driver of their taxi, Everett Mastin, shown in (4) with his wife and daughter. The party was en route to a hockey game at Belleville. The train was travelling at a high rate of speed and the engine crew felt not the slightest impact. Near the George Street crossing in Belleville, Engineer J. Sinclair glanced from the side of his car window and saw the twisted mass of wreckage shown in (2).

TWO COUNTIES IN AGREEMENT WITH COBOURG

Town Will Remain With United Counties of Northumberland and Durham.

REPORT IS MADE.

Cobourg's Equalized Assessment is Reduced $3,027,757.

A summary of the report by H. L. Cummings, law clerk of the provincial secretary's department, on the financial issue between Cobourg and the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham was presented by A. R. Willmott, town solicitor, at a recent meeting of Cobourg Council, as follows:

"As the matters in dispute between the town and counties have been now brought to a definite conclusion, I beg to make the following report as to the results obtained:

"Cobourg's equalized assessment is now reduced from $4,905,227 to $4,205,218. The counties subsequently reduced the assessment by their December, 1931, by-law to 72 per cent. of the original totals so that Cobourg's correct equalized assessment is now $3,027,757.

Income assessment	$ 53,539
Business assessment	238,270
Total reduction	$700,009

"Income assessment was authorized to be deducted by an amendment to the Assessment Act in 1931. The second item, business assessment, was deducted by the Counties' Council in their by-law passed December, 1931, and effective this year, thus carrying out ex-Warden Hooten's undertaking that some relief would be given. Item three is an error in the equalized assessment report and the correction of this mistake gives to Cobourg alone and not to any other municipality the benefit of this somewhat substantial reduction.

"When the Counties' Council in January last decided to reduce the equalized assessment of all municipalities to 72 per cent. of the figures in the original report, Cobourg's proper percentage, as pointed out by Mr. Cummings, works out at $3,027,757, not $3,311,981. As there are similar errors in the oth-

League Commission Heads For Nanking

SHANGHAI, Mar. 26.—(AP)—The members of the League of Nations enquiry commission which is investigating the Sino-Japanese conflict here and in Manchuria left in two groups today for Nanking.

The French, United States and German representatives left by train for Hangchow, when they planned to go on to Nanking by motor. The Earl of Lyton, British delegate and chairman of the commission, and Signor Maresccotti, Italian member, sailed on a river steamer.

Mayor Wu Teh-Chen of Shanghai and a party of local dignitaries bade the delegates goodbye but there was no ceremony. Dr. Wellington Koo, former Chinese foreign minister, and Mme. Koo accompanied the Earl of Lytton's party.

MALLISON OVER AFRICA SEEKING FRESH MARK

ALGIERS, Algeria, March 26 (C. P. Cable). — J. A. Mollison, Australian airman, who is attempting to break the record for a flight from London to Cape Town, took off yesterday from Reggan Oasis on a 736-mile hop to Gao, French West Africa. Mollison, who holds the record for a flight from Australia to England, arrived at Reggan Oasis at 8.40 a.m. yesterday after a 375-mile flight from Colomb Bechar, the most southerly railway terminus in Algeria.

Flying over a new route over West Africa, the airman will cut 800 miles off the regular England-Cape journey in his attempt to shatter the 5½ days' record established last year by Miss Peggy Salaman, London society girl, and her co-pilot, Gordon Store.

U.S. RADIO COMMISSION PREPARES EXTENSIVE REPORT ON INDUSTRY

Now 610 Stations — Began With Harding Election Broadcast, Pittsburg, 1920.

$25,000,000 EQUIPMENT.

(By Ken Clark, C.P. Staff Writer)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 26. — The radio commission of the United States is preparing an extensive report of the industry and all the problems presented by the growth of the newest agency of entertainment, education, propaganda and communication. In response to a resolution presented by Senator James Couzens, of Michigan, a native Canadian, the commission is drawing up an exhaustive survey of information on government ownership, advertising, regulation of broadcasting and capital concerned in the industry. The report should be presented within a few days.

Beginning with a broadcast of the Harding election returns by a Pittsburgh station in 1920, the industry has mushroomed throughout the United States until at the present time there are 610 stations using 78 exclusive channels. Two large chains the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting Service own several large stations outright. These are used as keys providing program material to affiliated stations. National broadcasting serves approximately 90 affiliates and Columbia about 95

Investment in broadcasting equipment runs between $25,000,000 and $35,000,000. This will be materially increased in the immediate future when transmitters costing $250,000 each, are installed in 20 new high-powered stations which under ruling of the commission on clear channels will be enabled to increase their power to 50,000 watts.

There are in the United States about 15,000,000 receiving sets representing an investment of from two to three billion dollars.

Income from broadcasting is variously estimated as in the neighborhood of $1,000,000,000 annually.

Scoutmaster Ernest Wolff's, St. Peter's Troop appears to be the only active unit in the local Association this week. Still that is not altogether surprising in view of the general observance of Holy Week and Eastertide and the consequent demand at most of the churches for the halls which are ordinarily used by the various troops at least once a week.

Then of course outdoor work is ruled out of question by the return of old man winter. But there is comfort in the knowledge that he cannot linger much longer now.

St. Peter's Troop is getting right down to work. They had a full turnout last Monday night and took three boys into the troop for a probationary period of one month.

A plan of work was laid down for the troop and the program was divided into four sections. It is interesting to note that proficiency badge work forms the chief item in that program, and that each of the four leaders is to specialize on coaching their boys along for two proficiency tests.

The troop at present includes two first class scouts among its membership. They are Patrol Leader Emmett Creighton and A.S.M. James Sweetman. It is intended however to have more first class scouts, and accordingly S.M. Ernest Wolff has taken upon himself the task of preparing a group of second class scouts for this promotion.

Recognizing the part which sports play in the training of an all round scout, Scout Leader Mike Crough has charge of the sports and games section. That sounds like a well-balanced program. Doesn't it?

The value of Scout training is fully appreciated by Mayor W. J. Stewart of Toronto, in which city the annual Scout drive for funds opens next week.

"Unemployment problems of the future could be greatly ameliorated by the Boy Scout work done to-day," he believes. He also expressed the opinion in a recent newspaper interview, "Scout training imbues the boys with an appreciation of the value of work, and develops their interests along the lines to which they are best suited. We would have fewer misfits in the world to-day if all boys had the advantage of Scout life. The boy who has been a Scout becomes a man with definite, developed capabilities, who does not walk the streets looking for pick and shovel work or routine office work. I am 100 per cent behind the Boy Scout movement," he said.

Billy Stewart the Mayor's son is also a Scout. He has already started to do his bit, in the $30,000 campaign which opens Tuesday morning in Toronto and concludes on the following Friday evening.

The Toronto Mail and Empire carried an editorial of great interest to Scouts in Friday's issue. It said in part: "Among the obligations assumed by a Boy Scout in the pledge which he takes on joining the organization, is to help other people at all times. Thirteen-year-old Scout Sam Joyce of the 1st Port Credit Troop had it in mind when he saved another boy from drowning a fortnight ago. Last year 13 Ontario Scouts were honored for outstanding service in connection with saving life from drowning or fire...."

"The practical aspect of Scouting is seen in its law which each boy is pledged on his honor to obey. When properly led it has been found that the boys do live up to it with all its far-reaching results in the formation of character. Scouting is really a recreational education carried on to a large extent in the great healthy out-door school. It develops the spirit and habit of resourcefulness and of cheerfully facing difficulties. Every normal boy must find outlet for his superabundant energy. Scouting provides the outlet and controls it. He loves to form and to play in gangs and scouting meets safely this adventurous spirit."

ISTANBUL, March 26 (C.P.). — A Turkish salvage vessel put off to-day to rescue the French steamer Providence which went aground on the Island of Imbros yesterday during a heavy fog.

The passengers of the steamer remained aboard and were calm and assured of their safety, reports from the steamer said.

Death of Dog Saddens Crew

WINNIPEG, Man. March 26. —(CP).—"Old Jim" is dead and railwaymen with whom he spent so many happy hours around the "yards" are very sad. A big, reddish-brown Irish setter with kindly brown eyes and a heart of gold, he came to live with the car inspectors here six years ago.

"Jim" loved the engines and when the trains came along he would jump on board for a ride. Recently he died and on the wall of the yardmen's shack is a memorial: Jim's collar and a gold star and the following verse:

"A friend of man was old Brown Jim
"Men thought of him as kith and kin
"With flashing eyes he'd ask a stone
"With touch of paw he'd beg a bone
"Hence those eyes with the question mark
"Are gone along with his friendly bark."

COUNCIL HAS NOT CONSULTED PECK

County Solicitor Declines to Comment Council's Appointment.

STATUTES CONSULTED

E. A. Peck, M.P., legal adviser to the County County Council, declined to discuss this morning the council's appointment of A. E. Chalmers as road superintendent. He had not been consulted by the council, Mr. Peck said, and the question had not been brought to his attention.

Some time ago The Examiner published section 212 of the Revised Statues of Ontario dealing with meetings of municipal councils, as follows: "The head of a council, or presiding officer, except where he is not qualified to vote by reason of interest or other wise, may vote with the other members on all questions, and except where other wise expressly provided by this Act any question on which there is an equality of votes shall be deemed to be negatived."

In the apointment of Mr. Chalmers six members, including Warden Montgomery, voted for the report recommending Mr. Chalmers, and six voted against. The result at that stage was a tie, "an equality of votes" and according to the statute that question "shall be deemed to be negatived." But, Warden Montgomery voted again because there was a tie, and for the purpose of reaching a definite decision.

Ratepayers who doubt the legality of the council's action base their opinion on the statute. They contend that the Warden was not entitled to a second vote, and that the council should have taken some other action instead of leaving their decision apparently clouded by a rule which in the reading of section 212 seems to be quite clear.

TILT ON HYDRO CLOSES SESSION IN LEGISLATURE

Cooke and Henry Face Sinclair, Nixon, McQuibban Attacks.

PROROGATION TUESDAY.

TORONTO, March 26. (C.P.) — Queen's Park, a hive of activity for the past two months, is quiet today. The home of the Ontario Government is deserted. Members of the Legislature, with the exception of the quorum necessary to hold the formal prorogation ceremony Tuesday, have left. The third session of the eighteenth Legislature concluded shortly before dawn yesterday.

During its life there had been calm and storm. But the hours which preceded the close climaxed all. The battles of taxation and Hydro were waged all over again. Opposition charge and government denial featured the final meeting—a meeting which began at 11 o'clock on Thursday morning and ended at 3.30 o'clock on Friday morning. Now all is still.

Burdens Increased

Out of it all, the Ontario taxpayer finds his burden increased. The gasoline tax of five cents is now increased to six cents and is already being collected. Fuel oil consumers will pay one-half cent per gallon. Corporations will find their taxes raised. Law stamps will cost more, entertainment seekers will also pay higher for their fun. But the 25 cent movie ticket will be untaxed as previously. The proposal to tax the lower priced admission had been so strongly opposed that it was dropped. Liquor and imported wine will be 10 cents dearer per quart. Native wine will cost 10 cents per gallon more, due to the new tax. Seldom, if ever before, have the final hours of the legislature been so tense as they were yesterday morning. Hydro was the bone of contention. Both sides have fought tooth and nail over it. And the fight will continue, apparently.

THE EASTER ANGEL

By Rev. Dr. Dyson Hague, Toronto.

THE rays of the first Easter dawn were breaking as the women who came to see the sepulchre found an empty tomb. An angel was sitting upon the stone that he had rolled away. St. Mark says he was a young man. There is a beautiful touch in that detail. God has no old men in heaven. They are all young there. Immortal youth, it has been said, with buoyant energy and fresh power, belongs to these angelic beings. No waste decays their strength. Age cannot wither them. Nor can the children of the resurrection, who are equal unto the angels, tire or age. So on that first Easter morning God sent one of His ever young angels to bring gladness to the captives of doubt, and the dawning of a new day to this dark old world. Strong and beautiful, in a snow white robe, with the hand of God's invisible power, he rolled away the great stone that kept Christ's sepulchre sealed. With a voice at once sympathetic and consolatory, he became the first announcer of the resurrection in the inspiring words: "Dismiss your fears. Jesus, the Crucified One, is not here. He has come back to life. Come and see the place where He lay. Go quickly and tell that He has risen from the dead." (Matt. 28:6-7, Weymouth Version.)

It is our to-day to reiterate the message of the young Easter angel. Let panic and dismay be gone. Bury your fears, O trembling hearts, those needless fears of the future, those haunting spectres of the unknown. Jesus is risen! He is risen indeed! Christ does not lie in that garden grave. The sepulchre is vacant. There is no decaying body there. That empty tomb, convincing argument, is eloquent of triumph. Come and see the place. He is risen! Christ is risen from the tomb! As they ran, thrilled with the rapture of a new born hope, so we in the joy and strength of that Easter evangel must tell it out with haste to-day. Death is dead. Christ has abolished it. Life has triumphed. Hope springs eternal in the Christian breast. No longer is the life beyond a grand perhaps, as the doubting Frenchman said. It is a certainty, a joyous, hope-inspiring certainty. Jesus is risen! He is risen, indeed!

And to-day He lives in ten thousand lives. His life is not a thing of the vanished past. Uncountable millions can say, I live and He lives in me. Vivit vero in me Christus! One Easter morning, on the cliffs of Cornwall, an old man was asked how he knew that Christ is risen. "Sir," he replied, "do you see those cottages on the cliffs? Sometimes when I am far out at sea I know that the sun is risen by the light that is reflected from their windows. And I know, Sir, that Christ is risen because I see His light reflected on the faces of my fellows every day, and I feel the light of His glory in my own poor life. As soon tell me that the sun is not risen when I see his reflected glory as tell me that my Lord is not risen."

God's springtime is here again. Soon the Easter bells will peal. In ten thousand choirs will voices rise, all jubilant with song: Christ the Lord is risen to-day. Alleluia! The floods of doubt may lift up their voices of denial. The floods of atheism may lift up their voices of despair. But to-day the Lord on high, the Living Christ, is mightier than the noise of many waters; yea, than the mighty waves of the sea of death. Let us prove it, O Christians, by our living faith. Let us prove it to others by our resurrection lives. Do we accept the power of His resurrection? Then let us tell it out with voices confident: I believe in the resurrection of the dead, and the life of the world to come. Because He lives we shall live also. Tears are now falling and death seems not yet dead. But one day doubt will die, all tears be dried, and soon the Day will break and the shadows flee away because He lives! He lives, who once was dead. He lives, our Everlasting Head!

Japan Full of Political Contrasts

By H. W. L. Mahood

An illuminating article appeared this week in The Examiner on Japan. Japan to be understood Japan must be studied from many viewpoints. Recently, she has been seen in the light of her relations with China. Domestically, she is headed towards a head-on collision. Antagonistic forces are in the grapple. Hand craft is not easily yielding to machinery. Hand craft went with comparative comfort. Machinery has made a few rich and the many poor. A social crisis is in the offing. Japan like the United States has not discovered the art of making machinery serve the human, rather than the human serve the machine. To no industrialized nation will contentment and general prosperity return before this problem is solved.

The clash between the militaristic and peace minded Japan is on. The militaristic attitude by no means represents Japanese tendencies. The trend is toward disarmament and international peace. The present war policy is meeting strong opposition. There are two men in Japan whom the world trusts. No other public men in that nation have greater power with the people. Japan is not a republic. The Emperor is regarded with the old pagan reverence. He is a god. But that conception among the common people is being rapidly dissipated. Shidehara and Kagawa are Christian men. The people are turning to the ideals born in Christianity, of liberty and freedom. Christian experience of a Saviour God is the cradle of civil liberty and constitutional freedom.

Shidehara until quite recently has been the Foreign Minister of Japan. That he would still be, if he were not radically peace minded, and did not oppose the present invasion of China. Kagawa is a Christian church-statesman. Both of these men hold the confidence of the civilized nations of the world. Shidehara is well known in the Colleges and Universities of the east. He is an authority on the flora and fauna of Japan and China. One of the most beautiful and costly gardens of Tokyo is his. As a diplomat he was regarded as a sincere and trustworthy man by the statesmen of the western nations. Without him Japan has lost her standing in the counsels of the world.

To understand present-day Japan the attitude of the students in the high schools and colleges and universities must not be overlooked. The Japan of tomorrow is in the making in these educational institutions. In no other nation, either east or west, are the students so radically outspoken for disarmament and world peace. Their protest against the present war became so outspoken that several of the students of the Tokyo University were arrested and fined. But they refuse to be silenced.

Here is another factor in the new making for Japan. For the first time in her history, the women have taken a determined stand against the government's foreign policy. There are two million of them who have the rights of the franchise. They have become tremendously active. These women have sent a document to Geneva, advocating disarmament. It is the most extensively women signed document sent to that Disarmament Conference. Surely a new day is on the way for this much blamed and criticised nation.

Mental Attitude

YOUR mental attitude is a great determining influence in your daily life. Begin the day with an expectant and energetic mental attitude toward your work, plans and purposes, and it will elevate and enhance all your activities.

The spirit in which you regard your fellow-men and the world about you will be reflected back to you. When you are in the right mental attitude, many things will seem to conspire and co-operate to advance your work and interests.

Primarily it is your mental attitude which makes the day happy and productive or the contrary. You can demonstrate the truth of this to-day by resolving to look only for the best, to be intelligently optimistic, and to have confidence in the eternal supremacy of good.

Make more positive resolutions regarding the things you ought to do. Bring every available reinforcement to bear upon such resolutions. Write down on a card the special things you resolve to do, and read it several times a day. Repeat it aloud at frequent intervals. Assert in vigorous tones of voice the thoughts you wish to establish as unconscious habits of your life.

The best means of impressing new resolutions upon your mind is by concentration, iteration, and vigorous assertion. At the close of every day review your thoughts, your actions, and know precisely what you have done with your new resolutions. It is a great thing to conceive a great idea, but it is still greater to put it into execution.

COMPLAISANCE.

Complaisance obliges, while it reprehends; without this the best advice seems but a reproach, praise is disagreeable, and conversation troublesome.

Security For a Loan

"MISTER, do you lend money here?" asked an earnest young voice at the office door.

The lawyer turned away from his desk, confronted a clear-eyed, poorly dressed lad of some ten years, and studied him keenly for a moment. "Sometimes we do—on good security," he said gravely.

The little fellow explained that he had a chance "to buy out a boy that's cryin' papers." He had half the money required, but he needed to borrow the other two dollars.

"What security can you offer?" asked the lawyer.

The boy's hand sought his pocket and drew out a paper carefully folded in a bit of calico. It was a cheaply printed pledge against the use of intoxicating liquors and tobacco. As respectfully as if it had been a deed to a farm, the lawyer examined it, and handed over the required sum.

A friend who had watched the transaction with silent amusement laughed as the young borrower departed.

"You think I know nothing about him?" smiled the lawyer. "I know that he came manfully in what he supposed to be a business way, and tried to negotiate a loan instead of begging the money. I know he has been under good influences, or he would not have signed that pledge, and that he does not hold it lightly, or he would not have cared for it so carefully. I agree with him that one who keeps himself from such things has a character to offer as security."—The Guardian.

Being Oneself

SOME persons seem to possess baffling personalities. You may talk with them for hours, even live with them for years; and at the end you are wholly unable to say that you know them. You never seem able to penetrate beneath the surface; the real man for ever eludes you. Their speech gives no hint as to the character which lies behind it. Others are more open in speech, more natural in action; and you feel that ever and again the real man flashes out upon you. We like to meet people of this type, who are so natural that we can be sure that we have sounded the depths of their natures, and be fully persuaded that they will never disappoint us.

Some men are afraid to reveal themselves; some are too sensitive to ridicule to allow their real thoughts and feelings to become known; some are too accessible to reproof; and so they deliberately hide themselves from the gaze of their fellows. They may have good reason for this, but the world is the loser. We like to meet men who are just what they seem to be; men who are not afraid to say just what they think; men who are not so anxious to be approved as to be counted on the right side. It is refreshing to come across unspoiled natures which are not warped into the semblance of somebody else. "Be yourself" is not such bad advice to any young person. Even our warts and blemishes may be part of ourselves, and by refusing to hide them we may rest assured that what friends we make we shall make for good. There is in every man something attractive; it is his business to let it out, so that the world shall be the better. One real man is better than a good many imitations.—Great Thoughts.

SATURDAY, MARCH 26, 1932

EASTER.

Once again the passage of time has brought us Easter, that most hopeful of all occasions in the Christian calendar.

Usually at this season nature provides her own proof of a resurrected life for the world in awakening from the death-like sleep of the winter, and on every hand there are signs of that new life that every spring serves to remind us that what seems death is really nothing of the kind.

This year, owing to the combination of an early Easter and the late arrival of winter weather conditions, there are perhaps not so many symbols of what Easter means, but there is nevertheless something in the air that tells us that nature's annual resurrection is at hand and something that will enable us to appreciate the deep significance of the Eastertide with its sure hope of eternal life.

And in our churches to-morrow there will be gladsome Easter hymns and joyous Easter messages that should be heard by all our citizens.

A HEAVY TOLL.

The report of motor vehicle accidents in Ontario for last year, as issued by the Provincial Government, offer a convincing proof of the necessity of greater care on the part of motorists generally.

With a total of 9,241 accidents during 1931, involving death to 535 people, injuries to 6,191 more and property damage only in the case of 2,525 accidents, it should be evident that our driving technique is not all that it should be, especially in view of the statement that of the 13,882 vehicles concerned in these reported accidents, 11,968 were in good mechanical condition and no fewer than 9,905 were equipped with four-wheel brakes.

It was the human factor, obviously, that caused the majority of these mishaps, and this is further confirmed by the fact that, arising out of these accidents, there were 881 charges of driving too fast for road and traffic conditions, 1,069 motorists were accused of driving on the wrong side of the road and 663 did not have the right-of-way.

A casualty list of 525 killed and 6,191 injured in one year is an indictment of the common sense of drivers generally, but in calling attention to it The Examiner has only faint hopes that the most flagrant offenders may see in the returns for last year a personal warning.

THE MILLAR ESTATE.

Good judgment has been shown by the Ontario Government in its withdrawal of the bill by which it was proposed to set aside the will of the late Charles Millar and to obtain the half million dollar estate left by that eccentric Torontonian and devote it to the benefit of the University of Toronto.

Regardless altogether of the legal point involved, the suggestion that the provisions of the Millar will should be ignored was an affront to the public's sense of fair play.

Most people felt that while the will was a peculiar one, the requests made therein should be carried out if at all possible, and that for the Province to step in and practically confiscate the estate would be a high-handed proceeding for which the claim of serving the public interest could not be accepted as a justification.

The intimation that the Government intended to take such a step was greeted by a chorus of protest, and the administration has acted wisely in yielding to public opinion and in leaving the disposition of the Millar estate to the courts to decide.

Possibly in the long run it might be found that the greatest good might have been obtained had the money been seized by the Government, but that, however, is not the question at issue.

THE CLOSURE APPLIED.

By reason of the application of the closure, the long drawn out debate on the extension of the Federal Government's relief policy will come to an end next Tuesday night or early Wednesday morning.

The use of the "gag" occasioned no surprise among political observers; in fact, it was expected by a good many people that the Government would have resorted to that strategy earlier in the session, for it was obvious that the Opposition proposed to prolong the debate as much as possible.

There will be widespread satisfaction, it is to be imagined, that this profitless controversy is at last to be terminated, especially among those who have to look to Ottawa for assistance during troublesome days.

The Opposition's objection to the Government's methods, as stated by Mr. Mackenzie King early in the debate, was well-founded, and had the Liberal strategists been satisfied to make their position clear and then refrain from setting up a blockade that was bound to be overcome in the long run, they would have been in a much more commanding position so far as public confidence is concerned.

The result in Athabaska, a western rural riding, offers its own proof that the tactics followed by the Opposition have not impressed the electors as being sound; certainly there is nothing in the figures from the Alberta constituency to justify a claim that the party's attitude in regard to the relief measure has been vindicated.

WHERE OCEAN BREEZES BLOW.

Sitting in one's easy chair and reading of wave-tossed ocean liners late in docking or of cloud wrack and fog that have confused some daring flier seeking to link the continents by air, one thinks of the mid-Atlantic as a place of turbulence and storm. Its actual weather is very different. A study of it has been made by E. R. Armstrong, the engineer who boldly plans a chain of man-made islands, or seadromes, as he calls them, strung along the Gulf Stream route from the United States to Europe to serge as landing fields for a transatlantic airline.

Thus, for the eight proposed seadromes between New York and Brest, the average annual temperature was found to be 50 degrees Fahrenheit and the average water temperature 63½ degrees. The average of days with fog was fifteen, ranging from thirty-four at the station northeast of the Azores to none at the station nearest to Bermuda. Expressed in percentages, the foggy days were found to average 4.1 per seadrome site; the days with light airs or calms, 5.2, and the days with winds above forty-eight miles an hour, 11.2.

MAJOR WALSH AND SITTING BULL.

Any reference to "The Taming of Sitting Bull" without even mention of the name of the late Major J. M. Walsh is like an apple without a core. Yet that is what an American broadcasting station placed before the public a few nights ago in a sketch of this episode in the history of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, of which Major Walsh was for many years one of the most distinguished and fearless officers.

If writers of scenarios for motion picture productions are often accused—and with some justification—of taking liberties with the classics in preparing their versions for the screen, so, too, must the authors of historical sketches prepared for radio audiences frequently plead guilty to a mutilation of well-known facts.

In the radio presentation of "The Taming of Sitting Bull," there was not one word of reference to Major Walsh, yet it was that gentleman who formed the first contact with Sitting Bull after his arrival on Canadian soil, who rode into the Sioux camp, with an escort of only four men, actually sleeping there overnight, and who informed the chieftain, fresh from the massacre of Custer's force, that if he wished to remain north of the international boundary he must abandon his tactics and obey the laws of the land.

It was, furthermore, Major Walsh who exercised such an influence over Sitting Bull that he was finally induced, even against his oath, to confer with representatives of the hated Americans and eventually to return to the United States with his band. It is upon record that one of the requests made by Sitting Bull upon his surrender was liberty to cross the border when he wished for the purpose of seeing his great friend, Major Walsh. Before he left Canada, the Indian presented the major with his famous war bonnet, saying: "Take it, my friend, and keep it. I hope never to have use for it again. Not a feather there but marks some deed done in war while yet the Sioux were strong."

There has been preserved a despatch from a newspaper correspondent, dated at Fort Walsh, May 30, 1877, in which the writer declared that just as Walsh was leaving the camp of Sitting Bull, where he had spent the night and laid down the law to the perpetrator of the Custer massacre, White Dog, "an Assiniboine chief and a notorious villain at that" arrived with three horses which the major recognized as having been stolen. "The major ordered White Dog and his men to dismount, which they did very reluctantly. The horses were taken from them and turned over to one of the policemen, with orders to see that they were returned to their owners. Sitting Bull and his people witnessed the whole proceeding and were no doubt much impressed. White Dog's face betrayed the humiliation he felt, and as he was moving off, he muttered something about meeting again. Although White Dog was a hard case and quite as dangerous as Sitting Bull, the major called him back and made him apologize and told him that if he didn't behave, he would handcuff him and take him to the fort."

Accompanying Major Walsh at this time there were only four of the "Riders of the Plains." Sitting Bull, on the other hand, had a force at that time of 1,000 warriors, thirsting for blood after their success at the time of the ambuscade of Custer's expedition. It was Inspector Walsh's cool daring and audacity which saved the situation, just as his subsequent firmness and diplomacy brought about an agreement between Sitting Bull and the American Commission, leading to the return of the chieftain to the United States and his surrender to the Americans.

It is poor recognition of the fearlessness exhibited by Major Walsh at that time, as well as upon so many other occasions, that his name should be totally excluded from a continent-wide broadcast version of one of the most glorious exploits in the entire history of the Mounted Police. His long career as police officer, administrator and western pioneer, marked throughout by bravery, skill and capacity which must continue to be the admiration of Canadians for generations to come, deserves something better at the hands of posterity.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

"O DEATH, WHERE IS THY STING? O GRAVE, WHERE IS THY VICTORY?"

(Read I Corinthians 15:12-58.)

Again we turn to Paul for an interpretation of what we have called "the great Paradox of history." This passage is too overwhelmingly majestic, both in conception and in feeling, to be wholly grasped save by almost a lifetime of contemplation and thought. Yet, even from one reading we receive an impression too profound for verbal description. Let us then, today, give ourselves over to the force and sweep of Pauls mighty concept and passionate emotion, preparing ourselves for entrance into the experience of Easter Day.

Prayer: We thank Thee, O God, for whom Thou didst send to us, and for the victory over sin and death which cometh through Him. Help us, we pray, to be steadfast and unmovable in our faith, that we may enter with joy and assurance upon the experience which Thou holdest in store for those who love Him with steadfastness even through the hours before dawn. Amen.

EASTER DAY, MARCH 27

(Read: Mark 16:1-7.)

A sepulchre and a sunrise! The Paradox is made complete. The sepulchre was empty, save for a young man clothed in a long white garment. The heavy stone that had closed the tomb was rolled away. The sun rose upon the three women who were frightened by what they saw. It rose also upon a world that should never be the same again. The Light had overcome darkness as easily as the sun had conquested night. Life had put death to rout. Eternity had proven its mastery over time. Why, then, should those three have been afraid? Only because they had not yet learned to trust Life's unconquerable power. They still believed (against their dearest hope) that darkness was able to put out the Light. They were still living under the tyranny of time and the oppression of space. We, too, are standing at sunrise before a sepulchre; for sunrise and sepulchre are always meeting, facing each other always at the dawning of each day. We see, also, a young man clothed in long white garment; for angels are always there to tell us of a resurrection. We, too, find the heavy bomb-stone rolled away. Shall we then, also, be afraid? Afraid of what? Of the Light? Of the messenger? Of the FACT? Not so, surely, for we have recaptured the Radiance? Not in doubt, not in fear, but in faith and hope and love, we shall turn from the sepulchre to the sunrise with a song of of triumph and a prayer.

Prayer: Now, O Lord, our pilgrimage of these short weeks is ended, and we are come from the far country to our home with Thee. Thou hast led us through many paths of thought, many turnings, many discoveries—and past many places of doubt. At length Thou didst bring to us the pain and perplexity of the thought of death, and then to the sepulchre at sunrise. Here we stand before Thee, at the meeting place of dying and living, where Thou dost require of us a final choice. Shall we refuse Thy proffer of life? Shall we be afraid? Nay, Lord, we shall not refuse, nor shall we fear or hesitate. We accept Thy proffer now, and turn toward Thee in full devotion and in utter faith. Help us hereafter so to live that we may prove Thy power to redeem our lives, through Jesus Christ Thy Son, who is our Light and our hope, forever and ever by Thy Holy Spirit, world without end. Amen.

THE ROAD SUPERINTENDED

Marsaw, March 22, 1932

To the Editor of The Examiner:

A week has passed since my letter to the Warden of this county appeared in your paper.

The Examiner, in its report of Mr. Chalmers' appointment has drawn the attention of its readers to certain irregularities in the proceedings of the special meeting called for the purpose of appointing a road superintendent.

If these were correct, then my contention "that this county has not a road supperintendent" is correct. Mr. Chalmers was supposed to take up his duties on the first of April. And I feel he should not come to this county under this handicap.

Warden Montgomery is the only man who has the power to set things right, and I believe he should lose no time in doing so.

If there has been no mistake then he should explain through the medium of the press.

Many of the electors are anxious that this matter should be cleared up and the Warden owes it to the members of the council to at least explain.

Mr. Lancaster, in his speech to the Fife delegation, said the Government paid the percentage of road costs, but left the matter of spending this money to the council.

Mr. Muir told the council, "according to reports," there was only one man he would endorse. Mr. Muir is a trusted servant of the Government; but had the council named another than Mr. Chalmers, I cannot but think that the Hon. Mr. Macaulay would have endorsed the appointment.

Thanking you.

E. N. McDONALD.

DISTRICT NURSE

by Faith Baldwin

There was a parking place, high on the bluffs overlooking the Hudson, and from it they could see the lights of the city and the opposite shore.

Bartlett said, after a moment, when the throb of the engine had ceased, and night seemed to close in about them with its many stars and its dark silence, "When you had the letter Bill gave you, from me——did you wonder what I meant when I said I had something to ask you?" He waited a moment, and as she did not answer, went on, "I meant, perhaps I had something to tell you, Ellen. It's just that I love you, so much. I've loved you from the moment I first saw you, out there in the street, worried over Bill and his funny little pup——you must have known," he said, low.

Manlike, he hadn't asked anything——hadn't actually proposed. Took it perhaps for granted that she knew. Or, didn't he? She said twisting her hand together, "I——we haven't known one another very long, Frank."

"You don't mean that. Do you care for me, Ellen, at all?"

She wanted to tell him. "Yes, I love you. As much as you love me. More, perhaps, who knows?" But a thousand things crowded into her mind, halted her tongue. She said, faintly, as he leaned toward her, tried to tighten the clasp of the arm he had put about her shoulders, "Frank, don't. Please. Let me think. I——" She looked up at him in the clear starlight.

"I care more for you than anyone I know," she said tremulously, and then at his low, broken laugh, she drew away, "but—— I can't be bound," she said wildly, "there's so much to consider. I mean——my mother and——"

That sobered him.

"I know. She doesn't like me. Why?" he asked gravely.

"You don't understand her," said Ellen in defense. "She's had an unhappy time, and is, as you know, an invalid." She thought, if I explain I'll have to tell him about Coral. I can't. I haven't any right. Not now. Not yet——She's distrustful of strangers," said Ellen, low, afraid.

"But," he began in honest bewilderment.

Ellen went on. "There's my work," she said, "I want to make you understand it, Frank. It means so much to me. I was born in the neighborhood. I grew up there; watched it change. Wanted, always, from the time I was a youngster, to help, to do something constructive for the people I had always known. I——I've just begun. I have to go on with it. I couldn't give it up, not now——"

She stopped. She felt her face flush, turn hot with the scarlet color that spread to her forehead and ears. Why had she said that? He hadn't asked her to. She heard him saying dimly:

"I wouldn't want you to give it up. Not now. I know how you feel. Sometimes I hate it for you, the things you have to do, the things you have to see—misery, wretchedness, dirt, despair. But I honor you for it, darling. Only, I couldn't wait any longer, I had to tell you, I had to tell you I love you."

She said piteously, "Can't we go on, as we were, for a little while?"

"You won't keep me waiting too long?" he begged. "You've given me something to go on with; that much I'm grateful for, you don't know how grateful. But you haven't told me that you love me."

She said, after a moment, under hre breath: "Frank, I don't know."

But she did.

"All right," he told her, "When you know, I know you'll be honest enough to tell me. We won't plan anything. We'll just go on. But I'm a difficult person to discourage, Ellen, a little bit of hope goes a long way with me, you see."

She said, "Thank you, Frank——please, will you take me home now?"

"It's early," he reminded her, disappointed.

"I know, but my head aches a little and——I'd like to think," she said frankly, "I mean——"

He nodded and presently they were driving back in an almost complete silence. She said, as they neared her corner, "I'm not going to ask you in, mother has company with her, and——"

"That's all right," he told her, "I'll call you tomorrow, if I may. I have to go out of town again soon. Promised some people I'd go to them for a week-end. Wish," he said, smiling, "wish you'd come, Ellen."

She shook her lovely head.

"I couldn't," she said, "I don't know your friends."

"But you will know them," he said, eagerly. "I want you to. This particular couple, they're grand people, you'd like them a lot and they'd be crazy about you."

"I couldn't," she said again, "I couldn't leave mother. Nancy's vacation comes soon."

"Is she going away?"

"Not for more than a night or two at a time."

"What about your month's holiday?"

"I'll stay here," she said.

"Then I shall too," he declared, "and you'll dine with me every night, and——"

"No, Frank——"

It occurred to her how very little she knew about him. Where he went, what he did, who his friends might be. He led an entirely separate life of his own. She said, quickly, "Please, you mustn't stay in town because of me.' I know," said Ellen, "you must go place and do things summers, don't you?"

"Not this summer,' he told her.

INSTALMENT 10.

When Frank and Ellen reached her house, they sat there a moment and then as he made no move to get out and open the door for her, she laid her slim hand on the handle. His hand touched her shoulder and drew her back.

"Wait, justa moment. Please——don't go," he begged, low, "not yet. I——"

Jim O'Connor was at the Lenz house. He was talking to Dot Brown. Dot was on the stoop, waiting for Dan. Dan was out, working. She was worried about him. Supose something happened. Jim was saying, "I'm going next door to take my aunt home. You look lonesome, Dot."

A little laughter, a little wisecracking. A startled exclamation and Jim was leaving, going next door; Dot, her hands to her mouth was crying, furiously, running into the house——

But the two in the card heard nothing, saw no one.

"Ellen, please——"

His face was very close to hers. His arms about her, strong, steady. She gave a half sob and closed her eyes and lifted her mouth to his own, generously, sweetly. He kissed her, long, hard. He said——"You're terribly sweet——"

Jim, on the steps, saw.

He waited for no second look. He slipped into the entry like a shadow, pressing the button marked Adams with a strong thumb. His dark face was ashen, twisted, his mouth set in a straight line.

When Ellen reached the apartment, Jim was there ahead of her. He greeted her casually enough. His aunt, fat, placid, kissed her. "How grand you look," said Miss O'Connor. "Sure, you're not working so hard as Jim was saying you are, to have that fine color."

Her cheeks flushed, her eyes shone. She thought her mouth must betray her, sealed, with the crimson seal of Frank's kiss. She stammered something, fled to the bedroom.

A moment or two later Jim and his aunt left. Mrs. Adams was tired. Ellen helped her to bed immediately and her mother asked, drowsily, "Did you enjoy the play?"

"The play?" She was half in dreams. Her mother said fretfully, "What's the matter with you, Ellen? Tell me about it. Did you like it?"

"We didn't go," she answered, after a moment. "It was too hot. We went riding."

"Well, I never!" Mrs. Adams stared. She said, after a moment, "I see." It seemed to Ellen that she must see. That every one must see. Mrs. Adams said, "I don't approve of you driving al over town alone at night with that young man, Ellen. But I suppose there's no use my saying so."

"No use," admitted Ellen, laughing. But her mother knew that beneath the laughter there ran the undercurrent of absolute determination. She turned her face to the wall, wounded and afraid.

Ellen, back in the living room, was picking up, tidying, opening windows in order to postpone the moment when she would have to go to bed and think. There was a little knock on the door.

She opened it, wondering. And stood back. Jim!

He said hoarsely, "I had to see you."

"Jim, it's so late! Mother's in bed."

"If she hears, tell her I came back for something my aunt let. Ellen?" His hand shot out, seized her wrist. "Come into the hall a moment."

With a little gasp of resignation she permitted herself to be led. The hallway was dim. They were alone. He began at once furiously.

"I saw you——in the car——in that——in his arms——"

She asked quietly enough. "What busines is it of yours?"

"It's my business all right. I'll make it my business. You belong to me, do you hear?"

His dark tortured young face was thrust close to hers.

"I'm not good enough for you, am I?" he said bitterly. "Always putting me off, laughing at me. Giving me a kiss now and then as you'd give a kid a stick of candy to shut him up. But tonight——I saw you, I tell you. I'll kill that——"

She cried out furiously, trying to keep her voice down, twisting her hands that shook from anger one within the other, "You've no right, no right——"

"I have a right," he said sullen, "to look after my own."

"I am not yours!" she said.

"No? Some day you'll come to your senses," he told her. Meantime, if you don't tel Bartlett to lay off, I will.

She said, "You'll do nothing of the kind. If you dare——I'll never speak to you again."

She meant it. He knew it. He turned from anger to pleading, his dark eyes soft, his hand eloquent, his voice gentler.

"Ellen—please——forgive me, I'm out of my head with jealousy. I know I'm a fool. But——all these years——and then, the first man who comes along. You know I'm crazy about you——there's no one else——never will be. Ellen, listen. Forget me, forget my feelings. Think of this. You know me, you've always known me; since we were kids. This fellow what do you know about him? You never laid eyes on him until a few months ago. What do you know about him?" he asked again. Nothing. That he's a lawyer! That he has an office and a car! How do you know he isn't married? How do you know he isn't playing you for a fool——laughing to think how easy you are——"

"Ellen."

It was her mother calling.

"I must go," Ellen said. Please, let me go, Jim. I——"

He turned an went down the hall, his shoulders stooped, weariness and despair in every line of his figure. That's torn it, I guess, he told himself. Would he ever forget, he wondered. Ellen, close in Bartlett's arms; kissing——"

Grain Reviews

AT CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, March 26. — Many wheat traders are bracing themselves to meet a major crop scare as soon as snow has melted and growing weather starts.

Although anxiety as to moisture supply for the United States winter wheat crop as a whole has been largely relieved, complaints from poor sections of the winter wheat belt are expected to multiply, and predictions have increased that damage by recent severe temperatures will prove greater than expected. In some quarters, belief prevails that the crop outcome on about 8,000,000 acres will be extremely uncertain.

Meanwhile, a huge surplus being compared to the sword of Damocles has hung over the market. Compared with prices a week ago, wheat this morning was 1½-2¾ cents lower, corn ⅜ to 1¾ off; oats varying from 3-8 decline to a shade advance, and provisions 10 to 37 cents down. Domestic spring wheat average increase is looked for, but in many sections of the north-west, owing to crop shortage last year and a scarcity of feed grains, the supply of wheat is too small for planting requirements.

In spite of diminished receipts of corn, visible stocks continue to increase. However, the hog-corn price ratio is satisfactory. Demand for oats shows some improvement.

Provisions reflect weakness of hog values.

AT WINNIPEG

WINNIPEG, March 26 (C.P.)—Grain traders to-day look back on a week of some of the most erratic sessions seen on the Winnipeg grain market this year. Reminiscent of old-time trading days, wheat prices fluctuated widely throughout the week to close Thursday with losses of nearly two cents compared with last week. Volume of each day's transactions generally was considerable.

Started when the United States Farm Board announced that it would institute a sales campaign to reduce its holdings of wheat and cotton, forced liquidation flooded the market on almost every session, and breaks of as much as 2½ cents occurred. Support generally was forthcoming at bottom levels, however, and wheat prices confined their losses to 2 to 1⅞ cents.

Although forced down at one time to 58 cents, the May future closed Thursday at 60⅝, a net loss of two cents. July and October options each were 1⅞ cents down at 62¼ and 53¾ to 54, respectively.

Canadian exports of wheat have been disappointing this season, moving at the rate of 2,225,000 bushels a week, but shippers believe Canada will enjoy a larger share of the international trade in the next three months.

Pressure of wheat from Argentina and Australia has decreased. The former country is said to have only 105,000,000 bushels left for shipment until the harvesting of next season's crop is ready.

WALL STREET CLOSE IS WEAK

Number of Rails Together With Some Industrials Break to New Lows.

WEEK-END REVIEW.

NEW YORK, Mar. 26. (CP). The stock market weakened emphatically as trading was resumed for a two-hour week-end session to-day.

Selling was attributed to a number of factors, including continued uncertainty over taxation and balancing the national budget, the adverse report issued in Stockholm by the committee investigating the Kreuger affairs, and week-end business surveys stressing continued sluggishness of heavy industries.

Rather active liquidation swept through most groups, and a number of the rails, as well as some of the industrials broke to new lows for the bear market. Selling slackened in the last hour, but recoveries from the low levels were largely limited to small fractions. The closing tone was weak, and the two-hour turnover was around a million shares.

Although some of the February earnings statements that have just appeared were somewhat better than expected, rails were under considerable pressure. Santa Fe tumbled nearly 4 points to a new low since 1908. Reading traded for the first time since the dividend was halved, off about 4. New Haven preferred dropped 10 points to 40. Southern Pacific sold off more than 2 points and Pennsylvania 1, to new bottom prices.

American Telephone was under considerable pressure, presumably reflecting estimates of first quarter earnings under $2 a share, or less than the dividend of $3.25. According to brokerage house rumors, some of the selling came from Canada. Motors were under some pressure. Some quarters held to the theory that the defeat of the general manufacturers sales tax might result in a special tax on automobiles.

LIFER DIES IN PRISON

KINGSTON — Michael Urschel, sentenced to a life term in Portsmouth penitentiary at Kitchener last September for murder, died at that institution yesterday. Deceased had been ill since entering the penitentiary. Pneumonia was the cause of death. Urschel killed his wife at Kitchener and then tried to commit suicide by shooting himself in the mouth. He was thirty-seven years of age.

TORONTO MAN ROBBED LEFT LYING IN STREET

TORONTO, March 26 (C.P.), — Accosted by two men who dragged him into a lane at the rear of a College Street restaurant early this morning, Allan Brady, 38, was brutally assaulted and then robbed of about $12.00 he had on him. He was left unconscious and was not found until a few hours later in the morning, when a passer-by stumbled over his body which was lying in a pool of blood.

He was taken to Toronto Western Hospital where 12 stitches were found necessary to close the wounds on his head. He is also believed to be suffering from internal injuries. While his injuries are serious his condition is not considered critical.

Although police have only been able to scrape up meagre details on the assault, two suspects have already been taken into custody, and will be held until Brady has recovered sufficiently to give an account of the assault.

ADOLF HITLER'S SUIT SETTLED OUT OF COURT

LEPISIC, Germany, Mar. 26.—(A.P.)—The suit of Adolf Hitler against Karl Severing, Prussian Minister of the Interior, growing out of recent raids on meeting places of Hitler's National Socialist party was settled out of court today.

Under the terms of the settlement the Prussian Government agreed to return the records and documents seized in the Nazi headquarters and Hitler withdrew his complaint.

The Prussian ministry already has had an opportunity to make photostatic copies of the documents, however, so that the restitution of the records had little practical significance.

St. Mary's Church, Finchley, England, with a capacity of 525 and 1,026 communicants last Easter, is to be enlarged at once.

TRADE OUTLOOK IN DOMINION IS FAVORABLE

Strengthened Financial Position Seen—Foreign Trade Lower.

INDUSTRY IMPROVING

OTTAWA, March 26. — The business outlook in Canada is favorable. Continuation of the seasonal upturn in manufacturing, and moderate gains in domestic merchandising, are distinct factors in the Dominion's commercial improvement.

The recent betterment in the exchange situation has strengthened the country's financial position. Canadian exchange has advanced in New York to a point where the discount on Canadian funds is about 10 per cent., as compared with the maximum of almost 20 per cent in December of last year.

Industry is Improving.

During this period Canadian investment brokers and banks successfully placed with investors a total of more than $60,000,000 of new bond issues of Canadian provinces and municipalities, all of which are selling at or above the issue prices to the public.

Industrial conditions are gradually improving. Larger pay rolls, and increasing activity are noted in automobile plants, following the business booked at the well-attended automobile exhibitions that have been held in most of the important cities.

Shoe manufacturers indicate a fair number of orders for spring delivery, and most of the factories are moderately well employed. Silk and rayon industries are working at nearly capacity. The textile trade is doing well.

One large manufacturer of industrial chemicals reports that orders on hand are much greater than they were a year ago. Heavy chemicals continue to move well. The aeronautical market is moderately active. Mineral developments in the northern part of the Prairie Provinces are showing progress.

Retail Sales Improve.

With the majority of retail stores featuring spring merchandise shoppers were more numerous last week and the volume of sales showed an improvement over the previous week. Favorable weather in some provinces has helped to swell the distributive totals.

A better tone is evident in business circles in the Prairie provinces, as a result of improved wheat prices. Another bullish factor is the marked reduction in the usual wheat reserves of various European countries. There was an increase last week in the figures of export clearances of Canadian wheat from all ports.

Railway traffic continues to gain in volume. The month of February registered an advance over January of 7362 loaded cars.

The Canadian Pacific Railway reports shipments over its western lines in February of 7,031,000 bushels of grains. During the like month last year marketings totaled 5,851,000 bushels.

Savings deposits held by the 10 Canadian chartered banks advanced more than $8,000,000 in the month to $1,368,378,429. This figure is about $60,000,000 less than that for January, 1931.

Foreign Trade Lower.

Figures on external trade for the year ended January 31 last show heavy declines in both exports and imports. The total imports amounted to $611,844,575, a decrease of $362,340,907, while the exports amounted to $610,737,467, a decrease of $264,923,222.

Important features of the foreign trade situation for the last year are that while imports from the United States declined nearly $351,000,000 and exports by $132,186,000, an increase of more than $4,000,00 is shown in sales to France, and of $2,500,000 in exports to the Netherlands. Imports from the United Kingdom amounted to $107,715,962, a decline of $48,963,551, while exports to the United Kingdom were $174,338,588, a decrease of $56,792,613. Sales to Australia were $4,875,000, as compared with $8,527,000, and imports from Australia amounted to $6,166,000, as compared with $4,537,000, a considerable increase.

The offering of $4,000,000 Province of Saskatchewan 6 per cent. sinking fund 20-year debenture due March 15, 1952, to yield 6½ per cent., follows closely on the sale of Winnipeg's 6's offered to yield 6.35 per cent. The Winnipeg bonds were readily over-subscribed.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports the production of copper in Canada during December at 23,089,126 pounds as compared with 23,614,405 pounds in November, and 21,914,043 pounds in December, 1930.

TRAIN WRECK TRUCK DRIVER ESCAPES ALIVE

GALT, Mar. 26.—(C.P.)—Wilbert Brethauer, of this city, had a miraculous escaped from death today when the truck he was driving was reduced to a pile of wreckage by a C.N.R. passenger train. Brethauer was driving a gravel truck when he ran out of gas and backed down a hill on to the railway tracks as the train was coming along. He was hurled from the machine by the impact, but examination at the local hospital revealed he suffered only from bruises to the arms and head.

Police Investigating Farm Hand's Death

Police are investigating the death of Leo Bergeron, 27-year-old farm hand, who is supposed to have been trampled to death by a team of horses on the farm of William J. Laroque (2), near Rockland, Ont. It reported that Provincial Officer Dent (4) has taken possession of a double indemnity life insurance policy held on Bergeron's life with Laroque as beneficiary. A neighbor is shown holding one of the team of alleged killers in (1), and the barn where Bergeron's mutilated body was found is shown in (3).

DECLINE IN COMMODITY PRICES OFFSETS EVIDENCE OF REVIVING CONFIDENCE IN EUROPE MARKETS

C. P. R. Shows Decline While Ford of Canada "A" Advances 1-4 Point.

REVIEW OF WEEK.

Price Changes in Oil Shares Unimportant—Base Metals Higher.

(By Thomas C. Thompson)

TORONTO, Mar. 26.—(CP)— No new light was shed on Canadian stock exchanges during the past week and prices moved moderately lower under listless trading.

A general decline in commodity prices and further dividend reductions and omissions largely offset any encouragement derived from evidences of reviving confidence in Europe with the result that traders in Canada as well as at New York adopted a hesitant attitude and left stocks to back and fill on small daily turnovers.

What perhaps is holding the New York market back more than anything else at the present time is the complicated situation in Washington with respect to bringing about a balanced budget. Naturally the many plans for producing sufficient revenue to meet expenditures some of which are very radical, are not only preventing business improvement but are causing investors to hold aloof, notwithstanding that many securities are well worth buying at the great discounts at which they are at present quoted.

Follow Wall Street.

Security prices at Toronto followed largely in the wake of commodities and share movements at New York. Commodity prices generally were lower during the week ending March 21. Declines were shown by wheat, silver, cotton, and refined sugar.

Pivotal shares on the Toronto Stock Exchange showed losses ranging from a fraction to nearly three points when compared to closing figures on last Friday. Brazilian Traction held fairly steady during the past week despite the monthly report of the company for February which showed income before depreciation and amortization amounting to $1,348,781 as compared to $1,355,801 in January. The decline in Brazilian exchange, according to the management, accounts largely for the decrease in net, before depreciation, of $2,690,833 for the first two months from the $3,844,468 figure of the corresponding period in 1931.

After opening the week at 12⅝, the issue reacted moderately when the report was issued, but firmed during the latter part of the week to close ½ point lower at 12⅝.

C.P.R. and Ford of Canada "A" moved in divergent trends, the former declining 1 point to 15⅝, and the latter advancing ¾ point to 18½. Strength in Ford was largely attributed to the eight model which has been placed on the market. Farm implement shares ruled generally steady under quiet trading throughout the entire week. Massey Harris was ¼ point lower to 3½ while Cockshutt Plow remained unchanged at last week's closing figure of 5. All three issues of Walkers moved fractionally lower while other distillery issues shared in the downward move of Walkers with the exception of Seagram's Corporation which advance ¼ point to 3¾. Canada was down ⅛ point to 13½, while Canada Bud held steady at 8¼.

Oil Section Unchanged.

Oil shares failed to elicit any demand and price changes in these issues were unimportant.

On the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange, trading was quiet during the week. Prices for leading base metal and gold shares moved moderately higher although nowhere were the gains of any significance. Noranda Mines scored the widest advance of the list, rising 60 cents to $17.85, but International Nickel failed to overcome light selling and closed the week 15 points lower at $8.90.

All of the higher priced gold stocks closed this week with advances. Dome Mines was 15 points higher to $11.45 while a 50 point advance was recorded by Lake Shore.

Many Pay Tribute To Crossing Victim

BELLIEVILLE, Mar. 26.—Funerals of the four victims of the recent level crossing fatality near this city—Everett Mastin, 42, Miles Cummings, 36, Dorothy Darlington, 17, and Renotta Storr, 18—were held in the United Church at Point Anne, on Good Friday afternoon.

The roads leading to the little village were lined with cars while the small church was unable to accommodate all who wished to enter. Flags were at half mast of public buildings as well as on boats in the harbor. Rev. W. F. Keough, Rev. L. M. Sharpe, Rev. George M. Marshall and Rev. J. C. Blow conducted the services at the conclusion of which Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar" was recited.

Floral tributes in profusion marked the public esteem and sorrow.

MYSTERY OF MISSING MAN SOLVED AT LAST

Wandered Strangely After Leaving Car and Clothes on Brighton Beach

London.—A disappearance mystery which created widespread interest has just been solved in a village near Chipping Norton, Oxfordshire.

It is the story of Noel Austin Harvey, whose home is at Beddington, near Croydon. His motor car was found abandoned in November, 1930, at Brighton, and some of his clothes were lying on the beach.

An account of his adventures has been pieced together by his relatives, who are nursing him back to health.

His aunt, Mrs. Tucker, says:

"From what he has been able to tell us, he wandered away from the beach without having his swim. His memory had gone, and he did not realise his surroundings.

"He roamed the countryside, until he was found lying in the roadway in a state of collapse and was taken to a hospital.

"He was ill for some months and no one connected him with the man reported missing and feared drowned. Later he recovered sufficiently to realise his position and then wrote to me. He afterwards came here to recuperate."

GOOD FRIDAY PASSES QUIETLY

No Accidents Were Reported to the Police Over Holiday.

ONLY ONE ARREST.

Good Friday passed as quietly as a Sunday in Peterborough. The deep significance of the day was widely observed, a large percentage of the citizens attending at least one church service.

Icy sidewalks made treacherous footing until late in the morning, when the temperature warmed quickly and the ice melted. Rain began to patter early in the evening, the theaters not getting as large audiences as expected.

It was another slow day for the police. No accidents, pedestrian or motor, were reported despite the icy pavements. One man in the south end did get drunk last night and beat his wife. The woman showed her bruises to police and the husband spent the remainder of the night in the cells. He was released this morning because under the L. C. A. a man can still get drunk in his own home. His wife did not prefer charges of assault against him, and after some stiff advice from Chief Newhall he left the station in company with her.

It is more than a month since there has been any crime in the city such as burglary, theft or robbery. The number of liquor cases is also far below average.

All Saints' Choir Presents Beautiful Easter Cantata.

OUTSTANDING WORK.

Before a large congregation in All Saints' Church last evening the choir presented that powerful cantata, the work of Harold Moore, "The Darkest Hour." The great cantata as rendered by the large choir was filled with the pathos and devotion of the crucifixion.

Each member of the choir had spent long hours in the preparaiton of the parts and the rendition was all but perfect. One of the outstanding choruses was "Surely He hath borne our grief." The chorus [illegible] duet obligato, "O Saviour of the World," was also a gem. The male chorus of the Disciples had smooth tone, quality and balance. The quartette by the junior members of the choir also was fine in merit, and all show rich promise.

Accompanists were Mrs. W. A. Logan at the organ and Mrs. Agnes Logan Greene on the Piano. George E. Chandler, choirmaster, conducted the cantata and the impressive work of the choir was mainly due to his leadership.

Rev. J. Douglas Paterson, rector of the church, read the Scriptural reading.

In the cantata the part of Jesus was sung by T. H. Boddy, and that of the narrator by Mrs. Stanley Willis. The obligato and solo "God so loved the World," was sung by Miss Edna Young. F. C. Roberts sang the part of Pilate, and was heard in duet with Miss Edna Young. J. Gibson sang the part of the High Priest, and G. E. Chandler sang the solo in the epilogue, which concluded the work.

Administration of insurance by an Independent Board is also asked. The scheme provides that the state, and not private companies, shall supervise and invest the insurance funds.

Other provisions are establishment of a state system of employment exchanges, to work with the Unemployment Insurance Board, and protection of the worker against being forced to become a strike breaker, or to work at occupations for which he is not fitted, or at places away from his residence.

Go window-shopping in your easy chair

Relax for a moment and turn the pages of your newspaper. Let the advertisements help you to make your shopping plans. Do you need a dress, or a coat, or a hat? Perhaps a new blanket for a guest-room, some curtain material, or even a few new pots and pans for the kitchen? Of course, there are many things you want and need . . . but you may be letting many of them wait until you see in a store or a window exactly what you have in mind, at an especially alluring price.

Those are the very things you will find in advertisements. Attractive articles, new and improved ones, prices that make quick action an economy. Think how many steps it can save you to hunt out these things, and find them, in comfort at home! If a special opportunity is offered, you'll know about it in time. When new articles are announced, you can have them before they are the least bit out of date. And you can save hours of waiting and asking, miles of steps—and money too!

These are but a few of the ways the advertisements in your newspapers can serve you. If you read them every day, you are sure to grow wise in the ways of purchasing . . . and saving.

ENGLAND SUNNY FOR EASTERTIDE

Thousands of Hikers Plan Trip Across Country—Exodus From London.

QUIET AT COURT.

By Thomas T. Champion C. P. Staff Writer

LONDON, March 26.—Considerable sunny periods with a temperature above normal was promised for Eastertide in England.

The Prince of Wales is spending the holiday at his small place at Sunningdale, while the Duke and Duchess of York remain at their London home. The court is expected to move to Windsor a week from today.

That the calendar causes Easter to fall so early is not entirely welcome, but the exodus from London today was as great as ever with all trains crowded. Eastertide also marks the opening of the seasonal motorcoach and omnibus services to the country.

The railway companies are making strenuous endeavors to compete and one of their novelties is a mystery excursion for walking enthusiasts. Parties of walkers were entrained at Paddington and King's Cross for the country but not even the locomotive driver knew the actual destination until a few minutes before starting.

Exception to Rule

The resolve of the King and Queen to remain at Buckingham Palace over Easter is an exception to invariable practice for the court to be at Windsor at this season. The first time the custom was broken was two years ago when the King was recovering from his illness at Bognor Regis.

The House of Commons rose for the Easter recess Thursday reassembling on April 5. The budget will be brought down April 19.

Thanks to the fine weather hikers will be abroad in thousands all over England during the holidays. Several parties have determined to rediscover the old pilgrim's road to Canterbury Some of it has for centuries formed part of the present day highway, transformed into a broad avenue of tarmac for the benefit of the motorist. There are stretches of the old pilgrims way however apart from the main road, traceable only through bridle paths and lines of ancient, dignified trees.

Six thousand members of the camping club of Britain and Ireland will be out-of-doors. The club's new permanent grounds at Horsley, Surrey, are being opened for the first time.

POWER ADDRESS TO ENGINEERS

T. R. Millar, Toronto, Discusses Electrical Layout of Power Houses.

A HYDRO EXPERT

Improvement in power house design and construction w.. the subject of an illustrated address by T. R. Millar, generating engineer of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, at Thursday night's meeting of the Peterborough Branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada.

Discussing the simplification that has been accomplished in various phases of construction and equipment, Mr. Millar cited the economy that has been effected in circuit interrupting devices.

In the early days of electrical development, 2300 volts were considered an extremely high voltage. The circuit interrupting device consisted of a single pole disconnecting switch, the opening of which was attended to with all due ceremony. The attendant opened the switch with one hand and with the other "swatted" the resulting arc out with a piece of canvas belting. The method of interrupting an arc has grown from that crude contraption to the 220,000 volt oil switches of the present day. These oil switches are three pole type, standing about 24 feet high, and each of the three tanks about nine feet in diameter. They will break an arc of 2,500,000 Kvr in about 2-10 of a second. They require 13,500 gallons of oil.

The control of plants is another good example of the advance made in design. In the last few years there has been introduced a system called remote control whereby the operating functions are performed by the operator from a compact main control board, using miniature switches and operating instruments, through a low voltage control circuit of 24 to 48 volts to the subcontrol panels located adjacent to the main apparatus, which they protect and control. Only such instruments that are necessary for the proper handling of the main apparatus are located on the main control board, while the rest of the instruments, relays and graphic meters, are located on the subcontrol boards. In a recently designed plant of 280,000 h.p., capacity, the control room is 40 feet by 18 feet floor area, with a main control board, including operating instruments, about 12 feet long.

Mr. Millar contrasted this this economy with the control room of a plant of about 200,000 h.p. capacity, built in 1906, which occupies a floor space of 100 feet by 100 feet, with the control board 64 feet long.

Other topics dealt with by Mr. Millar included graphic details of control room equipment installed at the Chats Falls development and other aspects illustrating a general saving in construction costs, an analysis of the capital electrical costs as between superstructure, generators, switching and other equipment, outdoor transformers, and other ideas that have come into use in hydro-electric stations.

R. C. Flitton presided as chairman, and a vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Millar for his address to the Institute.

ST. JOHN'S CHOIR GIVE CANTATA

"Olivet to Calvary" is Well Presented in St. John's Anglican Church.

SOLOISTS SPLENDID.

"Olivet to Calvary," a Good Friday cantata which pictures the Passion Week drama, from the triumphal entry into Jerusalem, when "the children of the Hebrews with palms before Him went," to the tragedy of Golgotha, was presented very beautifully last night in St. John's Church by the choir, led and directed by F. G. Mann, L.Mus., organist and choirmaster.

The choir excelled itself in the beauty of its choral numbers. They were outstandingly good, from the brighter-toned and triumphal opening to the final beautiful stanzas of "Droop, Sacred Head," with the insistent beat of the organ behind those long-sustained finales, majestic and slow.

This cantata by J. H. Maunder is a difficult and exacting composition, particularly so in some of the solos which call for meticulous attention to time and phrasing.

The soloists were in splendid voice and rendered their numbers with expressive reverence, the solos, as well as the choral music, investing the sacred drama with reverent dignity and sublime force.

Solos were taken by J. Trotter, H. Ridgeley, S. Roberts, J. Branson, L. Dyer and D. G. Melton, with boy sopranos in Victor Coleman and Gerald Perks.

Memorable portions were Mr. Ridgeley's recitative; Victor Coleman's singing of "Another Temple Waits Thee, Lord Divine," a beautiful phrase which was reiterated later by the chorus, with a fine diminuendo to "The Temple of My Heart, O Make It Thine"; Mr. Trotter's rendition of "The Mount of Olives" opening solo, "Not of This World the Kingdom of Our Lord," in which the chorus joined in, had some excellently sustained music; Mr. Roberts' singing of the "Come Unto Him" section; the two brief bits by Mr. Branson and Mr. Dyer, Gerald Perks' sweet clear treble in the short solo, "Droop, Sacred Head," and the very fine work of D. G. Melton in his two outstanding solos, "A New Commandment" and the "Calvary" music, the latter notable with its majestic and noble finale to the entire performance.

The chorus did some difficult work in the temple scene, the scene from the Mount of Olives and the portion that depicts the appearance of Christ before Pilate, which leads up to that last dramatic and beautifully-sung Calvary chapter. Against the deeper voices of the men, sonorous and forceful, rang out the silvery clear treble of the boy sopranos in a fine and memorable effect.

A quartette sang an unaccompanied section, "O Thou Whose Sweet Compassion," comprising two boy singers, Victor Coleman and Roy Pitchford, and two adults, A. J. Hayter and E. R. Quilter.

During the offertory, the same singers gave very melodiously the "Shepherd of Souls" quartette from "The Sign of the Cross."

The congregation joined in interludes, in the singing of "Just as I Am" and "Thy Will Be Done."

The service opened with the reciting of the Creed and the Lord's Prayer by Archdeacon Blagrave, who also pronounced the benediction at the close.

The Processional was an appropriate Lenten composition and the Recessional hymn was "All for Jesus."

SLUMP STRIKES AT GRAND OPERA

Capital and Most of Metropolitan Company Reserves Wiped Out.

STEPS UNDECIDED.

NEW YORK, Mar. 26.—A torrent of red ink may sweep grand opera from its faded plush moorings.

Tall hat society sighed to-day to read an announcement that the Metropolitan Opera Company for almost half a century the background for some of the world's most famous singers and New York's most old families, has suffered large losses.

Reduced receipts have practically wiped out its $550,000 capital and most of its reserve, leaving it without enough funds to assure another season, the announcement said. Newspapers saw in the statement an opening for an attempt to make the man in the street opera conscious.

For generations the old families of the metropolis have given of their wealth to subsidize the opera enterprise.

An earnest effort will be made to secure such co-operation on the part of all concerned in the continuation of opera work in working out a plan for reduction of expenses and other measures as will be necessary to make it possible to present metropolitan opera in New York next winter, his announcement said.

KINSMEN HEAR FINE ADDRESS

with its one program, must inspire us individuality, as well as collectively, to give thought to our future in Kinship."

"Our early days," the message continued, "with their problems of organization, are now well behind us. I feel that we can now regard our association and our club as a highly organized body of men—young men—ready, eager and willing to fill our place in our respective communities."

In the course of his address, Mr. Duffus touched upon the need of Canada for admitting only the best type of immigrants who could readily adapt themselves to the standard of life as it existed here, yet at the same time he reminded his hearers, Canada must also be prepared to absorb something from her immigrants. The infusion of new stock of the right character was an important factor in Canada's future, he believed.

The speaker dealt fully with the relation of a good citizen to his neighbor and business associate. No man lived unto himself alone, he said. Elaborating his point he said that a man in his own home was the centre of the family life; the family was the centre of the city life; the city the centre of the county; the county of the province or state and so on. Each man as a citizen in that sense was therefore a citizen of the world—a cosmopolitan. The whole was bound together by a common need; by-laws and public opinion. Trade was another tie. "Business is never good business until it is good for all concerned," he said.

Mr. Duffus also stressed the important part which a Board of Trade and other kindred organizations played in the life of a community. They were he said the educators of traders for citizenship.

Another powerful and important item in the making of citizens, he contended was the press, the moulder of public opinion. He was of the strong belief there should be a firmer alliance between trade and the press. In this connection he paid high tribute to the small city Canadian newspapers. They were he said "leaders of the world in their allegiance to community and citizenship building."

As with individuals so with countries. No country could live to itself alone, said Mr. Duffus in outlining the relation of Canada to the other countries of the world. "Canada has a noble part to play in the destiny of nations. She can serve mankind best in proportion to the service which her citizens render unto her."

A report of the progress of rehearsals for the annual play, "The Rivals" by Richard Sheridan, and which is to be produced in the Collegiate Auditorium on the evening of April 8, was tendered by Adrian Macdonald, the director. Expectations are that it is to prove of more success than the previous effort of the club, which was well received by the local public.

Tells Dyspeptics What to Eat

Strict Diets Often Unnecessary

It is a well known fact that some foods have a strong tendency to produce excessive stomach acidity and consequent indigestion. By omitting from daily meals those foods that experience proves do not agree and limiting the diet to certain tasteless unappetizing foods, stomach troubles may in many instances be slowly overcome. Nine times in ten, however, indigestion, gas, etc., are due to excessive acidity and the premature souring of food in the stomach Keep the stomach clean and sweet by freeing it of this extra acid and then sufferers can eat the foods they like best and as much as they want in reason and have no stomach trouble at all. Thousands of people do this daily by merely taking after every meal a little Bisurated Magnesia, which can be had at any good drug store in either powder or tablet form. Bisurated Magnesia instantly neutralizes stomach acids, stops food fermentation and meals digest as naturally and painlessly as in the stomach of a healthy child. Stomach comfort means a lot and most folks like good things to eat. Enjoy them both by making Bisurated Magnesia your daily after-eating protection.

SHANTY TEA

Managers of Knox Presbyterian Church Stage Treat for Havelock Citizens.

(Examiner Correspondence)

HAVELOCK, Mar. 26.—The manager of Knox Presbyterian church held a somewhat novel entertainment in the church dining room on Thursday evening, when they themselves prepared and served a Shanty tea. The hall was beautifully decorated with everygreens and the tables spread with snowy white paper covers. Baked beans, scalloped potatoes, hot rolls and butter, pie, cake and salads were served by the men themselves, each one wearing apron and hustling around in true waiters' style. While the men did practically all the work, some of the fancy dishes were prepared by the ladies.

However the ladies had nothing to do with the dishwashing, and not one, even the most particular among them, could find fault with the way that was done. About one hundred people were served, and all voted the shanty tea a most delightful and successful event. The crowd was not so large as might have been, owing to the prevalence of a mild form of flu, and common cold in this district. Those who were in charge of the proceedings were as follows: Messrs Robert Scott, James Scott, Harold Mathison, Percy Yuill, James Ketchen, Russel Green, Fred Platt, Albert Wilson, Clifford Jamieson, Otto Patterson.

Knox Church Young Women's Association held their regular meeting at the home of Miss Reta Buchanan on Monday evening, Mar. 21 when twenty members were present. This was the meeting at which the girls were expected to work on their quilt blocks, and quite a number of them had brought their work with them. Some however, forgot to bring the work, and there was not as much accomplished as might have been. However they had a very enjoyable social time.

Ancient Ceremony

In Florence the six centuries old ceremony of the "explosion of the sacred cart' was held again.

While thousands thronged the square before the cathedral, four white oxen, with gilded horns and hoofs, carried into the square a cart decorated with flags and flowers and heavily loaded with fireworks.

From the car a wire was run through the cathedral doorway to the high altar. At that point an artificial pigeon carrying a pyrotechnic rocket was slid on the wire.

A priest lighted the rocket before a huge congregation. The pigeon soared out over the heads of the crowd to the cart, and set off the fireworks. The crowd in the square cheered wildly for this was a good sign, taken as forecasting excellent harvests.

Mrs. R. G. Cottrell Is Appointed Delegate

The regular March meeting of the 57th Regiment Chapter was held in the Armouries on Thursday afternoon with a large attendance. The Regent, Mrs. T. W. H. Mrs. Sharp, for the sick and visiting committee reported thirty visits made. Mrs. Cottrell, for the flower committee reported a number of bouquets sent during the month.

Mrs. W. Gordon Hall for the Relief committee reported help given to needy families. The Regent expressed the deep regret of the Chapter at the passing of the late Mrs. Clegg who was the first regent of the 57th Chapter and a life member.

Mrs. D. Melton, who has been living at Oakville for some time was welcomed back to the Chapter and Mrs. W. Ashbury receiv.. into membership. TWO COUNTIES IN AGREEMENT er municipalities' figures, the Counties Council at their June session will have to revise completely the figures in their equalization by-law.

"The net result of the whole matter is that Cobourg is entitled to a rebate of $2,860 for 1931 overpayment, and has received a reduction for the future from 9.50 to 8.41 per cent. of the counties' tax levy. On the basis of counties' expenditures in 1931, this is worth approximately $4,000 per annum, or a reduction on last year's basis from approximately $34,000 to $30,000. If the counties can cut their expenses Cobourg's saving would be proportionately more. For this year only Cobourg taxpayers will get the benefit of a reduction of approximately $6,860 and $4,000 per annum thereafter.

"I have previously furnished all members of Council with a copy of Mr. Cummings' report. It was on the basis of this report that this settlement has been effected. As a matter of good faith with the Cobourg ratepayers who voted for the separation bylaw last year and the unanimous efforts of the 1931 and 1932 Councils, it is important to note that the separation features of the bill were withdrawn as no headway could be made in view of the Government's opposition to the same. The 1931 and 1932 Councils have accordingly done all within their power to carry out the mandate given them with the results, as stated, in lieu of separation. It may not be all that was expected or hoped for, but has resulted in very tangible assistance to the Cobourg taxpayer. This has been achieved without adding one dollar to the equalized assessment of any rural municipality, and from the results obtained and the painstaking and impartial report made by Mr. H. L. Cummings of the Attorney-Generals' department the ratepayers generally, both in town and countryside, can now appreciate the reasons for Cobourg's hard fought battle for equitable relief from heavily increased taxation.

"The unanimous attitude of the 1931 and 1932 Councils, together with the mass of details prepared by the town clerk and treasurer, has been of the most material assistance in getting the town's case before the proper authorities to enable a decision favorable to the town to be made. In its final stages the resolutions passed by both the Town and Counties Council inviting Mr. Cummings to give an impartial report on the difficulties between the respective parties to the dispute, and the assistance of the loal member in having the necessary appointments made in Toronto for both parties, facilitated the agreement finally arrived at.

"At the final conference in Toronto attended by Warden Hartt, ex-Warden Hooten, Counties Treasurer E. L. MacNachtan and F. D. Boggs, K.C., counties solicitor, the attitude of these gentlemen, once the facts were disclosed by Mr. Cummings' report, evidenced goodwill and a desire to rectify the errors disclosed. The town of Cobourg accordingly can and doubtless will reciprocate this attitude, and having proved the merits of their case, can now co-operate with the counties and ask the co-operation of the counties in further reducing expenditures and in promoting an era of better understanding and mutual good-will."

TILT ON HYDRO

enquiry than that proposed to be held by the Royal Commission appointed recently. The commission is to investigte the payment of $50,000 to John Aird, Jr., by the Hydro, and the purchase of the Dominion Power and Tranmission Company, Hamilton by the Hydro for $22,000,000. Liberal and Progressive alike agreed the Royal Commission should look into the payment of $125,000 to Mr. Aird by the Beauharnois Company. They suggested that former Premier G. Howard Ferguson should be asked to appear before the commission, and that the investigating be thrown wide open.

To this, Premier Henry reiterated his belief that everything was all right with Hydro. If the Royal Commissioner decided the inquiry should be carried further, the government would grant the necessary powers.

Free-For-All.

There was a general free-for-all as the session drew to a close. Hon. J. R. Cooke, Hydro chairman, Dr. George A. McQuibban, Liberal whip, and the three leaders all jumped into the fray. Dr. McQuibban's charges that Hydro was purchasing power when it was exporting a surplus at Niagara Falls were denied by Mr. Cooke and Premier Henry, and supported by W. E. N. Sinclair, Liberal leader, and H. C. Nixon, head of the Progressive party.

Mr. Nixon and the Prime Minister battled fiercely. The former had stated there was no doubt there had been discussion as to who, Hydro or Sweezey (R. O. Sweezey of Beauharnois) should take care of John Aird.

My honorable friend can't get away with such a remark here. He must offer proof or withdraw this statement, said the Premier. But the incident ended when Hon. T. A. Kidd, Speaker of the House, expressed the opinion Mr. Nixon's argument was close to a matter that was now sub judice.

There had been a smart set-to earlier in the day. The government's Fuel Tax Bill had not been printed and distributed. When it came up for second reading, Mr. Sinclair asked for a ruling on the matter in view of the House rule that such bills could not receive second reading until printed. The Speaker ruled that inasmuch as the measure had been given first reading with the consent of the House, it should go through. The Liberal Leader appealed, and the matter was put to a vote. The appeal was defeated.

Government Wins On All

There were four divisions in all, on the Gas Tax, Corporations Tax, Amusement Tax and Mr. Sinclair's motion. In each case the Government was victorious by a wide majority.

Barring its final hours, the session had been devoid of really outstanding legislation. Perhaps the most important bill, outside of the tax proposals, was that which provided the Ontario Muncipal Board could step in and control municipalities which were in financial difficulties. Under the bill, the municipalities could ask for this control and the board would then set up an advisory council of five members with exceedingly wide powers. They would approve the issue of debentures and validate them, approve local improvements, declare a moratorium of one year on the municipalities' debts, and generally have complete charge.

Then the bill to escheat the estate of the late Charles Millar created some discussion. Mr. Millar, who died in 1926, had bequeathed the bulk of his estate of $500,000 to the woman giving birth to the largest number of children in 10 years. The government sought to divert the money to the University of Toronto. After argument, the Government withdrew the measure.

Sir William Mulock, Chief Justice of the Province, will prorogue the House on Tuesday. Since the retirement of Hon. W. D. Ross, Lieutenant Governor, Sir William has been acting as Administrator.

How to Escape FLU and Grippe

1 Avoid so far as possible the places where germs are most likely to be spread; overcrowded cars and public meeting places; overheated, stuffy rooms.

2 Be careful of close contact with others and beware of all coughers and sneezers; breathe through the nose, get fresh air, but avoid drafts or chilling.

3 Get lots of rest. Drink plenty of water. Keep the bowels open. Take extra precaution to keep in good physical condition, so your system will have normal resistance against germs.

4 Try, particularly, to avoid catching cold. Colds lower your resistance to disease germs. At the first sign of any cold, take some Aspirin; remain indoors if possible until your cold is gone. And if you have a sore throat, dissolve three Aspirin tablets in a quarter glassful of water and gargle; this relieves the soreness, and usually reduces the inflammation.

5 If you have any reason to suspect even a touch of flu, call your doctor at once.

BARRED ROCK COCK

PREPARING FOR THE 1932 BABY CHICKS.

By Walter Lloyd, Peterboro, Ont.

Here we are once more, with spring literally rushing towards us, and making us hustle around.

To begin with, we have, nearly all of us, placed our orders for young chicks with reliable breeders. This is absolutely the most important part of all, to be certain that you are getting well-bred, healthy stock. This will start you right.

Our first concern is to prepare the dwelling-place for our coming brood. This is a matter that will take very careful planning for some days before their arrival. We must have the brooder prepared and the heating apparatus in perfect working order, so that we can depend upon it not varying. When we are assured that the stove is working accurately, we may let it out until twenty-four hours before the chicks are due to arrive. Then it must be lighted and everything about the little home must be in place, in order that everything may be of a uniform temperature when the chicks arrive. The temperature of the house should read from ninety to ninety-five degrees at the edge of the brooder.

Immediately around the stove we must arrange a circle of sand about three or four feet in diameter; around the sand place a nice, clean litter of cut clover, or chaff may be used as a substitute. An earthenware fountain, and, if necessary, two, will be found to be the most satisfactory water supply. Always keep a good supply of fresh water easily accessible and preferably with the chill taken off before giving it to the chicks. In some convenient corner we will have a dish of finely crushed charcoal, another with grit, and then place low mash dishes filled with a good dependable starting mash. It will be advisable to have a perforated guard over each dish in order that the chicks may help themselves without waste.

There is one item in the diet of the young chicks which must not be overlooked if we wish to raise healthy chicks, and that is the matter of green feed. This can readily be handled by the use of sprouted grain or a few leaves of lettuce and even finely chopped onion for a change will be found to be relished. Feeding is quite an art and experienced poultry men make a careful study of it, and by so doing obtain good results.

NEW EXECUTIVE

(Examiner Correspondence.)

QUEENSBORO, March 26. —At a meeting of the Young People of Belleville Presbytery held at Cannifton, a new executive was appointed, composed of the following members: President, Rev. W. G. Fletcher, Amelíasburg; Vice-President, C. Bailey, Harold; Secretary and Treasurer, Miss Mae Reynolds, Cannifton; Christian Fellowship, Miss Helen Babcock, Wilton; Missionary, Elmer Dixon, Belleville; Christian Citizenship, Arthur Wilson, West Huntington; Social and Recreational, Rev. Mansel Smith, Northport.

It was decided to divide the Presbytery for the working out of its program., and for the sake of convenience into four sections, and to have sectional committees in each to take charge of the activities in their respective areas. The following sectional committees were appointed: for Lennox and Addington, convenor, Miss Helen Babcock, Wilton and Bowerman, Odessa, Carman Hudgins, Selby and Robert Hird, Newburgh. The evening session was closed by an address by Dr. Fletcher of Odessa. This was very dramatic and imaginative and presented a strong urge to the young people to measure up to the great task that was their's. Dr. Fletcher pointed out that the young people must accept the work of leading the religious forces as no one else could possibly perform that task.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE REVIEWS

TORONTO PRODUCE

TORONTO, Mar. 26.—At the end of this week prices for butter on the local market were about the same as at the end of last week, though there was slightly easier tone apparent. However, trade was some better on Thursday than on previous days, and there were no large movements of supplies at levels below current quotations of Monday. Local brokers were not offering any butter as discount rates and buyers in the market had to deal at steady terms. Regraded grass quality was quoted at 27½c to 28c and fresh makes at 27c to 27½c for No. 1 and 26c to 26½c for No. 2.

Cream Higher

Cream prices made a nice jump this week. Local buyers increased their offerings 2c per pound fat on Tuesday and put the range more in line with the butter market. The new range was 24c for special, 23c for No. 1 and 20c for No. 2 f.o.b. country points.

Cheese Strong

Receipts of new cheese were light and brokers were forced to put their prices up to higher levels. They quoted new large at 11½c to 11¾c, new twins at 11¾c to 12c and triplets at 12c to 12¼c. Wholesalers also advanced their prices to the trade. They quoted new makes ½c higer at 13c for large, 13¼c for twins, 13½c for triplets and 15½c for stiltons.

Egg Market Weak

The egg market had its "ups and downs" this week. On Monday there were too many eggs offered and prices shrunk, but on Tuesday a heavy snowstorm changed conditions locally, and prices were higher on this market. Wednesday the roads were open and supplies were too heavy for the demand, with the result that prices slumped again. At closing time on Thursday the market was very weak and prices quoted by brokers for graded lots were below Monday's levels.

On Thursday country shippers were quoted 15c for extras, 13c for firsts and 10c to 11c for seconds, delivered, ungraded, cases returned. Brokers offered graded lots in free cases at 15½c to 16c for extras, 14c for firsts and 12c to 13c for seconds, graded and in free cases. Retailers were offered supplies at 23c for extras in cartons, 21c for extra loose, 19c for firsts loose and 17c for seconds loose.

CAMPBELLFORD, March 26 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent) — Low prices are still prevalent in farm products as was seen at the farm sale of George Brown, Seymour Township on Wednesday. Oats were the best price, selling for sixty cents a bushel, about 500 bushel on the market. Number one timothy hay sold for eight dollars a ton while horses were out of the bidding altogether. The funeral cortege left early on Wednesday morning for Forest where the funeral service was held under Masonic auspices.

Mr. Simmons, during his twelve year's residence in the village had made a circle of many friends who with genuine sorrow mourn his passing. Mr. and Mrs. Simmons had no relatives in the community. Mr. Simmons was very much interested in the development of the park and had visions of making it both a thing of beauty and a source of revenue to the village. He was also interested in the Lakefield Agricultural Society and was on the Board of Directors until failing health compelled him to retire. His experience in agriculture which was a varied one, made him a valuable member of the directorate.

JOSEPH JAMES.

TWEED, March 26.—(Examiner Correspondence). — On Tuesday a link with the early history of the community of Actinolite was severed when Joseph James passed away in Belleville General Hospital. He was one of the best known residents of the district.

Although in his eighty-second year, Mr. James was identified with the mining activities north of tweed for many years. He possessed a brilliant mind and was well informed on all subjects. He has done considerable travelling, and in his earlier days was a notable platform speaker. At one time he served with the Royal Navy and visited many important ports of the world. Being deeply interested in municipal, provincial and federal politics, he took part in many of the campaigns, although he never entered himself for any important position in the political world.

He was the son of the late William James and spent his early boyhood on the seas. Later he entered the contracting business in Montreal, in which he proved successful. Urged on by the promising mineral deposits of North Hastings County, the late Mr. James took up his residence at Actinolite where he purchased considerable property and developed mispickle ore. When Actinolite was an active community and a flourishing centre, the deceased served as magistrate.

His wife, Margaret Ann James, died forty-three years ago, shortly after he took up his residence in the district. He is survived by one son, Charles James, of Tweed. There also remain three sisters—Mrs. Sarah Jeffery, Mrs. Rachel Featherstonhull and Miss Ida James, all residing in Montreal.

A member of the Anglican Church, the late Mr. James took an active interest in all its departments, and for many years was a lay delegate from St. James' Church, Tweed, to the Synod. He was a member of the Masonic and Oddfellows, although he has taken little interest in either order in his declining years.

The last few years he has spent with his son, Charles, in Tweed, and at his old residence in Actinolite. He was taken seriously ill about a month ago, and was removed to Belleville Hospital.

TWO MEN HAVE CLOSE ESCAPE

Thrown Into Icy Waters of Trent River When Canoe Upsets.

NEAR HASTINGS.

HASTINGS, March 26. — Two young Hastings men narrowly escaped drowning on Wednesday afternoon. Charles Robinson and Derb Lemoire were going to their work down the river in a canoe owned by Robinson. In some manner, the boat upset, throwing the two unfortunate men into the cold icy water. They were in the water about half way east of the bridge when the boat upset. Mr. Robsinson swam to the shore. Lemoire clung to the canoe and after being in the water nearly half an hour, finally reached the pier, broke the ice and let the canoe go. Claude Hoard, the lock-master, came to his assistance with ropes and a life-saver, and by lowering the ropes from the bridge was able to save Lemoire.

Mr. Robinson was taken to his home by Iden Bonds, and in the evening apparently seemed none the worse of his experience. They both had rubber boots on, and Mr. Robinson lost one in the water. Mr. Lemoire, who was most exposed to the cold water, was taken home by Taylor Huycke, and in the evening was suffering from the effects of the cold and shock. Mr. Robinson had left his overcoat in the canoe and it was finally recovered. The canoe floated into shore by the power house.

Claude Hoarde deserves great praise for his thoughtfulness, as this is not the first time he has been the means of saving a drowning in the Trent River.

At Christ Church (Anglican) Holy Communion will be celebrated at the hours of 8 and 11 a.m. At the morning service the choir will render the anthem, "Christ is Risen" (Maunders) and a solo, "Hosanna" (Granier) will be sung by Mrs. (Dr.) F. deF. Major J. M. Bygott has returned home after spending the past few days at Lakefield.

Owing to the lack of improvement in the employment situation in the town of Campbellford and prospect of a late spring, which will make conditions more than severe, the town will endeavor to have the time for the granting of direct relief extended from March 31 to April 30. Acting in accordance Mayor J. M. Bygott has instructed Clerk J. F. McGregor to write the secretary of government relief in Toronto urging that this extension of time relative to the Campbellford situation be given favorable consideration.

A case which is very much before the eyes of the citizens of town will come up in the spring assizes to be held at Cobourg on March 29 when Hugh Greenshields will be tried for the murder of his son Billy.

MILLBROOK Y.P.S. DECIDES ON PLAY

Miss R. Thorndyke Gives Talk on China to Grace Presbyterian Group.

MILLBROOK, Mar. 26 (Examiner Correspondence)—The regular meeting of the Young People's Society of Grace Presbyterian Church was held on Tuesday at 8 p.m., in the Sunday School auditorium, with a lessened attendance owing to unfavorable roads and weather, but with interest and enthusiasm for the work unabated.

The devotional part of the meeting was carried out by Miss Jessie Armstrong, who read the scripture lesson, and Miss Mary Armstrong, who took up the topic in an informative and inspiring manner.

Miss Ruth Thorndyke had charge of the literary topic, her theme being "China," with up-to-date information regarding conditions in that great republic. A feature of the meeting was the singing of suitable hymns for the Easter season.

After discussion, it was decided to have the play, "An Irish Stew," prepared by the young people and presented at an early date. On motion it was decided to extend an invitation to the members of the Centreville Y.P.S. to be guests of the local society at the next regular meeting, which will come in two weeks' time, the visiting organization to present the program. Tuesday, April 5, will be the date for the joint gathering.

A practice of the young people's choir for the special service on the afternoon of Sunday, March 27 (Easter), was held following the Y.P.S. meeting, two of the classes of the Sunday School providing the music for next Sunday's session.

Centreville Y.P.S.

The Young People's Society of the Centreville Presbyterian Church met in regular session on Monday evening, in the Sunday School hall, with McIntosh Bradshaw in the chair, the president, Archie Deyell, being unavoidably absent.

Roy Smith took charge of the topic in the opening devotional period and Miss Iva Campbell presented the literary theme, a study of the life of Lord Strathcona, both of these leaders bringing much helpful information to the listeners in their respective sections of the program.

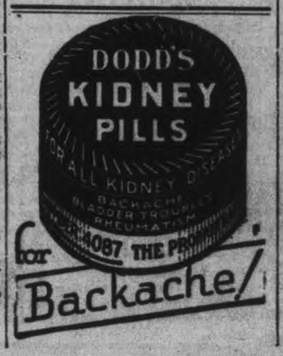
A piano duet by Misses Grace Johnson and Gwen Hutchison was warmly applauded, and the meeting closed with prayer.

The Centreville Young People's Society expect to meet with the sister organization of Grace Church, Millbrook, for the next regular gathering, and to provide the program, the social side of the meeting to be in the hands of the hostess Y.P.S.

Contests and music filled up the social hour happily at the close of Monday's meeting.

The trees that compose the bulk of Nova Scotia's forests are: red, white, and black spruce; white, red and jack pine; balsam fir; hemlock; cedar; larch; beech; red, and sugar maple; yellow, and paper birch; red and burr oak; poplar; ash, and white elm.

Don't forget the Community Dance at the Legion Hall on Friday, April 1st, under auspices of the Canadian Legion and the Social Club of The Examiner.



Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup

The Children Catch Cold Easily

Mrs. Walter Miller, Notch Hill, B.C., writes:—"The climate here in the winter time is very changeable, and the children catch cold very easily.

I have always found that a few doses of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup will relieve them at once.

I have tried many other cough remedies, but, now, I always insist on 'Dr. Wood's', as I find it the most reliable, and the children like its pleasant taste."

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE WEEKLY COLUMN

A goodly thing it is to meet
In Friendship's circle bright
Where nothing stains the pleasure sweet
Or dims the radiant light.
No unkind word our lips shall pass
No envy sour the mind
But each shall seek the common weal
The good of all mankind

CAVAN

"First and foremost, we wish to stress the fine spirit of the women in the Institutes who are now, as they have always been, ready to cooperate in the best interests of their local groups and the future welfare of the nation. When we set a limit to the number of points to which they could have a speaker for a meeting to be held in the latter part of May or June, they readily agreed that one meeting for each three or four branches would be quite satisfactory and a number of districts have decided to hold only one general meeting at a central point for, say, ten or twelve or fifteen branches in the district. The fact that the money available is less than a year ago, has stimulated the Institutes to greater effort, for they realize more than ever that the benefit to the individual member depends largely upon the effort which she puts forth to make the various activities of the branch effective, and I predict with confidence that the institutes this year will be of much greater educational value than ever before, and their social leadership will be all the more appreciated, for people are not so inclined now, because of the expense to seek entertainment and amusement in the nearby cities, and large towns.

Then their service during the past year is a justification for all the support given by the government; for I doubt if there had been direct appeals to the government for assistance from any centres where Women's Institutes are established in Old Ontario, and very few, if any, in the northern sections.

Among the plans which are being made for the balance of the current year is, first and foremost, a garden which is a real garden for every home, and we are asking the officers to induce as many of their members as possible to grow an adequate supply of vegetables for use, throughout the growing season, and for preservation, and storing for the winter months. The thrift campaign will cover not only the growing of vegetables but menu planning in general. The remodelling of clothing and the utilization of worn goods to the best advantage will be features of the clothing programs, and announcements more in detail will be made shortly regarding ways and means of making the program in clothing effective. Then plans are also being formulated for the beautification of the home, largely with the utilization of material at hand, and comparatively inexpensive materials. The remodelling of houses and the introduction of labor-saving devices and equipment and providing health-giving conveniences, will be duly considered.

We will reduce the expenses in connection with the summer series of meetings, one month and three months' short courses, district annuals, and in other ways to a sufficient degree we hope, to enable us to continue service by way of instructors for two weeks' courses, and three-day courses in food values and cookery, home nursing, and first aid, sewing.

In any case the Institutes are offered this service along the lines announced last year, and instructors will be provided, we hope, until the end of the Institute year, October 31. There is a possibility that we may have to limit this service towards the end of the year, but we hope not."

George A. Putnam,
Superintendent Women's Institutes of Ontario.

LIFFORD LINE

Following is an outline of an interesting Institute discussion on various types of flour and their uses in home baking.

To Canadians wheat is something more than other grains; it is the symbol of our prosperity, the yardstick by which we measure the economic welfare of our country. Abundant crops bear witness to the fertility of the soil and have made Canada famous among nations as a producer of foods.

Each year a drama is enacted by science and industry for the benefit of the Canadian housekeeper. It is a drama in five acts—planting, harvesting, transportation, storage and milling. The finished product is then ready for delivery to kitchens all over the land where it serves a thousand purposes and appears on our tables in various guises.

Flour is the basis of so many dishes that the subject is interesting to every woman who makes even the slightest pretense of doing her own cooking or who supervises the family bill of fare.

The kind of wheat milled determines the type of flour. Hard spring wheat which has a higher percentage of protein or gluten is the source of bread flour, as this quality is desirable in yeast mixtures giving elasticity and tenacity to the dough and lightness to the loaf. On the other hand a high gluten content is a handicape when making pastry, cakes and a variety of quick breads; so for this reason soft fall wheat which contains a lower proportion of gluten is used for pastry flour.

A good flour for bread-making is of even texture, fine, but feels slightly granular when rubbed between the fingers. Pastry flour is smoother and of a silky softness. Bread flour will not pack when pressed in the hand; pastry flour will bear the imprint of the fingers.

You may, if you wish, use bread flour for cakes, pastry and similar products, but you must keep in mind certain points. There is a difference in the weight. Seven-eighths of a cupful of bread flour equals one cupful of pastry flour. Therefore when substituting the former in a recipe which calls for pastry flour, deduct two tablespoons from each cupful stated—otherwise the texture of the product will be inferior. An extra sifting before measuring is advisable.

OMEMEE

Suggestions for the growing of vegetables were given at an Institute meeting recently.

"How can we make our vegetable garden just as interesting in the matter of variety as that portion devoted to flowers? This can easily be done and from the production standpoint too, we can greatly increase its capacity over the old type of a few rows of potatoes, carrots and corn, which is a very important factor in these days of reduced incomes.

"One member suggested that we get away from the old idea of setting one day aside for the planting of the vegetable garden, the more we space our planting by the use of several sowings, ten days apart, of the same seed and early, medium and late varieties, the more we spread our harvesting season over the whole year. With a few vegetables in storage and possibly, a hot bed and growing mushrooms and rhubarb in the cellar, there is no reason why we should not enjoy Canadian vegetables throughout the entire twelve months. If we remember that, there are at least fifty distinctive kinds of vegetables which may easily be grown in Canada, that our climate consisting of long hours of sunshine and cool nights, produces quality unexcelled elsewhere and that we may plant from early spring until the first week in July, we will have mastered all the necessary essentials.

Another member described approved varieties of better known vegetables: asparagus, beans, beets, cabbage, carrots, corn, cucumbers, celery, lettuce, onions, peas, parsnip, radish, spinach, Swiss chard and tomatoes.

MOUNT PLEASANT

The local branch of W.I. are busily engaged making quilts for relief work and the members will meet in their W.I. hall to quilt these quilts before the April meeting.

An activity in which nearly all Institute branches do more or less work, whether they report it or not is relief work. It is a work in which there is a certain amount of delicacy about reporting as those who receive the assistance might feel hurt if the thing done were published without any name.

However there is seldom a fire where household goods are destroyed, but assistance of some kind is given. If it is known that anyone is ill, needs care they cannot get, they are usually helped out. Food and clothing are often sent by members of the Institute and the need for them is learned through the Institute. Many Institutes have sent food and clothing to the north. Perhaps they do not do so every year, but there are few who have not done so, a number of branches keep a complete outfit for mother and infant and if needed they give it and then make another one.

Perhaps the care of mother and infant is the best work that can be done. Hospital care is very expensive and besides that so often if the mother can only remain in the home it means so much to the whole family.

Often children are outfitted for school or what they have is added to. Mothers can often make over or repair for their children if the donors have not time to do so. Very few houses have not something that can be used to help others, and that perhaps without very much inconvenience. Men's heavy woollen underwear can be made into various garments for children when past use for an adult.

When sending donations to hospitals it is necessary to send goods in the best condition as a rule, new articles, and in bales for the north.

COLLEENS MIX "GRAND CASHIONAL" COUNTERFOILS.

Sweep girls at the Plaza, Theatre, Dublin, in gay uniforms, mixing the seven million Irish Sweep ticket counterfoils in the trucks of a model railway which travels around the great electric mixing machine. The mixer created an artificial 50-mile-an-hour typhoon so the counterfoils were well and truly shuffled before being placed in the big golden drum for the draw.

toys for children and reading matter are always acceptable. Old Christmas cards delight many children. Institutes which do not attempt any of this work miss a great deal of real joy as a branch, and as individual members. It really helps to make our country. "It's a fine thing to have a country to be made, and it's a fine thing to have a part in making it."

"A code of conduct," for Institute programs bears the following refreshing verse:

"Give a little, live a little, try a little mirth;
Sing a little, bring a little, happiness to earth;
Pray a little, play a little, be a little glad;
Rest a little, jest a little, if the heart be sad;
Spend a little, send a little to another's door;

MILLBROOK

In these days when the problem of music in the schools is such a live subject, a group of interested Institute workers gathered at tea at a member's home, listened with pleasure to a talented teacher tell how to interest boys in this important branch of study, many practical suggestions being garnered for future reference and application.

The speaker, guest of the hostess for the afternoon, was a normal school music instructor, and thus competent to deal with her topic, many questions being asked, and the whole talk being of an informal character, and so much the more enjoyable than a set address.

As a point of first importance Miss Rusk stressed the wise choice of material since boys like bright, rhythmical sea songs, or hunting songs, or possibly those with a nature appeal. Such titles as "A Merry Life," "The Clang of the Force," "The Sailor Dance," etc., were given, with the suggestion that the boys of the school be asked to sing only such parts as were within their range, leaving the girls to take the higher part of the score "and of course transposing may sometime be necessary because the song, as written, is more often than not either too high or too low."

The changing voice of the boys in adolescent years may account for their failure to be interested in music, the guest-speaker thought, since it is difficult for them to control, hence embarrassment results when attempting to sing, "but this would not have happened had they been taught to sing in the years preceding the change of voice. And the teacher may win her boy pupils to interest in singing, and a real wish to try, by showing them what their best tones are, and how the new voice may sound. "When the class has become accustomed to this mixed tone quality, and learn to use the tones easily, they will be quite free in trying to sing."

"Listening Lessons" were also recommended as another plan to follow, that is teaching music appreciation by choosing pieces with suggestive titles, so the pupils may have an idea of what the composer had in mind, and then playing the selections, waltzes, marches, minuets and nocturnes, being suitable for this purpose. "Supply a motive for listening first," was the informant's advice, asking some such questions as 'What does music suggest to you?' or 'As I play think of words to describe the selection; putting in your own words what the composer wished to express.' At first you may get response from very few, because boys and girls are at the embarrassed age when it comes to telling their own feelings, while others may really lack the ability to express what they feel; and of course there are always some who haven't any impression from the music at all."

In the end, however, assurance was given there would be a desirable reaction obtained and many in the class will tell, orally, what the selection played really meant to them, the wise teacher always striving to let the pupils do the talking, avoiding anything of a lecture character in her own remarks.

The fact that to learn to enjoy, whether by children or grownups, it is necessary to hear it frequently, was brought out in the informal talk of the afternoon, the radio helping in this respect "providing we can teach folk, old or young, that jazz is not music at all, and to tune in a different type of program. By-and-bye they will learn to choose and appreciate, as well as absorb, the best in the playing, or singing, they hear, and have an ambition, if properly helped, to learn themselves to play, or perhaps, sing from the great composers."

WARSAW.

A subject in which Institutes should and many do take particular interest is collecting pioneer stories For the past few years it has been interesting to listen to old people tell stories of their early childhood. The beginnings of our churches, our schools, our post offices, are interesting and people wish to know their history, especially at aniversary times. In many cases it is becoming increasingly difficult to learn the date of the beginning of any project, or who were the first to even hint at it. Indeed much is already an uncertainty, as much is simply kept as stories told by parents.

The society for historical research is more than anxious to get all facts and stories connected. An organization such as the Women's Institute should be able to obtain such information more easily than any other.

Dummer township fairly teams with interesting lore, and there are several elderly people who love to talk and tell of old times and of deeds or experiences of their parents or other relatives. Among those still living near Warsaw are Mrs. Jane Clements, Mrs. Alex Watts, Mr. George Tucker, Mr. Dan McMurray.

When fact relating to the Presbyterian and Anglican churches seventy-fifth anniversaries were needed it took a good deal of research to get them. Rev. H. B. Herrington had a hard job on his hands collecting the data he had for his notes on the religious movement in North Dummer which included almost wholly Bible Christian and Wesleyan Methodists and many little church buildings. Another party had gotten about the same facts, but had not arranged them. Several of those with whom Mr. Herrington talked are already gone from this earth.

Within the last year, several most interesting people over eighty years of age has passed away. Among them, Mr. Paul Payne, Mr. and Mrs. William Harding, Mrs. J. J. Crowe, Mr. William Crowe. Mr. A. F. Choate was not eighty but he was a mine of information. Every township has its own lore which it would be well to keep.

A. T. Stewart, a millionaire merchant of New York, about whose death and funeral many years ago there was some excitement, lived at Hall's Bridge when a young man, and he and a Mr. Hall from whom Hall's bridge was named often visited in Warsaw and in Douro not far from Warsaw.

Rev. Mr. Dewart, for many years editor of the Christian Guardian, was born not far from Warsaw.

People from Warsaw have gone to many parts of the West, and made names for themselves.

The actual settling of different districts is most interesting and well worth spending some time in studying and preserving.

CAVAN

The Institute motto is "For Home and Country." The schools afford an excellent opportunity to live up to this motto.

Canadians of the future are today in our schools, and if, in any way, we can assist the children, to have healthy bodies, and well trained minds, then indeed are we working for the betterment of Home and Country.

In Cavan during the last few weeks our M.H.O. has been visiting the schools of his district giving treatment for diphtheria immunization. In districts where this has not already been introduced, Institutes could not undertake any better work, than having such treatment given in their local schools.

The following article tells of the benefits of preventative measures:

"Many parents have the idea that in the natural course of events their children must, some time, have all these, the diseases common to children, and which are communicable.

It is quite true that these diseases do occur chiefly among children, for the reason that children have no immunity or power resistance against the invading disease germs. Disease among children is justas serious as when disease affects adults.

Every communicable disease is serious. Some take a heavier toll than others, some are more damaging in their after effects, but all are serious. The communicable diseases should be prevented when possible, avoided always, and treated seriously if they do occur.

Small pox is banished where vaccination is used. Small pox is no longer one of the usual diseases of children, as it was before vaccination was discovered. In the pre-vaccination period, about one out of every ten deaths was caused by this one disease, and it was unusual to see a person who was not scared by small pox.

Within the past few years, we have been given two means of banishing another of the so-called usual diseases of children—diphtheria. Diphtheria is a disease, which for generations, has struck terror into the hearts of parents. That diphtheria still continues to take a toll of over nine hundred lives each year, in this country, is due to our failure to make use of the means which are at our disposal for its prevention. We have, in diphtheria immunization, a simple, safe and sure method of preventing diphtheria.

Unfortunately, the list of diseases which we can prevent so definitely is limited. We can, however, in all cases, use the general methods which are of value. No child should ever be exposed to contact with a child or an adult who is suffering from a communicable disease. Isolation and quarantine are carried out to safeguard others not merely to protect those who are quarantined. The placard on the door is placed there as a warning to others, not for the protection of the inmates of the placarded house."

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

There is something very beautiful in the thought of Easter as a spring festival.

* * * * * * *

It has a double significance for those who hold its religious meaning as a precious thing. But for everyone, of whatever creed or faith, the thought of renewal is significant and has its own appeal.

* * * * * * *

In the spring, all nature which has seemed cold and dead, begins to show sign of reawakening. Tender blades of grass appear in desolate meadows, early flowers, brave and hardy, make patches of ground gay with their illuminating color, birds returns, and by constant degrees the whole face of nature gradually assumes a lovely garb.

* * * * * * *

There prevails a tender delicacy about colors and textures which is found at no other season of the year. The air is softer and the whole world is brighter and more cheery.

* * * * * * *

To the thoughtful person, this reawakening is also reassuring. It prospers the idea that the side of human nature which is most beautiful can be revived and restored to its finest and its most lovely character.

* * * * * * *

If one is downcast by past failures, or is "snowed under" a mantle of discouragements, if one feels "dead to the world" and has lost spiritual vitality, this message of restored life and beauty as instanced in the return of spring comes with a sense of power and refreshment.

* * * * * * *

The loveliness of human nature can as surely be restored. The heart can have a return of that tender quality which makes it sensitive to the beauty of the best in others.

* * * * * * *

The revival of the loveliness of the human soul comes by paths of pleasantness just as the return of spring in all its glory comes through nature's basking in physical sunshine and the breath of balmy winds.

* * * * * * *

Hard work is not involved, straining effort is absent. Opening the heart to the best, the finest and the loveliest is essential.

* * * * * * *

It is reviving, restoring and joyous.

CULBERTSON on CONTRACT

BIDDING GRAND SLAMS

With slightly better than an even chance to fulfill the contract, a Small Slam is mathematically justified. The bid to seven for a Grand Slam is "a horse of another color." A Small Slam, vulnerable, will roughly net the winners 1500 points. The additional premium for a "big one" is 750 points. Hence the chances must be better than 2 to 1, or, conservatively, 3 to 1, to warrant the bid.

Recently, in a weekend of play in Des Moines, Iowa, a young protege of mine learned, or at least claims he learned, this valuable lesson. He held two tremendous hands, and refused to figure the swing in points from Small Slams to the defeated Grand Slam contracts.

1—With 8 plus in honor-tricks, the Fourth Hand bidder realized that a Forcing bid of two diamonds could only bring a two notrump response. On the theory that the hand would play better with the strength in the closed hand rather than in the Dummy, as it must be if the two diamond bid was properly answered, he made his slightly optimistic bid. I'll let you answer the question, "Who wouldn't?"

This is the other "power house."

East—Dealer.
North-South vulnerable.
East-West—no score.

	♠ J 4 3 ♡ J 10 8 7 3 ◇ 8 7 6 3 ♣ 8
♠ Q 10 9 2 ♡ K Q 9 2 ◇ Q 9 5 ♣ 10 7	N W E S	♠ K 8 7 6 5 ♡ 5 ◇ K J 10 4 2 ♣ 9 3
	♠ A ♡ A 6 4 ◇ A ♣ A K Q J 6 5 4 2

The Bidding:

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

East	South	West	North
Pass	2♣	Pass	2NT
Pass	3♣	Pass	3♡(1)
Pass	7♣(2)	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—The heart bid over the three club bid was unsound. South had a right to anticipate at least a biddable suit. A two notrump response to an Opening Forcing bid is entirely justified.

2—Again, who wouldn't?

West made a bold but smart lead—the heart King. North didn't hold the Ace or his response would have been two hearts over the two clubs. Two club leads—a spade followed by a diamond lead—and then five more club leads failed to dislodge the heart Queen. Result: defeat.

In spite of my friend's forbearance to estimate the loss, the two hands figure a total of 3230 points, not to be sneezed at, and if he reads these figures I'm sure he'll not only think twice but look at his hand thrice before calling a Grand Slam again.

TODAY'S POINTER

Question: What is the point value of the first game?

Answer: About 400 points. Defense may take a penalty of 3 tricks doubled, to save it.

HAROLD HARPER AT GOSPEL HALL

Special Services Were Held on Good Friday at Gospel Hall.

BELIEVERS' SUFFERINGS.

Those who visited Gospel Hall yesterday spoke about having received much blessing from the ministry given by Evangelist Harold Harper who is conducting special services there.

At 3 p.m. a meeting for the ministry of the word was held in which the subject of the "Sufferings of Christ" as revealed in Peter's First Epistle was discussed. Mr. Harper pointed out that in three different ways are they mentioned. He also made mention of the sufferings of believers who seek to live for Christ's glory here.

At 5.15 p.m. a luncheon was served in the basement of the hall, to all who were able to remain for it.

A special message to the boys and girls at 6.45 p.m. was the next feature. This was illustrated by an object lesson. The basement of the hall was nicely filled for this meeting.

At 8 p.m. to a large and attentive audience the evangelist showed from various scriptures why our Lord died upon the cross. Point after point was driven home by the speaker, showing Christians their responsibility to live for Christ, also pointing out the way of salvation for the sinner through faith in His Name.

Mr. Harper will give a vivid description of his recent visit to the place called Calvary, also to the garden tomb, Sunday at 7 p.m. Also each week night except Saturday at 8 p.m. will these special messages be delivered. All are heartily welcome.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

VITAMINS NECESSARY BUT FOODS CONTAIN ALL OF THEM.

It would seem that almost every day you are reading something about vitamins. In fact every article of food that contains one or more of the vitamins is advertised extensively because the advertisers feel that the public now knows and reads so much about vitamins that they will want to buy foods containing them.

Now this is quite all right. Instead of thinking so much about the calories in food, that is the number of heat units the food contains, they will be thinking of just what vitamins are in each food.

As a matter of fact vitamins are not really food stuffs in themselves, and they would not support life. If however they are omitted from the diet, then various harmful things happen to the structure and the working of the body processes.

Someone has likened foods and the building of the body, to the materials and building of a house. The building would not stand up, despite the bricks and stones without the mortar holding the bricks and stones together.

In other words the vitamins are to the foods what mortar is to the bricks and stones; they act on the foods so that each food does its best work, the best that is in it is exerted in strengthening the body.

All the vitamins are necessary to your health and you may be wondering how you can be sure that you are getting all of them in sufficient uantities.

If you are sick and run down or in the case of undernourished children, it may be necessary to get vitamins in a concentrated form as vitamin D in Cod Liver Oil, but otherwise the ordinary foods, eaten in the regular way, in the ordinary amounts, will give you all the vitamins you need.

Just continue to eat 1 part meat and eggs, to 2 parts fats and oils (cream, butter, fat meat) to 4 parts starches—bread, vegetables and fruits—and you will not have to think about vitamins.

I have quoted before the statement of Dr. McCollum of Johns Hopkins the "father" of vitamins, and no one has more often demonstrated their importance, their need to the body.

His advice is "Eat the usual food stuffs to which you are accustomed, making sure, however, of eating some raw fruits or vegetables every day, and you'll get all the vitamins your body needs."

Wolves and Wheelers Battle to 1-1 Tie at Montreal

EASTERN MEMORIAL CUP FINAL AT MONTREAL ENDS IN DRAW

M.A.A.A. Juniors Offset Sudbury's Speed With Strong Defense.

HEAVY CHECKING.

FORUM, Montreal, March 26. — Their famed speed crashing on the rocks of the rugged and powerful Montreal A.A.A.'s defense, Sudbury Wolves will enter the second game of the Eastern Canada Memorial Cup finals, carded for Toronto, on even terms with their Eastern opponents as a result of tonight's 1-1 tie. The Wolves were surprised by Winged Wheelers, who presented a powerful team, and on the play last night the return game remains a toss-up.

Mundey, rugged Wheeler defenseman, opened the scoring three minutes after the game started, when he notched a pretty goal, drawing Healy out of his net before shooting. Wheelers continued to have an edge on the play in this session, their defense spilling Wolves right and left with some heavy, but legal, body-checks.

Montreal's lead was short-lived, however, as Wolves knotted the count shortly after the second session began. "Nakina" Smith gave a beautiful pass to Adelard Lafrance, and the speedy left winger made no mistake in beating Lennox with a hard drive to the corner of the net. The score tied, play speeded up, and end-to-end rushes kept the crowd in a constant turmoil of excitement, with some spectacular work on the part of the goalkeepers featuring.

Play continued fast in the third period, with Wolves showing more speed on the attack, but were held out by some great defensive work by Currie and Mundey. Montreal had several good chances to score in this session, but poor passing kept them off the scoring sheet.

Gord Lennox, in goal, "Buster" Mundey and Frank Currie, on the defense, starred for Winged Wheelers, with Davis the most effective of the forwards.

"Ant" Healy was his reliable self in the net for Wolves, and Bob McInnis, Smith and A. Lafrance were standouts on the attack.

M.A.A.A.'s Use Weight

"Red" Porter staged the first rush, and met a heavy body check from Mundey. Winged Wheelers were depending on long shots, and were using their weight to advantage. Mundey caught Wolve's defense by surprise, and coasted in on Healy for the first score of the game. Montreal broke three abreast, but were carried past the goal with Jack McInnis crashing against the boards on the play and receiving a nasty crack. Dalton Smith broke through, but his shot was smothered on a nice play by Lennox. Herb Davis was chased for a trip and Wheelers shot the puck the length of the ice to keep the Wolves out.

Wolves appeared disorganized with the hard checking of the heavier Montreal team, and their famed short-passing attack was being constantly broken up. Play was confined to centre ice for several minutes, neither team having much success at combination. The pace slowed down toward the end of the first session, the heavy checking showing its effect.

Lafrance Ties Score

Jack McInnis, Smith and Bennett all had shots at Lennox, but were unable to beat Wheelers' custodian. Soon after the second period opened Pete Kelly nearly scored on a passout, the puck just sliding across the goalmouth. On the next rush, Nakina Smith passed to A. Lafrance, who was uncovered, and the speedy left-winger beat Lennox from close in to tie the score.

Bob McInnis received a cut on the head and retired on the next play. Play livened up and both goalkeepers were called upon to make some spectacular saves.

Mundey was nearly through, but was spilled by Jack McInnis and the Wolves were short-handed for the first time. Montreal sent four men on the attack, some great ragging by Smith holding them out.

Just as McInnis returned, Wolves went up three abreast and nearly scored, Bennett's shot going over the top of the net by a fraction. Wheelers were left short-handed when Bill Doyle was sent off for boarding Bennett. McQuisten made a nice play, laying down a perfect pass to Kelly, but the tow-headed right winger for M.A.A.A. shot into Healy's pads. Kelly had another great chance, but Healy came out and shot the puck down the ice, blocking the return shot before returning to his position. The period ended shortly after with neither team having an advantage in territorial play.

CANADIENS HOLD ONE-GAME LEAD

Habitants and Rangers Hook Up To-night in Second Game of Play-offs.

AT MONTREAL FORUM.

TORONTO, Mar. 26. (C.P.)—Hockey followers throughout Eastern Canada will have their eyes trained on Montreal to-night where the world champion Canadiens engage New York Rangers in the second game of a three of five series for the National Hockey League title. Winning the first game 4-3, after a thrilling rally to down the New York aggregation who finished at the top of the American division.

To-morrow night, however, it will be a different case as Rangers play at home to the Montrealers. If Habitants can manage to come through with a triumph to-night they will need but a single victory in the Gotham centre to clinch a place in the Stanley Cup finals.

Two other play-off fixtures are down for decision in the west Sunday when Toronto Maple Leafs visit Chicago and Detroit plays host to Maroons. Both games are the first of a two-game total-goal series which will be decided Tuesday when the visiting clubs tomorrow play on their home ice.

BRONKS BLANKED BY FORT WILLIAM

Thunder Bay Champions Obtain Three-Goal Margin First Game.

WINNIPEG, Man., March 26.T Fort William, Thunder Bay champions, who conquered Winnipegs to enter the Western Allan Cup final Thursday night pounded out a 3-to-0 victory over Calgary's Bronks, Far Western champions.

The thundering herd take the three-goal margin into the second game of the series here to-night.

Standing off a brilliant Bronk drive in every period, Forts marked up a goal in each period. The first two, shots from outside the defense, were "soft" counters that Goalkeeper "Dee Pee" McDonald might have stopped.

"Jazzy" Manahan, hard-shooting Fort William player, scored the third with less than two minutes left to play in the last period, skating in close to fire the parting shot.

Quite at home in the wide-open style of game preferred by Calgary, Fort William held their own for two periods, but in the third settled back to a strictly defensive game.

SOFTBALL MOGULS ADOPT SMALL BALL

Tenth Annual Meeting of O.A.S.A. Held at Royal York Hotel.

TORONTO, Mar. 26.—Nearly one hundred delegates attended the tenth annual meeting of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association which was held yesterday at the Royal York Hotel. The meeting was perhaps the most representative in the history of the association, and the delegates by close attention to the business before them concluded their session most harmoniously before 6 o'clock.

Retiring President Honored

W. J. Smith, Past President of the association and one of the organizers of softball in the Province, paid a fitting tribute to the work of President MacArthur, who, after three years in the Presidential chair, relinquished the guiding reins of the association yesterday. Mr. Smith, on behalf of the officers and executive of the association, presented the retiring President with a suitably engraved electric clock. Lieut.-Col. MacArthur, in voicing his appreciation of the thoughtful gift to his fellow-officers, modestly declined to accept the credit for the strides which had been made by the O.A.S.A. under his leadership, but stated that this was entirely due to the wonderful co-operation which he had at all times received from the other members of the executive.

Rejects Large Ball

Perhaps the most contentious matter on the entire agenda was the proposal of the Hamilton Association that the O.A.S.A. adopt the 13-inch ball for 1932. It took several years of effort on the part of the Toronto delegates to have the small ball finally adopted and after a years' trial, only four centres cast their votes in favor of a return to the larger sphere, Hamilton, London, Welland and Guelph favoring the proposal to revert to the 13-inch ball.

Legislation was enacted whereby the Executive Committee was given power to create life memberships, with full privileges, to men, for outstanding achievements in softball.

In future, players of teams representing industrial firms in strictly industrial leagues (i.e., 100 per cent. employment by the firm player represents) will be allowed the privilege of playing with one other non-industrial team.

Wrestling Last Night.

Toronto— Jim Londos, 198½, Greece, threw Ray Steele, 218, Glendale, Cal., one hour, 22 minutes, 39 seconds; Pat O'Shocker, 232, Salt Lake City, defeated John Katou, 207, Winnipeg, decision, 30.00; Matros Kirilenko, 219, Russia, won over Joe Cox, 206, Kansas City, 16.40 (Cox fell out of ring and unable to continue.)

Schenectady, N.Y.—Carroll Gardner, 173, drew with Carlos Henriques, 190, New York, one hour, three minutes, 35 seconds.

What is claimed to be a record in the Old World for commercial aircraft was made by a huge plane which flew 1,100 miles from Bushire, Persia, to Karachi, India, in a day.

From Caddie To Champion

New York.—Champion in 1913—champion in 1931! Champion at 20—champion at 38!

What a triumph for Francis Ouimet, after the wiseacres claimed that he couldn't make a comeback in golf, that he hadn't the physical stamina to withstand the strain, that he hadn't enough flesh on his bones to keep him going, and that his eyesight was bad.

Well, he added eighteen pounds to his weight, which gave him stamina and covering for his bones; and got himself an oculist who gave him new glasses with which to see. Today he is the national amateur champion of the United States, title he held back in 1914 in the days of the great Travers and the great Travis, before that stocky young man named Robert Tyre Jones appeared on the scene.

It was Francis Ouimet who made golf a front-page story. His career reads like a Horatio Alger book—"From Caddie to Champion; or, Francis Ouimet's Fight For Fame and Fortune." Today, when golf is one of the world's most popular sports, it is difficult to realize that less than twenty years ago it was considered an old man's game, something for the doddering veteran to indulge in when his legs failed him.

Ouimet is tall and lanky, with a Woodrow Wilson professor look and a Boston accent. For a long time Francis confined his golf to week ends, as he has two small daughters, Janice and Barbara, nine and twelve years old respectively, to provide for, and they wear out plenty of shoes.

Inside Sportin' Dope—By A. Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, so far as the pro title is concerned I'm like the guy that fell outa the 20th story window what said as he passed the 10th floor, "Well, I'm all right yet." Meaning that the Flying Frenchmen, as I call the Canadiens, or the Hurtling Habitants, if you prefer that title, win themselves the Canadian section of the cash and carry circuit and is now hooked up with the N. Y. Rangers for what oughta decide the Stanley Cup and the world's title, but won't, seeing 4 other teams that finished in the luck is still in there to battle for the honors. A funny thing about the N.H.L. race is that the Canadiens is the only team in the outfit to win more than ½ their games, which means the rest won less than 1 game outa every 2 played. Of course, if all the tie games hadda been played out to a finish the winning percentage would of been larger.

I'm still sticking to the Canadiens as the best bet for the title. Them Frenchmen has finished at top speed, and they go into the final serious clicking on every cyclinder, with their dynamo, Mister Morenz, riding the top of the wave. They got the class and the team spirit, and they ain't no reason why they can't cop their 3rd world serious honors in a row. The Maple Leaves is in for a tough set-too with the Black Hawks. You can write off that there 11 to 3 game the other nite. With Gardiner out early the Chicago lads chucked in the sponge, but they'll be a different outfit in these money games, and they ain't nobody who knows that any better than the Leaves themselves.

Well, Mac, the baseball season is staring us in the face, and the 1st real sign is the fact our old fellow townsmen, Mister Shiner Johnston, has been officially transferred from this fair city to Stirling. That town gets a ambitious young ball tosser, and umpires in that part of the world will get a few new ideas when Mister Johnston bears down on them. Well, the same give Peterborough a whole lotta baseball in his time, and he'll be missed when the lid is pried off of the coming season.

They ain't nothing else to get excited about, Mac, so I'll be leaving ya'.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

PRIMEAU AND HOWIE MORENZ RECEIVE N.H.L. TROPHY AWARDS

Toronto Centre Star Leads Vote for Lady Byng Cup.

WINNER OF PAST.

MONTREAL, March 26.—The National Hockey League last night announced that its three major awards for the 1931-32 season had been made as follows:—

Dr. David Hart Trophy for the player adjudged the most useful to his club—Howie Morenz, Montreal Canadiens.

Lady Byng Trophy for the player considered to have exhibited the best type of sportsmanship combined with a high standard of playing ability—Joe Primeau, Toronto Maple Leafs.

Vezina Trophy for the best goalkeeper in the league—Charles Gardiner, Chicago Black Hawks.

The Dr. Hart and Lady Byng Trophies are balloted upon annually by two newspaper writers in each city on the league circuit, while the Vezina Trophy has always been awarded to the goalkeeper with the lowest goals-against record for the season.

Howie Morenz, brilliant centre-ice player, has captured the Hart Trophy for the third time, a record which no other player has equalled. Morenz was winner in 1927-28 and again in 1930-31, the only other double winner being Nelson Stewart of Montreal Maroons. The trophy given to the league in the season of 1923-24 by Dr. Hart, father of the present manager of Canadiens, Cecil Hart, has been won by one other member of the champions, Herb Gardiner having been voted into its possession in 1926-27.

Morenz Wins by One Vote

In this season's ballot Howie took the trophy by a single vote over "Ching" Johnson, the New York Rangers' great defenseman. R. J. ("Hooley") Smith of the Maroons and Mervin ("Red") Dutton of New York Americans were third and fourth choice of the newspaper men voting.

Primeau, the effective play-making centre of the Leafs, had a clear lead over all opposition in the vote for the Lady Byng "clean-play" trophy. He displaced by four votes the New York Ranger centre-ice star, Frankie Boucher, who had won it for the last four seasons.

Normie Himes of the Americans, Johnny Gottselig of Chicago Black Hawks, and Jimmy Ward of Maroons followed Primeau and Boucher in the balloting. Primeau was penalized to the extent of only 25 minutes in the 48-game schedule just concluded. He received ten minors and one major.

In winning the Vezina Trophy Gardiner succeeds little Roy Worters of the New York Americans, who captured it last year.

Trophy Winners of Past

The record of the Hart Trophy since it was awarded follows:—
1923-24—Frank Nighbor, Ottawa.

Ontario Lacrosse Association Receives Entries from Several New Clubs.

A LARGE MEETING.

TORONTO, Mar. 26.—Despite the clamor and confusion, the acrimonious argument and the demonstrative debate that usually characterizes the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association's annual meeting, the 500 or so delegates who attended yesterday's gathering at the Prince George Hotel managed to get in a good day's work and spend an enjoyable time in the process.

It was the largest, and perhaps the most enthusiastic meeting the O.A.L.A. has held during the past fifteen years. The introduction of box or indoor lacrosse last summer has helped to stimulate interest in the national pastime and added power to the efforts of the O.A.L.A. boosters who have been striving for years past to give this great game a firm hold on the sport-loving residents of this Province.

Going into session at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, the meeting did not end until after 6 o'clock in the evening. The only break came during the noon hour when the delegates gathered for the annual luncheon, which is always an interesting and satisfying feature of the program.

Veterans Honored

Summed up, the highlights of the days were the re-election of W. J. Blainey as President, the first time in a number of years that the holder of this office has stood for a second term; the tributes paid to Charles Querrie and Fred C. Waghorne, notable veterans of the game, who were accorded life memberships in the association by a hearty and unanimous vote of all present; the introduction of delegates from a number of new clubs who are primarily interested in the game from the box lacrosse standpoint, and the announcement that the Canadian Lacrosse Association has recommended a Dominion championship series for box lacrosse.

There were a number of other important matters that occupied the attention of the meeting and several announcements pertaining to the advancement of the sport. Although the Brampton club did not commit itself as to whether it would be entered in the senior series this coming year, it was learned than an $800 deficit the Excelsiors faced at the end of last season has since been wiped out and that plans are going forward for raising funds to equip and carry the champions to Los Angeles this coming summer for the Olympic lacrosse title series.

A good part of the day's activities was confined to dealing with adjustments in the constitution, a particularly large number of amendments being introduced for this purpose. In the majority of cases, the suggested changes were acted upon. There was little of a radical nature about them and space does not permit to deal with them here at any length. The suggestion that the senior series be conducted by a duly authorized member of each club under a chairman appointed by the O.A.L.A. executive was among those carried. One of the very few amendments defeated pertaining to waiving the residence rule of May 1 as applying to members of his Majesty's Army and Air Force.

"THE MAN WHO PLAYED GOD"

EAST CITY SIX BEATS A'S 2-1

Two Goals in Third Period Overcomes 1-0 Lead of Athletics.

A THRILLING DISPLAY.

The Southend Hockey League bantam title and the J. A. O'Brien Trophy were captured by the Maple Leafs at the Brock last night. Bill Murphy's battling youngsters blazed in two goals in the third period to overcome the Athletics, 2-1, and win the hectic series after four games had been played before a winner could be declared.

A big crowd saw a thrilling display of minor league hockey staged on a poor sheet of ice. Athletics scored in the first period and looked as though they would hold the slim margin the rest of the way, but the fighting Leafs, led by Burton, ran in two in quick order about halfway through the last stanza and then held their opponents off till the final gong.

Mowry Gets Marker

Mowry countered the lone Athletic marker, and Les Burton scored both Leaf goals. Both these players went good, and again the two goalies proved hard to beat. Coughlin, Starr, Howland and Kennedy were all conspicuous in the East City victory, though every player on the line-up showed to advantage. Cut-up ice interfered with combination plays, and what little there was seen was that of the losers. Field and Anderson travelled hard all through, with Kingdon, Watson and Jobe looking good. Their teammates played in stellar style, also, and the Athletics' backchecking was first-rate. The game was fast and fairly clean.

They opened up at a good clip and gave the opposing net guardians some hot ones to handle. Play was about even and exciting, and then Mowry took Kingdon's pass at the blue line to tear in close and jab it by Grainger to put the A's one up. The Leafs tried hard the rest of the frame but couldn't get in close enough for a real shot.

Play Becomes Rough

The second was fast again and a little rougher, with both sides drawing penalties. They battled hard on even terms for a while and then the Ashburnham forwards began pressing when successive penalties weakened the Athletics. However, fine backchecking held them out and the Leafs' shooting was somewhat off.

The third was a thriller. At first, the black-sweatered boys, held a decided edge and slammed shots from all angles at Grainger who couldn't be beat. Then the Murphy outfit stormed their opponents' citadel on rush after rush, sending four players up at times. The session was about half over when Burton took O'Leary's pass and pushed his way through the defence to shove the rubber by Clark who came out to save, and the score was tied. They kept up their hot attack and just a few minutes later, Burton grabbed the disc as it came out from back of the Athletics' goal and bulleted it in for the winning counter. Athletics tried hard the remaining few minutes but play was even at the bell.

The Teams

Athletics—Goal, Clark; defence, Field and Anderson; centre, Kingdon; wings, Mowry and Watson; alternates, Todd, Jobe, Heal and Post.

Maple Leafs—Goal, Grainger; defence, Kennedy and Vinette; centre, Howland; wings, O'Leary and Burton; alternates, Starr, Brady and Coughlin.

Lead League In Scoring

THE THREE MUSKETEERS OF PROFESSIONAL HOCKEY.

N.H.L. games on March 22 wound up the regular professional schedule and individual scoring records show the famous Maple Leaf "Kid" line as leaders in total scoring points, total goals and greatest number of assists. Charlie Conacher, right-winger of the line (1), tallied 31 goals to top the league; Joe Primeau, pivot-man (2), finished the season with 35 assists to gain his honors, while Harvey "Busher" Jackson, left-wing ace of the combination, had the honor of leading the league in greatest number of points. Jackson had 53 points, made up of 26 goals and 25 assists.

CASUAL COMMENT

The bantam play-offs are all over now, with Maple Leafs up on the perch. They hammered out a 2-1 win over Athletics at the Brock last night to end a great series. The A's took the first game, the second ended in a tie, and the Leafs battled through to two close wins to capture the championship of the Southend Loop and the O'Brien Cup, held by the Athletics.

• • • • • • •

They had a fine crowd out last night, and the fans sounded as if they enjoyed the tussle hugely. Particularly in the exciting third period, did they do some shouting, when the Leafs turned the tide by an offensive that wouldn't be denied. They're worthy champs, but the same would have been true of their rivals had "Shocky" Mein's boys come out on top. Both outfits are very well-matched.

• • • • • • •

That ends the hockey around here until next winter. All the leagues are finished up, and although there may be a few exhibition games while there is ice left, a lot of skates will be hung up now. The ice is just about through, anyway.

• • • • • • •

A real crowd of cage followers will likely take in the first games of the Ladies' City League basketball playoffs up at the Y. M. C. A. this evening at eight bells. St. Paul's and Westclox Seniors meet in the first part of the double-header, while Choates play Blue Petes in the junior affair. The girls have a big following and deserve it on their past performances. The final series should be good.

The annual meeting of the Trent Valley Intermediate Baseball League has been called for March 30 in Belleville, and it is expected the loop will branch out this year into two sections, a northern and a southern group. In the former will be Tweed, Sulphide, Deloro, Hastings and Havelock; and the other may consist of Picton, Point Anne, Napanee, Trenton and Belleville.

• • • • • • •

The league president, A. G. Meagher, has been in touch with these clubs and they have promised to have representatives at the big pow-wow. If the circuit is made up of ten teams this summer, the old T. V. L. should have a great season in 1932.

• • • • • • •

The fourteenth annual meeting of the O.B.A.A. opens next Saturday morning in the Carlsrite Hotel, Toronto. Max Swanston and Walter Gerow are the Central League representatives, and Bill Kay, who represents this district for the Association, will also be there. A number of other baseball men from around here may attend.

A wide representation at the Ontario Amateur Softball Association meeting in Toronto yesterday points to a bigger year than ever before for this sport. The twelve-inch ball was retained by a big majority and the treasurer's report indicates that the body is in a sound financial condition. Representatives from here were Dave Leether, Fred Scates and Jake Beckerman.

• • • • • • •

And at the provincial lacrosse gathering in Toronto yesterday, box lacrosse was all the talk, there being little interest apparent in the twelve-man game. The new type of gutted stick sport promises to sweep the province this summer, being played in every district. We're likely to have a good league operating here.

PIONEER CLUB IS ORGANIZED

Will Train Boys in Hockey, Softball, Long Distance Swimming and Boxing.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

The Pioneer Athletic Club has organized in Peterborough for the purpose of instructing and training boys in hockey, softball, long distance swimming and boxing, and will seek an O.H.A. junior franchise here next year if there is artificial ice. A large, airy gymnasium at 180½ Simcoe Street has been obtained and prepared and will be opened this Monday evening at 7.30. Jerry Coughlin is Director of Athletics.

The following officers were elected at the first club meeting: President, V. J. Sullivan; vice-president, L. Anthony; secretary-treasurer, W. Prindible; executive committee, W. J. Cavanaugh, A. W. Armstrong and H. Smith.

The club colors are red and black with a monogram made up of a crosscutt saw, maple leaf and a peavy, all symbolic of the Canadian pioneers. Officers present expressed considerable satisfaction at having obtained such a large hall for gym work, the place being formerly occupied by the Boy Scouts. It will be in readiness for Monday evening and boys of the city and district, interested in any of these sports, are invited to visit the gymnasium.

Major Ball Gossip

CHAMPS OF THE COAST

LOS ANGELES, Cal. — Whatever they may do in the National League this season, the New York Giants indubitably are major league champions of the Pacific Coast.

They beat the Chicago Cubs, five games to three; the Detroit Tigers, three to one; and the Pittsburgh Pirates, two to none.

A PROBABLE LINE-UP

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—The American League season will not open for another three weeks but it looks like Jack Saltzgaver and Frank Crosetti both have won places in the New York Yankees' infield.

The Yankees probably will start the season with Crosetti at shortstop, Saltzgaver at second, Lary at third, Gehrig at first, Ruth, Combs and Chapman in the outfield, and Dickey catching.

TAMPA, Fla.—The Cincinnati Reds went after Hick Hafey today as a prize addition to their growing collection of National League baseball stars.

Hafey led the league in batting last year, and made a profound impression on the Reds by casually cracking two more runs in one day at Cincinnati.

Now he's a holdout from the St. Louis Cardinals. Cincinnati wants him, but so, apparently, does the rest of the National League.

That was the information given President Sidney Weil of the Reds yesterday when he broached the matter to the Cardinals management. Undaunted, he plans to try again to-day.

HUDLIN GETS HONORS

NEW ORLEANS, La. — Willis Hudlin will work against the New Orleans Pelicans to-day in their game with the Cleveland Indians. Hudlin will go as many innings as he likes, the first pitcher to write post, out of to-day's game with the ing camp this Spring.

SAN FRANCISCO. — Rogers Hornsby to-day was contemplating changes in the Chicago Cub battlefront to produce some major league batting power. The Cubs have been outhit in two games by the San Francisco Missions, and yesterday managed to win in ten innings because the Coast Leaguers committed five errors.

JUDGE GETS BREAKS

BILOXI, Miss.—The injury jinx favored Joe Judge of the Washington Senators, by keeping Joe Kuhel, his rival for the regular first base post, out of to-da's game with the Baltimore Orioles.

Judge was picked for to-day's and to-morrow's games with Baltimore at Gulfport, after Kuhel was struck on the glove hand yesterday by a batted ball. It was the first injury of importance to a regular this season.

BOX LACROSSE SWEEPS LAND; O. A. L. A. REAPING BENEFIT

More Clubs Than Ever to Play Under Organized Auspices This Year.

SCRAP FOR PLAYERS

(By Len Smith)
(Special to The Examiner)

TORONTO, March 23.—Lacrosse should boom stronger than ever during the next few months. From every city town and hamlet for miles around come reports daily of the formation of box lacrosse teams to either play as units under the O. A. L. A. banner or in district series of four or five clubs to a group, the winner of which would have the right of entering the Ontario finals.

Right at our own front door there is being waged a merry old war between the O. A. L. A. moguls and those behind the new box loop which is said to comprise Marlboros Nationals, Orangeville, Mimico and perhaps Brampton, with an extra large question mark behind the latter entry, which is said to be sitting on the fence for the time being.

We are credibly informed that at least one meeting has been held by the two factions, but that little, if anything, has been accomplished, the magnates behind the new league wishing to dictate terms and conditions with which the governing body cannot see eye to eye.

Scrap Residence Rule

The fly in the ointment seems to be the scrapping of the residence rule by the new organization, whose teams are supposed to have a fixed territory from which to draw playing material. For instance, Orangeville, who, in themselves, are said to be not overly strong for senior competition, ask the right to beg, borrow or steal players from their next door neighbor at Fergus. If given this privilege it would mean that the Thistle club, which has done much for lacrosse over a period during which the national game has had rather tough sledding, would have difficulty in fostering a team that could hold its own with outside competition.

Mimico have been promised the help of players from Weston and vicinity which privilege they were accorded by the O.A.L.A. in 1931, and here again comes an argument from Mount Dennis, who were said to be lining up the boys from Weston with the thought in mind of entering a senior box lacrosse squad under the O. A. L. A. banner.

Former St. Simons players will comprise in the main teams bearing Marlboro and National colors former said to be having the choice of the senior "Saints" squad and the Sea Fiess entry relying on most of the intermediate material which carried St. Simons to the O. A. L. A. finals during the 1931 campaign.

Brampton, Storm Centre

Brampton seems to be the bone of contention, with the new interests making a strong bid for their entry. Those close to the situation in the rose growing community claim that there will no scarcity of funds when the date rolls around to send their Dominion champions to Los Angeles in search of world glory. This being the case, and Brampton being the representatives of the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association, it is fairly safe to wager that the Excelsiors will hardly throw in their lot with the new organization until they first of all assure themselves that by so doing they will not lose their identity as Canada's representatives in the Olympic contests.

The new box lacrosse circuit is keen for recognition only in so far as affiliation is concerned, and do not wish to come in as individual clubs. Their claim is that they should have the right to operate as a separate unit the same as other leagues functioned last fall. They should, however, not overlook the fact that at the present time there is a Toronto-and-district group into which the two local clubs can be readily fitted. Also, that plans are under way to permit senior teams to function separate and apart from the other series under O. A. L. A. jurisdiction.

As to the argument that with so many teams operating throughout the province it would be impossible for the O. A. L. A. to deal with all their trials and tribulations, may we point out that back in 1921 and 1922 there were over 150 clubs under the banner of the O. A. L. A., all happy and contented with the treatment they were receiving, and with machinery fully capable of taking care of their requirements.

The Ontario Hockey Association takes under its wing teams through out the province, with the exception of a handful of teams operating under the N. O. H. A., and which, owing to their geographical location cannot be readily worked in with other clubs located much further south. This, therefore, gives the O. A. L. A. moguls an argument that what can be done in hockey can be done in lacrosse in the matter of supervising the national game throughout Ontario.

Reverting again to the new loop in box lacrosse circles, it is stated that for its list of officers they are lining up a former president of the O. A. L. A. for the chief executives's chair with one closely allied to hockey for the secretaryship. For the moment, however, secrecy seems to be the key-note until more definite plans have been formulated.

BATTALINO LOSES IN TWELFTH ROUND

Petrolle Gives Former Featherweight Champion Decisive Beating.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, March 26.—Billy Petrolle, known as the "Fargo Express" and always on time rolled on to devastating victory Thursday night over Christopher ("Bat") Battalino, before 18,000 spectators.

Billy finally crushed the superhumanly courageous little Italian from Hartford Conn., in the twelfth and final round, after cutting his face so badly that blood covered them both, spattering the ring and the ringsiders, from the third round on. Referee "Gumboat" Smith awarded Petrolle the technical knockout after 1 minute 31 seconds of the twelfth.

Stanley Cup Debate Ends Satisfactorily

MONTREAL, March 26. — "The challenge of the American Hockey League for the Stanley Cup has been accepted, but, as the National Hockey League has refused to meet the champions of the American League, there will be no series between the two leagues this year" William Foran of Ottawa, co-trustee of the cup, declared to the Canadian Press last night.

"The present National Hockey League play-off series will continue and its ultimate winners will receive the Stanley Cup" Mr. Foran continued. "The future of the cup after this season is a matter which we (the trustees) will have to decide.

"There is nothing further we can say."

Mr. Foran's statement confirmed a declaration he had made earlier in the day that the National Hockey League would keep the cup for this season.

Galt Fifteen-Miler Sets Course Record in Toronto Marathon.

TORONTO, Mar. 26.—The Bloor District Business Men's fifth annual road race carnival was held yesterday morning, before a crowd of about twenty thousand people who lined the courses of the four races held along Bloor Street, ranging from three to fifteen miles. The fields this year were greater than ever before, and performances stood out as vastly superior to any of the former events.

Billy Reynolds of Galt, with two victories already on the Challenge Cup in the fifteen-mile event, made a determind effort to lift the cup, and in doing so established a course record. Much credit for his record-breaking time is due to Joe Pearson, the Monarch star, who gave the Galt runner a great battle for the greater portion of the run, only to be beaten out in the final drive by about two hundred yards.

Third place was captured by the much-improved Silvertown runner, Dick Wilding, while fourth position went to Hans Oldag, former 10,000 metres German champion, of Buffalo who fought off a desperate drive by the youthful Burnside of the Monarch A.C. The latter gave everything he had to catch the Buffalo ace, and all but caught him at the tape, providing the most stirring finish of the day.

Last Game In West To Be Held To-Night

WINNIPEG, Mar. 26. (CP)—With a tidy three-goal lead to give them added confidence, the Thundering Herd from Fort William meet the Bronks from Calgary in the last senior hockey game of the year in Western Canada to-night. Unless the Bronks can overcome the Forts' lead it will be the lads from the lakehead town who will go to Montreal for the Dominion finals and a chance to capture the Allan Cup.

The Calgary team, the hope of the far west, came to Winnipeg after eliminating the provincial champions of British Columbia and Saskatchewan but found the going too tough for them against the Forts in the first game Thursday night. They failed to score while the Forts ran up their score to three.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

WHITEFOOT IS RELIEVED.

'Tis not in body but in mind
We suffer most you'll always find.
—Whitefoot the Wood Mouse.

Whitefoot the Wood Mouse was worried. He was very much worried. Never in all his life had he been more worried. It wasn't in regard to himself he was worrying. He never worried about himself much, never for more than a few minutes at a time when he happened to be in a very tight place. He had been in so many of these tight places and had escaped so many times that danger was no longer a cause for real worry. It was over little Mrs. Whitefoot and the babies that he was worrying. They had disappeared. Yes, sir, they had disappeared. And he hadn't the least idea what had become of them. Naturally he feared the worst. He feared that something dreadful had happened to them.

Whitefoot had not been living at home since the arrival of the four babies. There wasn't room for him in the snug home in a hollow stick in the woodpile outside Farmer Brown's sugar house in the Green Forest. Mrs. Whitefoot had made this very clear to him. There wasn't room and he wasn't wanted. She left no doubt about this in his mind. Did it make him feel badly? Not at all. He was used to it. Always it was this way when there were babies. So he merely grumbled a bit and then went off to make his home for the time being in a certain old stump he knew of. But once or twice every night he paid Mrs. Whitefoot a visit to see that all was well.

Then came a night when Whitefoot received a dreadful shock. As he approached that woodpile he discovered at once that something was wrong. Something was very wrong. That woodpile did not look right. It was smaller than it had been. Something had happened to it. He ran up on it and looked for that hollow stick in which Mrs. Whitefoot and the babies had their home. He couldn't find it. He went all through that pile of wood, looking into every little space between the sticks. Nowhere could he find that stick with a hole in it.

"It has to be here," he whimpered. "That was one of the safest homes we ever have had. It must be here."

Once again he went all over that pile of wood and the result was the same. That hollow stick was not there. Then he hunted all around on the ground. There was no hollow stick and no trace of Mrs. Whitefoot or the babies. Once he thought of looking in the sugar house, but noises within frightened him. Then Hooty th- Owl hooted his fierce hunting call from the top of a tree not far away, and Whitefoot knew that it wouldn't do at all for him to be running about there in the open. That fierce call made little chills of fear run all over him and he ran to hide in the safety of his hollow stump.

Twice that night he started back, but each time was forced to seek his hollow stump again. Once the next day he started for the sugar house, but Whitefoot is afraid in the bright light of day and his courage was not equa to the long journey, for that stump was some distance from the sugar house. So he remained in his snug home and worried. He just knew that something dreadful had happened to Mrs. Whitefoot and the babies and that he never would see them again. He tried not to think of them and the more he tried not the more he did think of them.

So the next night he was back at that woodpile. It was smaller than ever. Presently the door of the sugar house opened and Farmer Brown's Boy came out. He got a big armful of wood and carried it into the house. Could it be that he had taken that hollow stick with Mrs. Whitefoot and the babies? Could it be? It seemed to him that Mrs. Whitefoot must have escaped. But if so, where had she gone? Perhaps she had gone back to the place where they had lived before making their home in the woodpile. He hurried there, but could find no trace of her.

A long time later he went back to that woodpile. He couldn't keep away from there. Suddenly, as he sat on top of it, he heard a sound that made his heart leap and a great load was swept from his mind. It was a faint, very soft drumming. Only Mrs. Whitefoot drummed like that!

What To-Day Means To You

"ARIES"

If March 26th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:10 a.m. to 10:30 p.m., from 1:45 p.m. to 3 p.m., and from 7 p.m. to 8:15 p.m. The danger periods are from 11 a.m. to 12:45 p.m., and from 4:30 p.m. to 6 p.m.

The material side of life, the more active interests and pleasures and work in general, will not be particularly favored by the Stars on March 26th. It is an unusually good time for serious thought and study. Authors, research workers, those in church work, musicians and teachers, should find it an inspirational time.

The child born on this March 26th will have a winsome, loving nature, but will not have a forceful character. It will have a riotous imagination, considerable optimism and will be a bunch of nervous energy. It will not try to excel in its school work, and will not express any special talents.

The uniformity of your disposition is one of the most pleasing things about your character. There are few inconsistencies in your make-up, and your faults and your virtues are exhibited alike to everybody. You do not change color to suit an occasion or to impress an audience. Nobody could be more unaffected and natural than you are, and you are indifferent as to what people think of you. The world is at liberty to accept or reject you as it pleases.

You are not content with small standards of living, and you mean to be something more than cog in a wheel. You have an analytical mind, and pick things to pieces until you understand the importance of the tiniest detail. Your profundity of knowledge about many things is sometimes boring to people who are satisfied to only seem to know things. You never assume interests or attitudes. You never waste a minute, and your mind and hands are usually usefully occupied. You do not like knick-knacks and gewgaws about you, and have little time for toys.

You like the thinkers and doers of the world, no matter what or who they are. You are not a social snob, and the only passport to your friendship is brains or character. Affairs of romance will play only a secondary part in your life.

Sunday, March 27th.

If March 27th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., from 5 p.m. to 6 p.m., and from 10:30 p.m. to 11:45 p.m. The danger periods are from 7 a.m. to 8:30 a.m., and from 2:30 p.m. to 4 p.m.

An uninspiring day, with few iridescent moments, is augured for March 27th. The minor incidents of life should pass off as usual, but nothing big or unusual in a spiritual, mental or material way is likely to transpire. The shadow of some pending trouble may cast a slight gloom over the evening hours.

The children born on this March 27th will have the following character assets essential to a material success: initiative, thoroughness, presence of mind and courage. They will have many traits also, which will assist them in the social and lighter sides of life—tact, a bubbling sense of humor, and a generous spirit.

Born on a March 27th, you dull a keen mind and mar a good disposition through obsessions of worry. You are surrounded by shadows of fear which a good laugh or the searchlight of common sense would soon dispel. The real troubles and sorrows of your life will neither creep up nor jump upon you; you will be forewarned and protected or guided. There are few people who have better self-control or courage in times of real stress than you. You accept the inevitable in a philosophical manner, and you never cry over spilt milk.

You have a practical mind and are fitted for work of a homely nature. You have patience, tact and perseverance, and will secure your successes through waiting and working. You are rather inclined to follow in the footsteps of the past, and are neither a pioneer in thought nor action. You could never stoop to any form of dishonesty or underhandedness and never take advantage of another's misfortune to elevate yourself.

You are rather sentimental about the past, and as you grow older will talk about "the good old days." You have a very poor forgettery, and it is difficult for you to bury your "differences." You seldom discard your prejudices, and small incidents color your life forever. You will suffer through the heart side of life from unreturned or forbidden affections.

Palpitation of the Heart Could Hardly Get Around

Mrs. Charles Storms, R.R. 5, Picton, Ont., writes:—"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart; couldn't sleep, day or night, and was so weak I could hardly get around.

After taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills I was greatly relieved of these attacks.

My mother also has great faith in them and finds no other medicine can help her so much for heart trouble.

I can assure you that Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are a wonderful builder."

U.S. IN ORDER TO BALANCE BUDGET MUST COLLECT $1,241,000,000

Strawn Issues Warning Against Abandoning Attempt and Borrowing Instead.

MEAN FLIGHT OF CREDITS.

(By Ken Clark—C.P. Staff Writer).

WASHINGTON, March 26. — Citizens of the United States will find in their Sunday papers tomorrow various assessments of the financial position of their country which cannot be comforting. Congressional leaders are spending the week-end on the unpleasant task of discovering some other method than a sales tax for getting $560,000,000 out of the pockets of the citizenry. They must by some means collect a total of $1,241,000,000 in order to balance the budget and with no uncertain voice in one of the worst party revolts in the history of the country, 223 representatives have declared themselves absolutely opposed to what the Republican-Socialist member, Fiorello Laguardia, calls a "cradle to coffin" tax.

The budget-balancing scheme originally suggested by the Treasury to the legislators provided for levies on postage, gasoline, bank cheques, automobiles, phonographs and radios, tobacco, real estate transfers, electricity and gas. These offer the readiest means of rehabilitating the revenue bill. But, because of the clash of interests, they provide material for unlimited quarrelling and log-rolling in both House of Representatives and Senate. The legislators, urged on by the President and their own leaders to put the books of the nation in good shape, are now faced with the solution of a problem containing all the diverse and contradictory elements involved in the Smoot-Hawley Tariff Bill which was eighteen months in passage.

Revenue Drops Fast.

Meantime the revenue of the government from income taxes, customs and other sources continue to drop. Not only is this the case but there is a prospect, very probable, that Congress will decide to pay some $2,600,000,000 owed to veterans of the Great War in 1945, immediately.

One solution, not so far seriously considered, would be to refrain from balancing the budget at all and to borrow. Silas H. Strawn, President of the United States' Chamber of Commerce has issued a warning against this saying, "If we do not balance the budget there will be a flight of credits out of this country that will be appalling.

Nearly all the Congressmen and Senators render lip-service to the budget slogan. The House has operated against the sales tax on the motto, 'Soak the rich,' Mr. Strawn says. There are no rich.

The situation is not reassuring for the United States' citizen. Incidentally it is a situation which could not arise under a British parliamentary system.

LURED OVER LINE.

MIAMI, Mar. 26. — The Miami Herald says to-day officials of the American Power Boat Association now en route to New York from Miami, have revealed that a driver in the Col. E. H. R. Green unlimited outboard motor boat race trophy recently held at Miami Beach, confessed participation in a conspiracy to cause the British driver, Charles H. Harrison, to disqualify himself by beating the starting gun.

Charleston, S.C., March 25, 1932.
Larry Smits, Miami Beach, Fla.

Driver who competed in the Col. Green Trophy race has confessed plan pre-arranged to draw Harrison across starting line, disqualifying him.

The American Power Boat Association's contest board plans to hold hearing in near future of suspected drivers for suspension and possible annulment of the third heat's result.

American Power Boat Association plan drastic action to remove all taint and unsportsmanship tactics in motor boat racing.

STILL INSISTS HE CAN GET GOLD FROM LAVA

Southall Chemist Says He Will Show Up Scientists Yet

Southall, Eng.—The fact that five of the greatest metallurgists in this country have challenged his claims does not dishearten Mr. Chester Oladitz, German chemist, who professes to be able to extract gold from lava. "I do not care if every expert in the world says that there is no gold in lava," he says. "I had twenty-four assays made before I started my experiments, and each assay certified that there was no gold. I extracted some by my secret process. "Shortly, I shall show all the scientists and metallurgists in the world that my claims are correct. "Fifty years ago, if you had said that you had a machine which would enable a man counting in London to be heard in New York, people would have said you were mad. It is the same with my process. To-day the experts say it cannot be done. Soon they will see their mistake."

Mr. Oladitz hints that his experiments had now reached a very advanced stage, and that he had not confined himself solely to lava.

"Every day I am working on my book, which will explain in detail my atomic theory which governs my discoveries and experiments," he added. "I have now written 300 pages. It will total more than 1,000 pages. It represents the whole of my twenty-three years' research work."

The company has quite a large capitalization, but the inventor says he is not selling any shares now.

TARZAN AND THE GOLDEN LION. NO. 54

By Edgar Rice Burroughs
(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

At the sound of the ape-man's blood-curdling call the Bolgani chucked and paused. Behind him, the Gomangani quailed in terror. "Stop!" cried Tarzan, raising a palm toward the Bolgani. "I am Tarzan of the Apes. I sought no quarrel with your people. I but look for passage through your country to my own. Let me go my way in peace with this woman, taking these Gomangani with me." For answer, a chorus of growls arose from the Bolgani as they started forward again toward the dais.

Now from their ranks there suddenly leaped the old man of the east tower, who ran swiftly toward Tarzan. "Ah traitor!" cried the ape-man. "You would be the first, then, to taste the wrath of Tarzan?" He spoke in English and the old man replied in the same tongue. "Traitor?" he exclaimed, in surprise. "Yes, TRAITOR!" thundered Tarzan. "Did you not hurry here to tell the Bolgani I was in the palace that they might send the Gomangani to lure me into a trap?"

"No," replied the other, "I came here to place myself near the white woman, thinking I could be of service to her or you. I come now, Englishman, to die at your side. For nothing can save you from the wrath of the Bolgani whose Emperor you have killed!" "Come, then," cried Tarzan, "it is better to die now than live in slavery forever!" Meanwhile, six Gomangani ranged themselves upon either side of Tarzan and LA. The seventh, he who had entered the chamber with Tarzan unarmed, was taking weapons from one of the slain gorilla-men lying dead upon the dais.

Before this array of force, so new to them, the Bolgani paused at the foot of the stairs. But only for a moment, for they were fifty against nine. Up the dais steps they surged. Tarzan and his Gomangani met them with battle ax and spear and bludgeon. But numbers were against Tarzan's people. Again the gorilla-men charged with what this time appeared certain success. Wave-like, they swept forward, when suddenly there broke on the ears of the contestants a frightful roar. It came from almost at their sides and brought a sudden, momentary lull in the battle.

SERVICES CLOSE ON GOOD FRIDAY BY COMMUNION

Rev. Brown Gives Final Address in George Street United Church.

HOUR OF TRIUMPH.

In journeying along the Jerusalem way, the goal was reached on Good Friday morning, when the adherents of the six United Churches of Peterborough joined in commemorating Christ's sacrifice at the Communion service held in George Street United Church.

The closing message of these Passion Week services was delivered by the Rev. George Brown, of Chalmers United Church, Kingston. Assisting him were Rev. Dr. A. I. Brown, who offered the opening prayer, and the pastor of the church, Rev. J. E. J. Millyard, who presided.

"It is an hour," said Rev. Mr. Brown, "when in humility and adoration we bow before Him, who is life itself. As we have travelled this week with Him along the Jerusalem way, we have gathered the choicest flowers in the garden of life. These choice blooms grow in the hearts of his followers, watered by the grace of God, and shone upon by His eternal loyalty.

"What gracious blessing we find in this spiritual garden, and in what strange places we gather the Passion flowers. On the hill of vision we meet God face to face, and the way of life opens out before us so that we cannot but follow it. Added to vision is the flower of steadfastness, which grows down near the fires of discipline, wrought by the anvil of loyalty, under the hammer of love.

"The flower of venture draws us out into undiscovered areas through our trust in God."

Must Have Passion Flower

"If we travel along this way we must have that passion flower, which the hot winds of hate cannot kill nor the breeze of self-satisfaction wither, nor will difficult ways chill it. We must pluck courage, which grows in the heart loyally committed to one purpose—the Will of God.

"This morning we garner the most precious of all these flowers, the red rose of triumph, which grows on Calvary's hill, where Christ unlocked the gates of death.

"That we never find life except out of death, is an essential truth. Man only meets God when he feels that all about him is dust and ashes.

"To-day we look upon the Cross solemnized by its sufferings, but what else do we see? Here is the greatest venture made in human experience—life rising out of death. What can we do but give ourselves to Him who died that we might have eternal life? All His earthly days Jesus looked forward to this time. When love should triumph. He believed to His last breath that the love of God could change those who reviled and mocked him."

Veil of Temple Rent

"Other things were happening at this time. The veil of the temple which concealed God from the people was rent from top to bottom, revealing the eternal love of God, reconciling the world to Himself.

"At this time, too, the graves opened, and the dead arose and entered into fellowship with the living. The same thing is happening now. There is no death—only life, and those who dwell in the eternal spirit of love are with us and we are all one in Christ.

"Surely this is the hour of triumph, when in utter revelation, God make Himself known to us and time becomes eternity. Like Christians, as we gave upon Calvary, our burdens fall off and we become "glad and lightsome," and go on our way singing to Him who, on the Cross, brought life to all."

During the service H. Ruthven McDonald brought in his beautiful vocal selection, "Come Unto Me," a message from the lips of Jesus. Also assisting in the music was the choir of George Street United Church, who sang for the offertory anthem, "Blessed is He That Cometh," with Miss Dorothy Sager the soloist.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Millyard assisted by the Rev. Dr. Brown, and representative elders from the various churches.

As the congregation bowed in silent prayer, the choir sang softly the "Passion Choral," and the Benediction was pronounced by the pastor bringing to a fitting climax the impressive series of Passion Week services.

PRESENT PAGEANT AT MARK STREET

Church Was Well Filled to Hear Beautiful Presentation.

Mark Street United Church was filled last evening for the presentation of the Easter Pageant, which was given in a beautiful setting. Given by the Gleaner Class and the pastor, Rev. C. D. Daniel, the pageant was the Easter Testimonies of the Passion of Our Lord.

All the characters were effectively costumed as priests, apostles, soldiers and women of the period of the crucifixion. The readers were the Rev. Mr. Daniel, Miss Mable Reynolds, Mrs. W. Binks and Mrs. Y. Eason.

The quartet of the bowling club sang between two acts and solos were sung by Miss Olive Howland and Mrs. H. Hunter. The accompaniment for the pageant was played by the orchestra of the St. James United Church. Mrs. V. Boorman was director of the pageant.

Site Of Prehistoric Indian Village Reveals Evidence Of Small Theatre

WASHINGTON, March 24. — A prototype of the American village opera house has been discovered in an ancient Indian village site in Mississippi. Word comes that Mr. Henry B. Collins, Jr., Smithsonian Institution archaeologist, has brought to light the ground plan of a building which might have been reconstructed as a small theatre with two tiers of seats capable of holding an audience of about 100 persons.

Mr. Collins found under the plowed surface of a cotton field concentric circular trenches, in the bottom of which were post holes. The outer trench, about 20 inches wide, contained post holes for heavy timbers such as might have been used to support a flat roof on a large circular house. The two inner trenches contained holes for smaller timbers. These might have constituted additional roof supports, or they might have been supports for tiers of seats.

The ground plan, Mr. Collins says, differs radically from that of a Creek or Cherokee Indian "town house." On the latter there was a peaked roof supported at the centre by heavy timbers sunk into the ground, and on the outside by a circle of lighter timbers The roof of the prehistoric structure must have been flat, since there is no trace of centre timbers.

In the centre of the ground plan of Mr. Collins 'discovery is a square outlined by four rows of post holes from 6 to 8 inches in diameter and 8 to 16 inches apart. This might have been a stage. Also, in the interior are two fire pits filled with ashes and refuse. They might have been used in religious ceremonies.

Mr. Collins suggests, as an alternative to the theatre hypothesis, that the same site might have been used for four buildings at different times since the floors are represented by different rows of post holes. But the fact remains, he says, "that the circular trenches and the square are arranged in such an orderly fashion as to suggest a single structure, or possibly a single-walled house that was later incorporated as part of a larger and more complex structure."

Obituary

MRS. WILLIAM ROBERTS

The death occurred this morning at Nicholls Hospital of Mary Louise Sawanson, beloved wife of William Roberts, of 164 Charlotte street, at the age of 65 years.

Mrs. Roberts, who was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Sawanson, was a native of Garden Hill. A few months ago she underwent a serious operation from which she made a remarkable recovery. Since then and until quite recently she had enjoyed comparatively good health, and her death came as a shock to her many friends and relatives.

Besides her husband she is survived by three brothers, and two sisters, Mrs. William Bridges and Mrs. H. Lockington, both of Port Hope.

The funeral is to be held on Monday at 1.30 p.m. from Comstock's Funeral Home to Little Lake Cemetery. Services will be conducted by the Rev. J. D. Paterson, rector of All Saints' Anglican Church.

MRS. EDWARD B. CLEGG.

Attended with the simple but impressive rites of the Anglican Church, the funeral of Mrs. Edward B. Clegg was held at St. John's Church on Friday afternoon with the Archdeacon Re . Dr. R. C. Blagrave officiating, assisted by the Rev. E. R. James.

A large congregation was present for the service in the church with which Mrs. Clegg was so closely identified during her entire lifetime. As the bier was being borne to its brief resting place at the foot of the chancel steps the surpliced choir which was in attendance under direction of Frederic D. Mann, chanted the nymn "When Our Heads Are Bowed With Woe." At a later period the choir and congregation sang "Abide With Me," a hymn which was one of the favorites of the deceased.

The scriptural lesson was read by the Rev. D. B. Rogers, editorial secretary of the G.B.R.E. Toronto, and a friend of the family. During the Holy Week servi which have been held at St. John's church, sympathetic refer.ce to the passing of Mrs. Clegg was made both by Archdeacon Blagrave and the Rev. Mr. James.

Besides her husband, Lieut.-Colonel E. B. Clegg, the deceased is survived by a daughter, Doris, of Toronto; son Gordon of this city, and a sister, Mrs. John Morrow, of Bolsevain, Manitoba.

The remains were borne to rest by the following pall-bearers: Dr. A. W. McPherson, Dr. J. D. Pentland, Colonel Arthur Stevenson, V. Eastwood, and Messrs. W. E. Lech and Alex Gibson.

MRS. ANDREW JOBE

The death occurred today of Hannah Marcay Dean beloved wife of Andrew Jobe of Bridgenorth, at the age of 60 years, following a lengthy illness.

The funeral is to be held on Monday at 2.30 p.m. from the residence of her daughter Mrs. Wallace Cruikshanks of Bridgenorth, with Archdeacon the Rev. Dr. R. C. Blagrave officiating. Interment at Little Lake cemetery, Peterborough.

GRETA DE LONG

Striking tribute was paid to the memory of Greta De Long, by her pastor, the Rev. C. D. Daniel of Mark Street United Church, in the funeral sermon which he preached at the family residence River road, on Friday afternoon. He spoke feelingly of Miss DeLong's service to the church as a member of the choir and as one who had always taken an active interest in the Young Peoples' organization and the Gleaners' Class.

That her winning personality had earned for her a large number of friends was evident by the masses of floral tributes that were received from the various church organizations and from her former associates at the Westclox factory.

The deceased who was only in her twenty-fifth year, is survived by her mother, and eight sister and two brothers.

The remains were borne to the grave by six brothers-in-law of the deceased, namely: Messrs. C. Jackson, K. Brown, Albert White, Charles Batchelor, C. Agnew and H. Mitchell.

Seven thousand five acres have been reclaimed for agriculture by planting trees in the desert country of Tripolitania.

TAGGERS OUT IN BAD WEATHER

Today's persistent rain, while it made the streets wet and drab, could not dampen the ardor of the courageous band of women and girls who were selling tags for the St. Vincent's Orphanage. The ordinary pedestrian hurried about the streets to get his business done and escape the wet, but the taggers stood stoutly on the corners eagerly distributing the tags. Several reported that despite the inclement weather which diminished the shopping crowd, they had a "good day."

MORNING DEVOTIONS

The Rev. William Allan, minister of Dovercourt Presbyterian church, Toronto, and former minister of St. Paul's Church, Peterborough, is to conduct the devotions over CFRB at 8.30 next week on Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings. Mr. Allan will be assisted by Wishart Campbell as pianist and soloist.

NOW IS TIME TO LAY PLANS FOR GARDENS

Horticultural Society Endeavoring to Arouse Interest in City.

A HOME WITH FLOWERS

In many homes throughout the land these days, the man of the house is spending a considerable portion of his time planning for the day which is fast approaching when he can once again begin the annual cultivation of his garden.

Seed catalogues are being consulted, and rusty garden tools that were put away at the end of last summer are being resurrected from some obtrusive corner of the summer kitchen.

Peterborough is no exception to the general rule, especially when one stops to consider the live Horticultural Society which is functioning with its usual vigor, as recently revealed plans go to prove. The various contests which the local horticulturists have organized, will doubtless go a long way towards stimulating extra effort on the part of local flower and vegetable growers.

The Canadian Horticultural Council is again endeavoring to arouse interest, by a well organized campaign in which it is pointed out that a few flowers or a stretch of grass makes a tremendous difference to the appearance of the home and consequently to the city or town.

A communication from the Horticultural Council, commenting on the good effects of well kept gardens and home surroundings, has the following to say: "We are influenced to a greater extent than we realize by our surroundings. Children are particularly sensitive in this regard. Surely a home in and around which flowers are grown is a better place to bring up children than a home where no attention whatever is paid to these friends of the plant kingdom. As the twig is bent, the tree is inclined, is an old saying and very applicable in connection with the training of children. If children are taught to love flowers and to become familiar with them their hearts will be filled with love for these things which will leave less room in their hearts and minds for the things that hurt and destroy. We frequently meet with the objection that gardens and flowers cost too much, or that they take too much time. The truth is that it is not so much a matter of money or time as it is a desire and disposition. If we are disposed to have gardens and flowers and really desire to have attractive home surroundings, we will have them, no matter how busy we may be. Your nearest Experimental Farm or Agricultural College will gladly give you information regarding suitable varieties for your district. The cost in any event need be only trifling, and the amount spent on the nursery stock necessary to improve the average size home, will be one of the finest investments that can possibly be made. It will pay great dividends in satisfaction and will increase the value of the home. Your individual efforts in making your home more attractive will improve your street. If your street is improved your city or town will be improved, and if your city or town is made more beautiful you have helped to make a more beautiful Canada."

DE VALERA STILL FIRM FOR ABOLISHING OATH

DUBLIN, Mar. 26.—(AP)—Eamon De Valera, President of the Irish Free State executive council, today reiterated in an interview his government's intention to remove from the Free State constitution the oath of allegiance to the crown.

"It must go at all costs," he said, for it is an offensive test which the Irish people cannot tolerate.

He said his government will not reply befor Tuesday to the note from the British government concerning the oth and the payment of the Irish land annuities. The British view is that the oath is an integral part of the treaty which established the free state, and that the Irish government is bound to continue payment of the land annuities.

TORONTO YOUTH FATALLY SHOT IN WILD CHASE

Constable Returns Fire as Four Lads Flee in Stolen Car.

CORNERED IN LANE.

Two Escape But Third is Captured and Tells Names of Companions.

TORONTO, Mar. 28. (CP)—One youth is dead and another under arrest to-day, following a running gunfight through city streets in the course of police pursuit of a stolen car Sunday night. Search for two others who were in the car continues.

Albert Heward, 17, of Toronto, an occupant of the stolen car, was fatally wounded during the interchange of shots between the youths and Motorcycle Constable Peter Thornton, pursuing the car at break-neck pace through the downtown section. Constable finally cornered it in a narrow lane. Three of the youths jumped out, two escaping, while the fourth lay mortally wounded in the car.

One Arrested

Arthur Thurston, 17, was arrested. He gave the names of the other two in the car as Thomas Sheppard, 18, and Harold Schlunsky 19, of Kitchener. All three were inmates of the Working Boys' Home, while Heward had been there until recently.

Constable Thornton said the youths opened fire on him as he drove after them, after vainly ordering them to halt. Several times, he said, they forced him off the pavement in their headlong flight. Driven into a narrow lane the speedy pursuit ended. While he held one youth, the constable said two others escaped. He observed Heward, wounded in the car.

After summoning a police ambulance and tending Heward, Thornton took Thurston to a nearby police station. The youth was charged with automobile theft. The car was later identified and returned to its owner, a local resident. Meanwhile, Heward had been rushed to hospital where he died of a hemorrhage of the lungs.

Pistol is Found

Early to-day an automatic pistol believed to have been used by the car thieves in firing at Constable Thornton was found. It was lying inside the fence railing surrounding Osgoode Hall. It had been fired seven times and jammed.

Pawlawa was found shot at the foot of a stairway in a Harbour street house, where a birthday party was in progress. A bullet had pierced his intestintes in four places. Special Constable John Boyzcum is held as a material witness. Five others are also held by police, all having been present at the party. A revolver was found at the foot of the stairway.

REAL CANADIAN WRITERS ARE NOT NUMEROUS

Only Comprise Five or Six in All, Rotarian Gordon Conant of Oshawa Declares.

GIVES HIS LIST.

Visiting Speaker Delights Club With Readings of Drummond Poems.

That the writers who were distinctly and definitely Canadian in their contributions to literature only numbered about five or six was the theory advanced before the Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon today by Rotarian Gordon Conant of Oshawa, whose address was one of the most refreshing to which the club has had the pleasure of listening.

Rotarian Conant remarked that he had no criticism to offer of those Canadian writers who had achieved fame through work that was not Canadian in its setting or in its characteristics. In this connection he mentioned the novel "Wild Geese" by that young Canadian author, Martha Ostenso which as first written had its locale in Saskatchewan with Canadian scenes and characters, but was refused acceptance by the American publishers unless the characters became American and the scenes of the novel shifted to Wisconsin or North Dakota There were however five or six Canadian writers whose literary product even if it had been published anonymously, would be instantly recognized as essentially Canadian and these authors so submitted were Pauline Johnston, Peter McArthur, Robert W. Service, Stephen Leacock, Merrell Dennistown and Dr. William Henry Drummond. Pauline Johnston the Indian poetess was in personality and in her poetry indigenous to this half of the North America, and her poems, notably 6,000 MILE HOP.

CAPE TOWN, March 28 (C.P. Cable). — Crashing on the beach here J. A. Cuts Off 14 Hours.

Mollison's time was 4 days 17 hours 19 minutes. The record was 5 days 8 hours, set by Peggy Salaman and Gordon Store of London last November.

After completing the crossing of the Sahara, a 2,000-mile flight with two or three stops, including an hour on the desert for rest, Mollison struck directly down the west coast of Africa, a new route for airmen. He flew throughout the last three nights. He reached Walrus Bay this morning, and proceeded directly here after a brief rest.

Terrific Ordeal

WOLVES BAY, Southwest Africa, March 28.—Mollison looked haggard when he stepped out of the cockpit here after his terrific ordeal, but he was calm and self-possessed as

Three of the city employees worked on Saturday night keeping the creek clear of ice, and a small jam was easily broken up where the creek enters Little Lake near George street wharf.

VILLAGERS' FIGHT TO HALT HOLOCAUST PROVES VAIN; JURY BRINGS IN ACCIDENTAL DEATH VERDICT

FLINTON, Ont., Mar. 28.—(CP)—Inhabitants of this village today prepared to attend the funeral of five persons, four of them members of one family, burned to death in an early morning fire yesterday.

Overheated stovepipes were thought to have caused destruction of the small general store and tenement house of Mrs. Almeta Beckworth, 82, which the lives of the aged owner and four tenants, Mrs. Leo Cassibo, 32; Raymond Cassibo, 7; Elmira Cassibo, 6; and Rudolph Cassibo, 5.

Fire started in the store, at the rear of which Mrs. Beckworth occupied a small apartment. The woman called for help awakening Leo Cassibo, whose family lived on the second story of the little frame building. Cassibo rushed downstairs and attempted to rescue his aged landlady, but flames barred his entrance to her rooms.

Above him he heard the cries of his wife, trapped with her children in their room by flames which broke through the floor after he had descended the stairs. Cassibo strove to mount the stairs but was driven back by smoke and intense heat. He shouted instructions to his wife to drop the children from the window and jump herself, but she appeared not to hear him.

Drop Son Out Window

As he fought his way down the stairs again he saw his four-year-old son Ralph who had followed him when he rose to investigate the first alarm. He dropped the child from a window opening off the stairs to the ground below and made his way to the open air.

Neighbors sought to extinguish the flames but the fire had made too much headway and the building was quickly reduced to a pile of embers from which the bodies of the victims were later recovered.

Dr. C. M. Stratton, district coroner at Napanee, 50 miles to the south, arrived during the day and conducted an inquest. The jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

Toronto Press Hints Tories Dissatisfied With Present Situation.

New Taxes—Hydro Battle.

TORONTO, March 28.—Imposition of new and increased taxation and the battle on Hydro which arose in the session of the Ontario Legislature have Conservative circles wondering what the next move will be." The Toronto Telegram says to-day. "What is heard from members of the Conservative Party in the House, and even members of the Cabinet, leads to the belief that all is not well, and talk has already arisen that Tories are turning their eyes eastward toward the forthcoming arrival on Thursday of Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Canadian High Commissioner, who will be in Ottawa to testify before the Senate Committee on Beauharnois.

In the dying days of the session, Conservative members expressed no little discontent with matters generally, both in regard to policies laid down by the Government and new and increased taxation, and the stand on Hydro," the newspaper declares.

The Globe to-day says: "Ontario Conservatives may avail themselves of the forthcoming visit to Canada of Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, High Commissioner to Britain, to appeal to him to return to Provincial politics and 'save the situation. There is a growing demand among the rank and file of the party, The Globe was informed over the week-end, for a reorganization at Queen's Park and the establishment of leadership that knows what it is heading and what it plans to do."

BLAST DAMAGES IRRIGATION LINE

NEAR DOUKHOBOR COLONY

NELSON, B.C., Mar. 28.—A dynamiting of the irrigation pipeline of the Christian Community of Universal Brotherhood conveying water from Pass Creek to Brilliant and an attempted dynamiting of a $4,000 combined tractor-grader belonging to the British Columbia Department of Public Works, parked in the Thrums area, were recorded Saturday.

Actual damage was small, for only a couple of feet of the pipe, two feet in diameter, and braced with iron hoop around the staves, was destroyed.

The irrigation system was constructed about 20 years ago, and serves the fertile flat extending from Isteigar to Brilliant.

In the case of the attempt to destroy the government power-grader, which was parked for the night in one of the gravel pits, between Thrums and Brilliant, failure of the fuse to perform its intended function was all that saved the machine.

Peter Veregin, president of the Christian Community of Universal Brotherhood, who was concluding a three-day stay at Brilliant when the new outrage occurred, left Nelson Saturday for the prairies.

2ND TORNADO HITS ALABAMA TAKING 6 LIVES

Twister Closely Follows Last Week's Path in Devastated Areas.

TERRIFIC HAIL STORM.

Snow Falls in Sections, Cold Adding to Suffering of Injured.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. Mar. 28. — Another tornado dipped into Alabama yesterday and added six deaths to the 362 caused by freak spring storms in the south just a week ago today.

The Easter Sunday twister struck hard into Central Alabama and then swept into Georgia with diminished force leaving wreckage and scores of injured in its wake. High winds whipped through sections of Louisiana and Tennessee likewise with damaging results.

By coincidence, the second tornado followed the path of its predecessors closely in Alabama and the fatalities were near the communities where others died last week. Four were killed at Lawley, two died at Pleasant Grove.

Rain and hail accompanied the windstorm and stones the size of baseballs were reported at Cordova, Ala. They stripped foliage from trees, battered in automobile tops, smashed windows and even killed livestock. There was a snow storm at Sparta, Tenn.

Scores Injured

Buchanan and Corinth near the Alabama border were the hardest hit of the Georgia towns. Approximately two score were injured and houses and outbuildings flung to the ground by the twisting wind.

Wreckage and debris were whirled through the air and scattered over the storm area.

Storm damage and injuries were reported at Chattanooga, Tenn., and Zwolle, La.

Last Monday, a series of tornadoes skipped across five States, killing 298 in Alabama, 40 in Georgia, 18 in Tennessee, 3 in Kentucky and 3 in South Carolina. Property damage estimates ranged as high as $5,000,000. Hundreds were injured and thousands left homeless. Yesterday's storm brought the total fatalities to 368.

Heavy loss of livestock was reported along with the property damage, dead and injured yesterday.

The American Red Cross and other relief agencies had just established centers for aiding the first storm sufferers and begun to work out a rehabilitation program when the second struck.

DENIES RUMOR ON REPUDIATION

MacWhite Claims Free State Land Annuities Position Misunderstood.

ISSUES STATEMENT.

WASHINGTON, Mar. 28. (AP)— Michael MacWhite, minister of the Irish Free State issued a statement to-day denying that his government proposes a repudiation of land annuities.

He said the Irish Free State's position with regard to land annuities has been misunderstood here and questions the statement of J. H. Thomas, British Secretary for the Dominions, that the Irish Free State "was bound by the most formal and explicit undertaking" to pay the land annuities to Great Britain.

MacWhite said the Irish Government is not aware of any such undertaking, but relies on an act of the British legislature passed in 1920 in which Great Britain surrendered the annuities to Ireland and assumed the obligation to meet the dividends and the general service of the land stock debt.

The statement said that was British law when the treaty with Ireland was signed in 1921, and the treaty did not mention the annuities. Consequently, MacWhite insists, the legal position of the annuities is the same as it was in 1920, when Great Britain agreed to reimburse Ireland for overtaxation.

EASTER WEEK-END IN IRELAND MOST PEACEFUL IN DOZEN YEARS

Republican Army Marches — Armed Police Check Demonstrations.

"ENGLAND ONLY ENEMY."

DUBLIN, Mar. 28. (CP)—President Eamon de Valera's government found itself fortified to-day following one of the most peaceful, but demonstrative Easter week-ends in a dozen years.

In demonstrations throughout the country yesterday thousands of men and women, members of the Republic Army and other organizations sounded a call for an Irish Republic, supported de Valera's plan to abolish the oath to the crown and the land annuities.

Processions in commemoration of the Easter disturbance of 1916 were held throughout the length and breadth of Ireland yesterday. Those who took part were unarmed, and the Free State Army was confined to barracks. The men of the "Republican Army" marched silently in Dublin, with faces set, but well-behaved.

Orations At Graves

At the graves of their comrades who fell in the disturbance 16 years ago they restated their resolve to set up a republic, smash the Anglo-Irish Treaty and remove British interests from Ireland.

At Cavan, where the procession was half a mile long, Maude Gonne McBride, declared in an address that "De Valera is making a great stand against England, our only enemy in the world."

The Republican Army, in a statement read at the celebrations throughout the country, declared

JAMES CAPREOL IS LAID TO REST

Funeral of Railway Pioneer's Son is Held in Cobourg.

87 YEARS OLD.

TORONTO, March 28. — James Lonsdale Capreol, K.C., member of one of the oldest families in Toronto and son of Frederick Chase Capreol, promoter of Canada's first steam railway, died early Good Friday morning at his home, 63 Admiral Road, in his eighty-seventh year.

He was born in Toronto, his father having come first to Canada in 1823 to settle the affairs of the North West Fur Company, returning to Toronto, or York, as it was then known, with his wife in 1833. James Lonsdale was his eldest son and was born in the Capreol house on Wellington Street. About the year 1840 his father disposed of his property in Toronto, where he had extensive holdings, and took his family to France, settling in St. Omer, where his father resided. James Lonsdale received his education at Winchester School in England and later Lysee Imperial at St. Omer, the national military school of France at that time. About the year 1843 his father father brought the family back to Canada, establishing his home once again in Toronto, and James Lonsdale completed his education at Osgoode Hall and became the youngest practicing barrister in Ontario. He was a veteran of the Fenial Raid of 1866, serving with the Trinity College Company, which was affiliated with the Queen's Own Rifles, in which regiment he held a commission for many years.

Rev. Robert S. Rayson, curate of St. Thomas's Anglican Church, which he attended, conducted the funeral service at his late residence on Saturday morning, and the interment was in St. Peter's Cemetery, Cobourg. The pallbearers were: Sir Frederic Stupart, D'Eyncourt Strickland, Dr. J. S. Archibald, Charles Swabey, Lionel Cross and H. Gordon Ramsay.

SAVED FROM ANGRY BULL

BRANTFORD, March 28. — The presence of mind of Earl Doolittle, student at the Mohawk Indian Institute, probably saved another student, Wilson Secord, from serious injury. Secord, against the rules of the school, entered the pen in which a young bull was kept, whereupon the animal attempted to attack the youngster. Doolittle, seeing his companion's plight, managed to keep the bull from goring the Secord boy, who escaped with a cut over the eye. He was able to be out and about his chores again yesterday.

New Boat to Span Ocean in 3 Days

POTSDAM, Germany, March 28 (C.P.).—Nicholas Beilin, 28-year old engineer, has built a boat, resembling a whale, with an aeroplane motor atop the tail, which he says he believes can span the ocean between Liverpool and New York in less than three days.

The craft is equipped with a 276 horse-power motor, which Beilin said would give it a speed of 62 miles an hour. After testing the boat this spring, he said, he would attempt a trip around the world, travelling east. He estimated that it would take him 150 days.

BUDGET STAND OF U.S. WORRIES BRITISH PRESS

Sees Rise of Pound to Unjustifiably High Level if Dollar Fails.

CONFIDENCE WAVERING.

Claim Hoover and Nation's Leaders Flinching From Facing Trouble.

LONDON, March 28 (C.P.). — British newspapers showed considerable agitation to-day over the recent action of the United States House of Representatives on the tax bill and expressed concern over the possible effect on the pound of a failure to balance the United States budget for 1932.

The speculations were mixed with comment on "collapse of party machinery" in Washington, and what the Times called "an irresponsible state of mind" in Congress.

The chief concern, however, was over the possibility that a fall in the dollar on international exchange might cause the pound rise to an unjustifiably high level.

Go Off Gold Standard.

Referring to what it called the "irresponsible state of mind" of the House of Representatives, the Times declared that if a bill providing for payment of the soldiers' bonus also were to become a law "it is difficult to see how the United States could remain on the gold standard or escape inflation even more disastrous than the present deflation."

The Daily Telegraph speculated editorially upon what it called the "startling lesson conveyed by proof of the world's shaken confidence in the dollar."

The Labor-Socialist Herald looked upon the position of the United States as a warning and said President Hoover and other leaders of the nation were "flinching from the reality of the disease."

"No local remedies can effect anything," the Herald said. "The only hope is a world reorganization of trade, and, above all, a world reorganization of currency that will deliver producers everywhere from the source of falling prices."

INDIAN PRINCES' CHAMBER SITS

Lord Willingdon Predicts New Era in Constitutional History Shortly.

PROTECTION GUARANTEED.

NEW DELHI, India, March 28 (C. and A.P. Cable).—The 11th meeting of the Indian Chamber of Princes was opened to-day by Earl Willingdon, Viceroy of India, in a dazzling setting of glittering jewels, gorgeous silken robes and royal pomp.

"It is my firm belief," Lord Willingdon said, "That we shall before long inaugurate a new era in India's constitutional history," commenting on the emergency ordinances put in force by the Government to deal with the civil disobedience movement. He added: "Repression by force cannot be an end in itself. But I am determined, at all costs, to secure and maintain peaceful conditions under which alone such progress can be made."

Lord Willingdon assured the Princes that Great Britain would continue to guarantee them protection not only against the activities of the Nationalist Congress but against subversive tendencies from any source.

Discussing the willingness of the Princes to enter into the proposed new federated India, the Viceroy added: "I sympathize keenly with your doubts and misgivings in embarking on this new adventure, but it is a source of great satisfaction that you have recently reached decisions not inconsistent with the early establishment of a Federal system in India."

The church is to be demolished and all the ornaments of St. Andrew's, from lofty reredos of stone and alabaster down to the ribbon of the smallest service book, furnished the church by Rev. Dr. Webb with the help of wealthy friends in accordance with the highest canons of ecclesiastical taste, are to be sent to a new church being built in one of the outer suburbs of London.

WEYBRIDGE, Surrey, Eng., Mar. 28.—(Associated Press Cable.)— Sir Horace Plunkett, Irish leader who promoted co-operative farming in his country and used in efforts to settle the political differences between Ireland and Great Britain, died here Saturday night at the age of 77 years.

He long had been out of active politics, having retired from the Irish Free State Senate in 1922, after an attempt was made by Irish irregulars to burn his mansion Kilteragh, in County Dublin. Thereafter he made his home in England.

At the age of 75, Sir Horace took flying lessons, declaring he felt safer in the air than in a London taxicab.

He was knighted by King Edward in 1903.

JAPAN REFUSES TO GIVE LEAGUE HER STATEMENT

Withholding of Her Side of Controversy May Lead to Withdrawal from Assemby.

FIRST OF MANY STEPS.

(By Glenn Babb, A.P. Staff Correspondent)

TOKYO, March 28.—The Japanese Government has decided to refuse to furnish the League of Nations with the statement of her side of the Japanese controversy called for under Article 15 of the League Covenant, it was learned on good authority to-day, and the belief was expressed that the decision eventually might lead to Japan's withdrawal from the League.

The step was forecast nearly two months ago when China invoked Article 15 at Geneva, shortly after the beginning of hostilities at Shanghai.

The article, one of the two extreme measures provided for in the covenant, specifies that nations on both sides of a controversy shall submit statements of their cases, upon which the League may then make its decision of responsibility.

The prediction also was made at that time that Japan would resist even to the extent of withdrawing from the League, if the application of the article were pressed.

Series of Refusals

Well-informed quarters here today expressed the opinion that the Government's decision was the first step in what would be a series of refusals of Japan to participate in the league's action, and it was learned on good authority that it was highly unlikely the Japanese delegation at Geneva would attend the next session of the League Assembly.

A request for the statement called for under Article 15, was recently requested by Sir Eric Drummond League secretary-general, and this action appeared to have crystallized sentiment in favor of withdrawal which lately has been gaining rapidly, especially in Foreign Office circles.

Enemies Deadlocked Over Terms Of Peace

SHANGHAI, Mar. 28.—(A.P.)—Chinese and Japanese negotiations for a truce at Shanghai continued deadlocked to-day over the question of Japanese troop withdrawals.

The Chinese delegates held steadfastly to their decision to accept no compromises on this phase of the question, declaring this was the order of the Nanking Government. "They must either withdraw entirely or not at all," a spokesman said. "We will accept no gradual withdrawal."

JAPS FIGHTING IN MANCHURIA

Small Force Blocks Insurgent Army on Road to Changchun.

MANY CHINESE SLAIN.

CHANGCHUN, Manchuria, Mar. 28.—(AP)—Japanese military aviators bombed insurgent concentrations north of Nungan today and the aviators, returning here, reported they believed the Chinese casualties were heavy.

They said they saw a small Japanese force with a contingent of Hsi Hsia's Kirin provincial troops facing an insurgent advance in the Nungan district and they considered it a serious menace to Changchun, the capital, itself. A portion of General Jiro Tamon's Japanese division at Harbin prepared immediately to proceed to Nungan.

Japanese military intelligence reports indicated the rebel force numbered 7,000, including several units of Hsi Hsia's troops which have gone over to the enemy.

Reinforcements Sent

Hsi Hsia also sent reinforcements from Kirin to Changchun preparatory to defending the capital.

The rebels, under the command of Li Hai-Tsing, apparently were using the rich city of Pu-Yu, which they captured March 16, as a base and were in full control of the district south of there, having occupied several towns, including Kuarhlossu.

The latter place is the capital city of Prince Chai, representative of inner Mongolia in the new federated Changchun regime. The Prince who is still here, was unable to communicate with his subordinates back home.

"How to make my old short skirts conform to the new length was a problem to me until I hit on this plan. I dropped the hems; and as the part that had been turned under was darker than the rest, I re-dyed the entire dress, after having bleached the goods, following directions in the Diamond Dyes package.

"I used Diamond Dyes for the re-dyeing, of course. I have dyed many things with these wonderful colors. They have saved me many dollars and have never failed to give perfect results—smooth, even colors—fast to wear and washing. Friends think my things are new when I re-dye or tint them with Diamond Dyes. They do give the most gorgeous colors!"

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

A unique April Fools' Party is one in which things are done in a reversed or backward order.

* * * * * * *

For example girls wear dresses backwards, that is, with the front at the back. Small rugs, mat sizes are hung on the wall and pictures minus frames are positioned on the floor as rugs.

* * * * * * *

Other pictures are hung upside down. A few books and magazines are on sofas and chairs while cushions are placed on the tables and book cases.

* * * * * * *

The picture rugs can be posters stiff and sturdy in themselves or they can be large pictorial pages from newspapers pasted to cloth to give them body.

* * * * * * *

Place three scrap baskets ranging in size in a graduated row. Tally cards, a hand mirror and three bean bags finish the equipment.

* * * * * * *

Each player in turn stands at a designated distance from the row of baskets and holds the hand mirror in the right hand. Taking each of the bags in turn with the left hand and gazing in the mirror to take aim he throws a bag over his shoulder in an attempt to land it in one of the baskets.

* * * * * * *

The smallest basket scores 20, the largest 5 and the other 10. Every time a player looks over his shoulder to take aim, instead of in the mirror his score gets minus 10.

* * * * * * *

The player whose score is highest at the end of a set of rounds, wins the prize. The number of turns in a set is decided by the hostess.

* * * * * * *

For the Mirror March, partners are secured by matching numbers written backward on cards. There must be two of a kind.

* * * * * * *

Eno is one, owt is two, eerist is three, etc. Partners in turn are given the hand mirror and looking in it they proceed arm in arm to walk backwards around a room. A fine is imposed for looking over the shoulder.

* * * * * * *

A different arrangement of obstacles for each couple to avoid should be made, but no obstacles should be too small to be readily detected in the glass.

* * * * * * *

* * * * * * *

Leaders are chosen to act as teachers and they pick pupils by turn. The pupils are ranked in two opposing rows. In rotation the teachers must ask pupils from opposing teams to spell backwards any word they select of not more than five letters.

* * * * * * *

The questions are given down a line from head to foot as in spelling matches. A player who does backward spelling incorrectly is attached to the opposing line.

* * * * * * *

When a halt is called the shortest line is the winning team as it represents the best backward spellers.

CULBERTSON on CONTRACT

READING THE LANGUAGE OF BIDS

Contract Bridge bidding furnishes the opportunity for the drawing of the most delicate inferences from partner's bids made under varying conditions. Accurate reading of these bids is the soul of Contract, and the perfect partnership at the Bridge table can make bids which to less experienced players appear daring, if not foolhardy, but are absolutely safe and based upon correct inferences drawn from what partner has said or failed to say.

In today's hand, a game contract at notrump was reached by apparently daring, but actually extremely accurate bidding. The contract so made was fulfilled by no less accurate play.

Neither side vulnerable.

South—Dealer.

	♠ 10 4 ♡ A Q 8 ◇ Q J 7 ♣ A 8 4 3 2
♠ 9 5 2 ♡ K J 4 3 ◇ 10 6 ♣ Q J 9 5		♠ A K 7 6 3 ♡ 7 5 ◇ K 5 4 2 ♣ 10 7
	♠ Q J 8 ♡ 10 9 6 2 ◇ A 9 8 3 ♣ K 6

The Bidding:

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1♣	1♠
1NT(1)	Pass	2NT	Pass
3NT(2)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—South's bid of one notrump carries with it two distinct inferences. It shows a stopper in the spade suit which has been adversely bid and it also discloses a hand stronger than would have been shown by a minimum notrump Takeout of partner's uncontested bid.

2—South, in addition to having a stopper in the suit adversely bid, has many strong intermediates. Note the important roles taken by these intermediates in the subsequent play of the hand.

Against the contract of three notrump, West opened the highest card of his partner's bid suit, the nine of spades. When the Dummy went down, both East and South made it the object of thoughtful consideration. East, when he noticed that the Ace of diamonds was missing from the Dummy, was certain that he was without a sure card of re-entry. If he was to defeat the contract, he must be able to bring in his spade suit and not content himself with only 2 tricks in that suit. He, therefore, rightly refused to win the first round of the suit. From his failure to win this trick, South was able to draw the inference that his hand lacked a sure, or even a probable, entry outside his bid suit. Upon this basis he planned the play and proceeded to put the plan into execution. Winning the first trick with the spade Queen, he led the two of hearts and when West played a low card, he played the eight in the Dummy, taking the double finesse against the King and Knave of hearts. When the eight spot held the trick, he then laid down the Queen of diamonds which East refused to cover and continued with the Knave hoping to catch the Ten and Ace in West's hand. When the Ten fell on the second round, the seven of diamonds was led and overtaken with the nine, East holding fast to the King. A heart was then led from the closed hand and the Queen finessed after which the Ace of hearts was led, making West's King the high card in that suit. The deuce of clubs from Dummy was won with the King in the closed hand and the Ace of diamonds was led. South then cashed the Ace of clubs and conceded the remaining 3 tricks to the opposition. Had East won the first two rounds of spades and established the suit, South could then have made five-odd, as West in the play of the hand would have been squeezed, thus costing the defense an extra trick. The moral of this is that good play, even though it fails in accomplishing the most you hope for, will at least minimize the extent of your disaster.

TODAY'S POINTER

Question: What is the point value of the second game?

Answer: About 500 points. A loss of 3 tricks, doubled, by the non-vulnerable side, nets them a gain of 100 points.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

REDUCING WEIGHT INTELLIGENTLY.

You are putting on weight, and have decided that you are going to get rid of the fat, and keep well rid of it. As you look back you can remember just about when your weight began to increase; in fact you had previously been so thin that the addition of this extra weight was really very welcome.

There are two periods in life when extra weight seems to come to men and women; one is at the age of puberty, 14 to 17, and the other as they near the age of thirty.

The increase at puberty, if not too much, is really of help as it 'fills out' the frame, and gives the surplus weight to use in games or or as a safeguard in sickness. If, however, the growing boy or girl becomes a regular 'roly poly' of fat at this time then the grandular changes which occur at this time are not adjusted properly, usually the thyroid gland in the neck being to blame. When this gland is not doing its work properly, it does not burn the fat up completely, and overweight results. It is overactivity of this gland that prevents the accumulation of even a normal amount of fat on the individual, and he becomes very 'skinny' in fact.

So if you are overweight, and there was not a great increase of weight at puberty, then you can hardly blame the gland system for it, and would not be justified in using gland extracts to reduce your weight.

If your weight came on at the age of 25 to 30 years, it can usually be attributed to the changes in your manner of living. Where formerly you worked hard at your usual ocupation and went out every evening on athletic or social activities, at this age you settled away or settled down more to your work or ocupation, stopped playing the very athletic games and cut down on your evening social activities also.

Now getting settled away in your life's work, so that you 'new' what your work was to be, lessened the worry or anxiety as compared with the previous few years, and lack of worry will allow weight to accumulate.

Added to these three things — less Worry, less active exercise, less social activity, more leisure to eat, your ability to purchase food you like, should just about tell you why your weight increased.

Therefore when you decide to reduce your weight think over what you know brought on your extra weight, and you'll know how to go about reducing it.

THIS DOCTOR NOT AFRAID OF THE 'FLU

Dr. Robt. G. Jackson says positively colds, 'flu, pneumonia will not attack him. He says: "For everyone protection is only a matter of properly developing their natural defenses," as he directs in his book "How to Be Always Well." Formerly, he had colds winter and summer, but he had his last cold in 1913 and declares he will never have another. He escapes by keeping his blood alkaline through eating alkali-forming foods, proper care of the skin, proper breathing, exercising, clothing, etc., but the chief thing is alkaline food. His chief protective food is alkali-forming Roman Meal (the only alkali-forming food made from grains), helped out by other alkaline foods listed in "How to Be Always Well." Eat Roman Meal and write for his free booklet, "HOW TO KEEP WELL," and other literature, also sample of Roman Meal and Kofy-sub, the new alkaline beverage, to ROBT. G. EASTER SUNDAY IS JOYOUS DAY

City Churches Are Filled With Worshippers.

SPECIAL MUSIC.

"Hallelujh, He has risen" rang out joyously in full-throated anthems in crowded Peterborough churches yesterday during the impressive Easter services. All the churches were thronged at all services by worshippers eager for the hope fulfillment message that is the heart throb of Easter joy.

Altars were decked with Easter flowers, narcissus, tulips, and hyacinths in glad array, which dispelled sweet fragrance throughout the churches. Trained choirs augmented by singers of fame from Toronto and larger centres, gave vocal expression in ringing anthems to the swelling joy. Ministers preached special sermons which voiced the message of redemption and life hereafter with all its uplifting challenge to nobler things. Congregations joined passionately in the services, moved and touched by the glad tidings of Easter.

At St. Pauls Presbyterian church, Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr, the pastor, continued his series of "Life's Ultimate Questions" answering the question "Is Man Immortal?" The choir sang selections from "The Messiah".

The choir, assisted by the minister, Rev. C. D. Daniel, presented a poetical and musical interpretation of the Easter message at Mark Street United Church in the evening. Mr. Daniel in the morning having preached a sermon on the subject, "The Easter Message, To-day."

Glad Easter music marked the Easter services at St. Andrew's United Church with Dr. C. V. McLean giving the Easter sermons from the pulpit. Easter anthems and Easter themes marked the services at Knox Church. "If Christ had not arisen" and "The Immortal Soul" were the subjects of sermons at Trinity Church by Rev. David Wren, the minister.

A sacred cantata was sung in the evening at Murray Street Baptist Church and in the morning the minister, Rev. J. B. Sutcliffe, preached the message, "The Life That Lasts."

The large audience at Gospel Hall last evening will not soon forget the description of Calvary and the Garden Tomb,. Harold Harper visited both of these places when he travelled through Europe, Egypt and Palestine several years ago.

Mr. Harper described very vividly the hill outside the wall of the old city of Jerusalem which many Bible scholars believe to be the spot whereon the cross was erected 1900 years ago. The evangelist touchingly told of his visit to that sacred spot and his impressions when there. He pointed out that the work accomplished at Calvary by the Lord Jesus enabled God to save guilty sinners.

Mr. Harper said that very close to that "hill old and gray" is a rock hewn tomb thought by many to be the very tomb in which the body of our Lord rested between death and resurrection.

Each night this week at 8 o'clock Mr. Harper will continue with these travel gospel talks on Palestine.

NORFOLK GROUP SEEK LINDBERGH

POLICE STANDING OFF.

NORFOLK, Va., March 28.—Negotiations for the return of the kidnapped Lindbergh baby apparently were to shift to the Hopewell, N.J., neighborhood to-day.

John Hughes Curtis, one of the Norfolk men seeking to intervene with the kidnappers or their agents, said last night that he and his associates will confer with Colonel Lindberg to-day. The Virginian pilot quoted him as saying that the conference would be at or near Hopewell.

Carefully guarding the destination of a mysterious week-end airplane trip for the purpose of meeting the child's adductors, Curtis upon his return told newspaper men he believed negotiations had reached a "semi-final" stage. He was visibly encouraged but refused to say whether he actually had made contact with representatives of the kidnappers who approached him on March 9.

Expect Results.

Dean H. Dobson-Peacock, former Canadian rector and another of the intervenors, appeared even more elated and said, "We expect sometime this week to have the baby either in our hands or in the hands of Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh."

Admiral Guy H. Burrage, the third Norfolk intervenor, declined to comment on the progress of negotiations.

Although veiling in secrecy the time of the meeting with Colonel Lindbergh, Mr. Curtis said that it would be completed before 7.30 p.m. to-day, when he will meet with newspaper men.

Norfolk police have assumed a hands-off policy, although Chief S. W. Ironmonger said he was aware negotiations were under way and that two of his men were assigned to the case. One of these, Leon Nowlitzky, a detective, said he believed that the negotiations would reach a happy culmination despite wat he termed "premature" publicity.

LONDON FOG RUINING CLEOPATRA'S NEEDLE

It Stood 3,000 Years of Egyptian Sun

London.—Cleopatra's Needle, the ancient obelisk that stands on Thames embankment, is crumbling away before the attack of London's fog.

Fifty-four years in London fog have done to it what 3,000 years of the sun and rain and sand of Egypt could not. It stood in Egypt when Abraham walked in the sands. Cleopatra saw it, and Moses played around it when he was a toddling infant.

7-FOOT WEDDING CAKE FOR LORD MAYOR'S SON

2,000 People Invited—Bride Miss du Cros, Will Promise to Obey

London.—Miss Marjorie du Cros, daughter of Sir Arthur du Cros, will promise to "obey" when she marries Mr. Richard Jenks, son of the Lord Mayor of London, Sir Maurice Jenks, at St. Lawrence Jewry, near the Guildhall, on April 9.

The old marriage service with the word "obey" will be used.

A huge wedding cake is being made in the Mansion House kitchens. Mr. Frederick George Bowles, the Lord Mayor's chef, is doing the mixing and baking himself.

The cake is to have four tiers, supported on pillars of white icing, and will weigh two cwt. Mounted on a silver base, it will stand between seven and eight feet high.

Nearly 2,000 people have been invited to the ceremony and reception. Saturday was chosen for the event in order to minimize the traffic problem.

Mr. Jenks says he hopes to borrow one of the city state coaches for the wedding.

"Father's cart', we call it," he said. "We shall not, of course, have the coach used for the Lord Mayor's show, but another which is not so elaborate."

THE DUTY OF THE CHILDREN.

Among the changes in the old age pension system urged by the Ontario Labor party in its annual convention is the elimination of the clause in the Ontario regulations requiring children to maintain their parents.

The Examiner is sure that anyone who has looked very deeply into the operation of the old age pension system in Ontario would not care to see that requirement abolished.

The simple fact is, that even with such a safeguard provided there has been no let-up in the attempts to load up the pension system with people whose children are financially able and have every right in the world to take care of their parents.

Case after case indeed has been discovered in which families in comfortable circumstances have succeeded in shifting the burden of their aged parents' maintenance from their own shoulders to those of the state, and it has been necessary in recent months, for the protection of the public, to weed out many aged persons who by reason of the financial position of their children should never have been declared eligible for pension.

Surely the Ontario Labor party is not in favor of the burden of taxation being increased by the selfishness and greed of children who want to dodge their plain duty toward their parents by foisting the latter onto the state.

The Ontario regulation is a wise one, and without it the old age pension bill, already a sizable one, would assume alarming proportions.

GOVERNMENT FAILS TO SHINE.

It cannot be said that the Ontario Government covered itself with glory during the session which finished in the early hours of Good Friday.

In fact, the Henry administration, which opened the session with the public in an inquisitive mood both as to Hydro transactions and as to tax burden, most decidedly lost ground in popular favor, missing the opportunity that a businesslike handling of public affairs would have given it to win back the confidence of the electors.

The last-minute rush to adjourn was on this occasion featured by the introduction at the last moment of important and controversial legislation, obviously little considered and hastily prepared, and thus there was the spectacle of a Government measure, the Millar will bill, hurriedly withdrawn in the face of a storm of protest and a new tax proposal cut to pieces by the House.

There is little or no excuse for that slip-shod way of conducting the business of the Province.

Surely the Millar bill would never have been introduced if what it involved had been given any thought, and the bringing in of the fuel oil tax was apparently an after thought, inspired perhaps by the fact that the Government of British Columbia earlier in the week had proposed such a levy.

The session in short has injured the prestige of the Government, and it will take a statesmanlike attitude on the part of the Premier toward the Hydro question and other important issues to repair the damage that has been done.

AN IMPOSSIBLE PROPOSAL.

The Ontario Labor party in sponsoring a form of unemployment insurance under which the worker would not be called upon to contribute must surely realize that it is advocating something that would be impossible to put into effect, and that could not hope to have the pressure of public opinion behind it.

Unemployment insurance that would allow the worker to spend his entire wages without a single thought to the future and that would take care of him to the extent of $25 per week in the case of a married man when he was without a job would be unsound in principle, and, in addition, would cripple industry and crush the taxpayer beneath an overwhelming burden.

A good case may possibly be made out for a plan under which the state, the employer and the employee would all contribute, but when the last-named is relieved of all responsibility it is obvious that the proposal voiced by the Ontario Labor party would start wrong and would end in financial disaster.

There will be surprise at the failure of the more level-headed Labor leaders to point out the impossibility of this non-contributory plan, and even more at the fact that only one vote in opposition to the socialistic resolution was recorded.

Hitherto the organization has advocated a contributory form of unemployment insurance, and the abandonment of that policy at the present time will be regarded by the majority of people as a major error.

FEBRUARY'S RECORD.

February's accident record, as tabulated by the Motor Vehicles Branch of the Ontario Department of Highways, shows a naturally falling off in the number of accidents as compared with the January figures, but when lined up against the statistics for February of last year, there is a different story.

The total for February was 509 accidents, which was a decrease of 33.8 per cent. from the January record, but an increase of 23.8 per cent. over the number of accidents listed in February, 1931.

There was 27 fatalities, 387 people were injured and property damage to the extent of $64,957 was done.

As usual, pedestrian deaths were large in the list, twelve of the 27 people killed during February being listed as pedestrians, and children playing on the street was given as the most frequent cause of this type of accident.

Actions of motorists chiefly responsible for accidents were reported as follows:

(1) On the wrong side of the road.

(2) Driving too fast for road and traffic conditions.

(3) Drove off the roadway.

(4) Did not have the right-of-way.

It will be observed, the report points out, that "road-hogging" and "excessive speed" continue to present the greatest menace in accidents in which the motor vehicle driver is at fault.

The discourteous road-hog is directly responsible for accidents, resulting from the first and four of the actions named above, while "drove off the roadway" may largely be attributed to the fact that the victim was forced off by a car on the wrong side or to immoderate speed on the part of the victim himself.

ROYALTY AND THE S. A.

How far the Salvation Army has traveled since its early days was seen in the incident which occurred at Buckingham Palace a few days ago. A Salvation Army band stood up and commenced to play outside the gates. The King and Queen were at home and heard them, and instead of sending a flunkey out with a shilling or two, together with a request to be good enough to go and play in the next street, their Majesties sent out requests for favorite numbers. Then they asked the bandmaster inside and had a talk with him. That's characteristic of the British Royal House.

In its pioneer days, and for many years after, the members of the Salvation Army were daring and hardy spirits. They were pelted with rotten fruit, garbage and mud, and sometimes with stones, by boys and hoodlums everywhere. Older people treated them with ridicule. Religion in a uniform and with a big drum and tambourines was something foreign to British nature for a long time. But they carried on proudly and undauntedly, and by and by as the public realized that theirs was a practical Christianity, a religious organization that really lent a helping hand to the down and out, the despised and rejected of the human species, they first tolerated, then respected, then admired the Salvation Army.

To-day it is held in the highest esteem in every land. Buckingham Palace is its final and deserved triumph.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

THE CAUSE OF THE DEPRESSION.

After several years of trying to find the causes of the depression and fix the blame, it begins to appear that a single explanation—unheralded and unannounced—has found tacit acceptance, namely: a sudden drop in the level of prices, about 33 per cent. in two years.

And so, comments the Alexander Hamilton Institute, just as the last bull market proved to be no manifestation of a "new economic order," so the passing depression proves to be essentially no different from the corresponding stage of any other business cycle.

Why the drop in prices? On the orthodox theory that prices are simply an expression of the relation between gold (money) and other goods,—when the production of goods tends to outstrip the production of gold, gold (money) tends to become relatively more valuable and prices tend to decline. When prices, of goods and labor, decline, you have to give more to get money. If you owe money, your actual debt has increased.

When price declines are gradual, there is little hardship on debtors, except on long-term debtors, such as mortgagors and corporations with bonded debt. But when declines are sudden, debtors are caught short and the whole capitalistic system is disrupted.

For specific instance, consider an average family in 1929, with an income of $2,500 a year, and having a $5,000 home re ring payments of $50 a month or $600 a year. The family's income to-day is probably about $1,500 or $1,600. The debt payments remain $600.

In the United States as a whole the situation has been no less embarrassing. The national wealth of our neighbors in 1929 was about 360 billions. The nominal owners of this wealth were in debt to lending investors for about 180 billions to 200 billions. To-day the dollar value of the total wealth has dropped to about 240 billions. But the debts remain the same. With a drop in income for 90 billions to, say, 60 billions, or less, these debts are all the harder to pay.

The tip-off on the trouble is the universal discussion of "liquidation." This is just a tactful way of admitting that most of us are very, very active trying to get out of debt.

The lesson is that, when prosperity returns and we hear again of "inflation of the credit structure," we shall know that it means that business concerns and individuals are going too heavily into debt. And the moral will be to keep a reasonable part of our wealth in bonds, savings banks, life insurance, mortgages, where it is returnable in dollars, after the manner of true investments and the tradition of thrift.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Toronto Boy Scouts are going to sell apples to raise funds. That should be good advertising for the Ontario product.

There is a silver lining to every cloud. The increased gas tax is likely to result in lesser mileage for motor vehicles, which should in turn mean fewer automobile accidents.

You can't escape. If the Federal Government doesn't get you with a tariff on coal, the Ontario Government nips you with a tax on fuel oil.

This week will bring the Dominion budget, after which we will know the worst for this year as far as taxation is concerned.

Both the Ontario Government and the Hydro-Electric Commission have been spending a lot of money for legal advice. Their own legal department must have been busy on something else.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE REVIEWS

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Mar. 27.—Prices of eggs in Montreal are very low. The best eggs, coming fresh near-by points and from Otawa, are currently quoted in carlots or less at 18 to 19 cents for extras, 16 to 17 cents for firsts, and 14 to 15 cents for seconds, delivered in Montreal.

Receipts last week totalled 13,308 cases, a small gain over the previous week. As the citys needs were about 12,000 cases a week, there has been a small accumulation which has forced prices down. Some storing may begin shortly.

Prices to retailers, effective this morning, follow: Special brands, cartons, 26c; fresh extras, 24c, fresh firsts, 23c; fresh seconds, 22c, with loose eggs 2 cents per dozen cheaper.

The butter market is generally quoted at 27½c per pound for carlots or less of No. 1, while small lots to retailers are selling by jobbers at 28c for solids and 29c for prints. Receipts last week were 1,076 boxes. Demand was light during the week, a small easing of prices resulting.

Cheese receipts were 909 boxes. The local market ranges from 10½c to 11c per lb. for current receipts and 12 to 12½c for summer make. Only a small domestic trade was reported.

The potato market ruled steady all week at the prevailing low prices.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, March 28. — Influenced by a disappointing export market and a downward trend at Chicago, wheat prices slipped fractionally lower on Saturday. Prices at the close found values resting 1¼c to 1⅝c lower than Thursday's final figures.

May eased 1⅛c to 59¼c; July 1⅛c to 1c to 61⅛c to 61¼c; and October declined ⅞c to 1c to close at 63c.

Selling pressure from Chicago and was responsible for a loss of 1½c at the low level. Southern traders put on a spread which involved the selling of our May future.

There was no export trade of any kind, although New York reported sales of Canadian wheat to France over the holiday. The only support accorded the market came from local traders, and was limited in volume.

Foreign news was restricted due to the holiday in European markets. Liverpool will not re-open until to-morrow (Tuesday). Buenos Aires markets were closed on Saturday, but re-opened to-day. Trade in cash wheat and coarse grains was of little account, and prices eased in sympathy with wheat.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, March 28.—Embarrassed by stock market breaks, and by disconcerting effects of Washington official reports of intended big planting of spring wheat, grain values went sprawling Saturday.

Government figures on 1932 intentions to plant spring wheat revealed likelihood of much larger acreage than was seeded last year, and a huge expansion as compared with the harvested area, there were estimates also that acreage of corn, oats and barley would be augmented to a material extent.

Wheat closed nervous, 1⅛c to 1⅝c under Thursday's finish; corn, ⅝c to 1c down; oats, ⅛c to ⅝c off, and provisions unchanged to 5c decline.

In the face of persistent stop-loss selling, wheat mustered only feeble power to rally, despite announcement of a moderate overseas demand for North American breadstuffs.

DISTRICT NURSE

Ellen was back in her mother's room. I went out into the hall for a moment, Ellen told her, trying to control her voice. "Go back to sleep darling. I'm going right to bed."

In her room she sat down and regarded herself blindly in the mirror. Here were her eyes, her gray eyes, that wavered and fell before her own regard. Here was the red, shaken mouth which Frank had made his own——"

Jim. Jim had no right. She hated him suddenly, bitterly, and it seemed implacably.

And yet——?

What did she know of Frank Bartlett?

Yet she knew him. By heart.

He hadn't asked her to marry him. Still, if she had said she loved him? She hadn't said it. She'd said about her work, "I wouldn't want to give it up——"

If he had wanted to marry her, would he have said that?

She put her suddenly cold hands to her face. Cool against the heat of cheeks. Bewilderment doubt—— eating at her. She said aloud, after a long moment——"I won't believe ——anything."

Jim, ranging the street sunk his hands in his pockets, curled into fists. She was in love with Bartlett then——

Some one spoke his name. A stocky man, coming home late. Jim whirled about on his heel. It was Dan Brown.

"What you hanging around here for?" asked Dan grimly. "Knew I was going to be out, didn't you? Beat it, see?" said Dan. "Dot's not interested."

"How," asked Jim, dangerously, all his emotions of the past hour crystallizing into an insane dislike of this intruder, "how do you get that way exactly?"

"Dot told me," said Dan, "how you pass by now and then——and stop for a friendly word. Leave her alone, do you hear me?" said Dan, "and take this to remember me by."

He was shorter than Jim. But he packed a wallop. "Dam you," said Jim, staggering a little under the blow, his hand flung up to his face.

The cop on the beat strolled toward them. Jim turned and went the other way. What if he had a word to say to Dot now and then. He hadn't meant to upset her tonight. She used to be pretty free with her own speech, after all. What harm was there in a little kidding? And Dan hadn't known about tonight. Not yet.

As he reached his own house a tall young figure slouched out of the darkness.

"Jim!" said someone in a low, heavy voice, with a strong foreign accent. "I been lookin' for you. I'm quitting, see?"

Jim's eyes were swelling. He said abruptly.

"No, you're not. Come to the office tomorrow, Fontano. No, meet me at Tuci's—at noon."

"But I tella you, I'm quit——"

"Oh, go to hell," said Jim, and turned on his heel and went into his own door.

You couldn't, Ellen discovered, go on "as you were." The situation between her and Bartlett had changed, subtly. He was considerate; sometimes she found herself thinking, with a little scorn of her own inconsistency, too considerate. They met, frequently. When he left town for a week-end, a brief holiday, flowers came in his stead, and notes. And then there were moments brimmed as a cup is brimmed with wine, with a dark, beautiful danger. Moments when they were alone. Sometimes, leaving him, she wished almost savagely that he would sweep all her hesitation and doubt aside, close his ears to her "sensible" arguments, take her into his arms——

But he didn't.

Add to this Jim's growing insistence, his impatience, his sullen suspicions, and her mother's increasing dislike of Bartlett, her discomfort, perfectly apparent when he came to the house, and you have Ellen's history. She was nervous, a little sharp-tongued, she lost weight.

Nancy's vacation came and went. During it, as had been planned, she and her mother went for a few days to Cousin Laura's little seaside cottage. During these days Ellen made every known excuse not to see Frank Bartlett. He had been complaining for some time that he never saw her save in comparative public, in restaurants, and theatres, in the midst of traffic. He was not, therefore, to be put off when the small family left town. The least Ellen could do was to give him her free Sunday.

They drove out into the country where the hills were very green and a little lost blue lake was dropped like a jewel into the valley. Frank had brought a picnic basket, complete, and they ate their luncheon by the narrow sandy lake beach, and afterwards he leaned back against a great boulder and smoked a pipe and looked at Ellen, the sun turnng her hair to splendid gold, and smiled, and was, for the moment happy.

They had agreed, or rather Ellen had decreed and he had been forced to agree, that this one day should pass without any discussion of their personal problems. They talked of a hundred things. Of himself, for instance. Ellen asked him something about his little boyhood and later life and he told her readily enough. "Nothing," he said ruefully, very exciting, 'Tm a very average man, my dear."

But he went on to talk of his work, and some of his more sensational cases, and she listened, enchanted, shifting the sand through her slender fingers. "Sometime," he told her, "we must come out in the fall when the trees have turned. I'll bring a steak and a coffee pot and we'll make a fire, and you'll do the cooking, or don't you like camping?"

She would love it, she said; not that she had had much opportunity.

He knew a place in the mountains, he told her, very wild and very secret, with a lake like this one, only less "domestic" and great sentinel-trees against a blazing blue sky. In the autumn they were clear torches burning up to heaven. There was a camp there, he said, a shack built of logs, with the bark still on. There was a fireplace, big enough to walk into; and plenty of logs. And the nights in the fall were a million stars, more or less. were a million stars, more or less. It was, he said, a place for lovers. "For you," he said, "and for me—"

She was silent then, turning to repack the basket. For lovers.

INSTALMENT 11.

They had dinner somewhere along the road and danced. And then drove home. He took her up to her door. "You'll let me come in for a moment?" he begged.

"No——" She smiled at him to soften the sting of the refusal. "No," she said again; and then, I'm awfully sleepy, Frank."

She was; her lids were drowsy with the long day in the open. Her hair was a tumbled mass of pale gold, warm silver; and her gray eyes were dreaming. But her heart was wakeful enough, hammering against her side.

Now, he caught her to him for a brief, breathless, mindless moment. He said the thing that Jim had said, but it made a different pattern in her brain. "You belong to me," he said. "When will you realize it and tell me——Ellen, will you ——will you——?"

But she reached up her free hand and laid it across his lips and as he kissed the palm, twisted out of his hold and slipped inside the door. She leaned against it, panting a little. What had been the end of that unfinished sentence had she permitted it to come to its conclusion? She knew. "Will you marry me——will you risk an estrangement with your mother, will you give up your work——?"

But she had not permitted it, afraid lest she surrender. But she slept smiling. It would come out all right, somehow. Her mother would recover from this baseless terror and dislike, as one recovers from a fever, and perhaps, for a little he might let her go on working, if not in this job, then in some voluntary work.

The next morning as she was leaving the house she was surprised to see Gilda Esposito, hurrying toward her, her slim arms burdened with a package. "I hoped to catch you before you left," she said, smalling, pretty. "Mother sent this. It's home-made wine. She told me to tell you it was good for you, it would make you strong."

Ellen took the package, laughing a little, and Gilda waited while she went back and put it in the house.

"That was good of her, Gilda," Ellen said, "I'll stop in and tell her so. How is she?"

"She's all right," said Gilda.

"Like your new job?"

"I'm crazy about it. I'm going to get somewhere, some day," promised Gilda, black eyes glowing.

"I'm sure you will. Father all right, too, and Mike?"

"They're fine. Mike's been going to school all year, nights. He drives a taxi, daytimes, you know. Father wishes he wouldn't, but what is there to do? There isn't enough money in the business for them both," explained Gilda. "Not that either father or mother care about money. But Mike does, of course. You can't blame him. He wants to go ahead."

They parted and Ellen went her way. It was a terribly hot day. Leaving the sub station a little while afterwards, she saw the ambulance of the City Hospital clang toward her. A heat prostration, possibly. The continued heat, she reflected, wouldn't help matters any.

On the ambulance, a white figure, leaning out, waving. That would be Pete, she thought. She wondered why Pete McGregor never came to see them any more. Perhaps it hurt too much. Yet, probably by now, he'd forgotten—— Coral.

The last advertisement she had had inserted in the theatrical papers had brought no answers. Surely if Coral knew how dearly she would be welcomed, she would come home to them. If she could. If she were not long past her earthly homecoming.

She cut short her free time at noon to stop in at the Espositos. They lived over the fruit and vegetable store. A cluttered apartment, but clean. Mrs. Esposito was a mountain of flesh a smiling mountain. She helped in the store part of the day but when Ellen reached there Esposito a tall lean man, darkly handsome, his black hair feathered with white, told her that his wife was upstairs, cooking. He had a helper in the store, a half-grown boy, a nephew.

The Espositos had always interested Ellen. "Mike", his Americanization apparent in his name, and Gilda. And the father, who was, she had often thought, considerably above his neighborhood. The fat and smiling wife, hysterical, as Ellen knew, quick-tempered, sentimental, speaking very little English.

She spent a few moments with Mrs. Esposito in the spotless kitchen, with its odor of oil and garlic, thanking her for remembering her. "It maka da good red blood," Mrs. Esposito said, "goods for healt'."

"The Song My Paddle Sings" particularly Canadian. Peter McArthur's prose was a true picture of life on a Canadian farm.

Robert W. Service in his earlier poems had dealt with conditions such as were typical of any mining community in Northern Canada. Stephen Leacock in a book that would always be a classic "Sunshine Sketches of a Little Town" had drawn a convincing picture of life in a Canadian small town. Merrell Dennistown, young Canadian playwright, the speaker remarked was doing some great stuff in portraying the typical Canadian backwoodsman. Dr. Drummond was the poet of the habitant and his poems had pictured the French-Canadian as no other writer had been able to do.

As a conclusion to his most entertaining address Mr. Conant recited two of Dr. Drummond's most popular habitant poems, "The Return of Baptiste" and "Leetle Bateese", in a manner that captivated his audience.

The vote of thanks moved by Rotarian H. R. H. Kenner was most enthusiastically carried. Mr. Kenner suggested that Mr. Conant might widen his list to include Isabella Valancy Crawford, the Canadian poet who was buried in Little Lake cemetery here and Ralph Connor whose work was typically Canadian.

Among the guests today was Rotarian Gordon Hall of Kitchener, Ont. Ross Dobbin was welcomed back from Florida

NORTH MONAGHAN ASSESSMENTS.

Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—At the present time there is a great deal of controversy going the rounds here in the suburban area of the township in reference to the increases that are being made on the suburban property.

As we all know last year this matter came up before the Court of Revision and went to Judge Huyke for a decision. And we all know that it was left to the council to try to straighten out this matter this year.

The Council appointed Mr. Waterman as the assessor for 1632, and a great many of the citizens believe that he is trying to make a fair distribution of these assessments. and while any human being is liable to make mistakes, the general trend of his idea to place a fair valuation on these properties cannot be overlooked.

If we all would look at this question from the point of view that the assesor has tried to place 1-3 of the actual value of the property, and in a great many cases 1-6 of the actual value has not been taken in the past.

If the assessments on the farms in this township have been overassessed in the past years to the ratio of the suburban property, the farmers certainly are entitled to receive a square deal.

This may not seem an opportune time to make these assessment changes, but I believe that the way these assessments are being equalized that the mill rate will certainly be lower than last year.

Last year 12 suburban residents were picked out to show the very unequal manner in which the suburban property was assessed, and a great many of the ratepayers in the township did not take this directly enough at home to realize that their property also at that time was under consideration.

I believe it is up to the citizens of the township to get behind their assessor and give him their fullest cooperation so that a fair distribution of the assessments in the townships can be arrived at, the earliest possible date.

Signed:

Suburban Resident.

Manitoba Savings Taken Over on Pledge to Go Out of Business.

APPEALED TO BENNETT.

WINNIPEG, Mar. 28.—(CP)—After refusing a loan to the Manitoba Provincial Savings Office for the purpose of meeting unusual demands of depositors the chartered banks of Canada demanded a pledge from Premier John Bracken that the province would definitely go out of the savings business before agreeing to take over the accounts of the office. This was disclosed Saturday in correspondence filed before the special committee of the Manitoba Legislature investigating the wind up of the savings office.

Letters and telegrams passing between Premier Bracken and Premier R. B. Bennett and the banks were laid before the committee. When the run on the savings office started Mr. Bracken sought a loan from the banks to avoid the necessity of selling securities in an unfavorable market. This was refused unless the province could obtain the added security of the Dominion Government.

Bennett Advised

When advised of the situation, Premier R B. Bennett asked for details and at first declined to act. He was asked by Mr. Bracken to reconsider the matter and sent a telegram saying Mr. Bracken would be advised of the terms the following day.

The next day, February 11, Mr Bracken received a letter from R. E. English of the Bank of Montreal, suggesting the Government present a formal request to the banks for the taking over of the savings office. The form of the request and the terms were indicated in the letter.

Chief of the conditions was that the Government would summon the Provincial Legislature within 14 days and repeal the Provincial Savings Office Act.

Wouldn't Commit Legislature

Further correspondence followed in which Mr. Bracken said he was willing to introduce legislation providing for repeal of the Act, but could not promise the Legislature would pass it. He also stated he would have to inform the House it was introduced at the request of the banks.

A letter from Mr. English stated that banks were willing to accept Mr. Bracken's assurance his government would not re-enter the savings deposit business, but wished the Act repealed as some future government would not be bound by Mr. Bracken's undertaking.

The Age of Selection is here

A young man now has a hundred interesting careers to consider. His grandfather had ten. Many paths are open to the scientist, writer, teacher, athlete, business man. When we travel, we often choose between rail and bus and car and plane. Every last thing we buy is one of many offered.

This is the Age of Selection. For advertising keeps us informed. Tells us the special benefits of this, the new features of that. Shows us how to build houses and how to make muffins. Explains why and where and when and how much.

As we read we learn how to discriminate, to recognize worth, to be sure of value received. Before we buy a car or refrigerator or a can of beans, we know what it is and what it offers. Advertising teaches us how to live by this year's rules.

Read the advertisements in this paper. They bring you up to date in this Age of Selection.

IMPORTANT

When you ask for a product by name as a result of advertising do not accept a substitute —substitutes are offered not as a service to you, but for other reasons.

REV. SPRINGETT AT ST. JOHN'S

Day Has Come For Organized Christians to Consider Their Positions.

TIMES ARE DANGEROUS.

"We must come out wholeheartedly and four-square for what the Gospel stands for. The church of the living God must show to the world that it really is a living church by making a determined effort to restore to the household of faith all the things that have been sadly neglected," stated the Rev. E. J. Springett, in the course of a virile and challenging Easter sermon at St. John's Church last night.

The Rev. Mr. Springett is on a year's leave of absence from St. Patrick's Anglican Church, Winnipeg, and is Dominion Secretary of the British-Israel Federation of Canada. Besides preaching to a large congregation at St. John's and to whom he was introduced by Venerable Archdeacon Rev. Dr. R. C. Blagrave, he also preached twice at All Saints' Church yesterday, and is to fulfill another engagement in that Parish to-night. He will also address a meeting at the Legion Hall on Tuesday evening.

Unprefaced by the usual text, the preacher swung into his sermon, pointing out the significance of Eastertide and the triumph and victory of Christianity.

"In these day of perplexity and when the world is confronted by a great question mark," he stated, "I want to say to men and women who profess and call themselves Christians, that our religion is one of optimism based on absolute faith and confidence in Our Lord Jesus Christ."

"We must have unwavering confidence in all that God has promised, but it is also necessary that we do our part. I want you to go forth from this church to-night and be able to say, 'I can do all things through Christ, whose strength is in me'."

Such a faith, he remarked, was the energizing impulse of life and of the affairs of the world, but he said, "We are living in dangerous times for our Christianity—dangerous times for our religion. We are being overcome by evil forces which we are allowing to permeate our social fabric."

"I would suggest to you with being considered an alarmist, that we of the church of the living Christ, must be on our guard that we are not overcome by the things of the world, rather that we should be able to overcome the things of the world."

He believed that the time had arrived when organized Christians must seriously reconsider their position, so that the principals of Christian faith shall be made predominant in their lives.

WEAK AFTER INFLUENZA— COULD NOT DO HOUSEWORK

Could Feel Strength Coming Back After Taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (Tonic)

"I took a severe attack of influenza," write Mrs. John Fraser, 2019-5th Ave. East, Owen Sound, Ontario, "and when I was able to get out of bed I was in such a weak condition that I thought I would never get my strength again. I could not do my housework. So a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which I did, and after taking a few doses I could feel my strength coming back. After taking six boxes I was completely well and as strong as ever had been, and I haven't taken a severe attack of influenza since."

"Now Strong as Ever"

Danger ahead! Look out . . . if you've had the flu and can't get back to normal. That is the dangerous part of influenza — the after-effects. Influenza weakens the blood—makes further sickness likely.

The iron and other elements in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (tonic) increase the blood count—that is they multiply the number of red corpuscles in the blood. Through these pills thousands of persons weakened by influenza, overwork, worry or other causes, have been helped back to health, strength and happiness.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (tonic) at any druggist's—or from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ontario—50 cents a box. Don't wait. It's dangerous to continue in a run-down condition.

Cushions of pure gum rubber moulded in between the plies of cord fabric, making a "bearing" that reduces friction and wear at these points as effectively as ball bearings do in machinery.

COMPARE Gutta Percha Tires with any tire — point by point — tough, long-wearing tread — wide, non-skid road surface — rubber impregnated cord fabric — go on down the list — Gutta Percha Tires have everything other good tires have — PLUS GUM CUSHIONS.

There's the difference—there's where Gutta Percha Tires give you EXTRA VALUE.

In ordinary tires the battering shocks of the road are pounding away on the cord fabric until it eventually breaks down. In Gutta Percha Tires these shocks are absorbed by the broad pads of pure gum rubber built in between the layers of cord fabric. The cord fabric is shielded—its life is prolonged.

REV. R. BERT. NELLES INDUCTED INTO ST. PETER'S CHURCH, MADOC

Rev. Mr. Nicol of Trenton Had Charge of Induction Services.

LARGE ATTENDANCE

MADOC, March 28 (Examiner Correspondence)—St. Peter's Presbyterian Church held a service long to be remembered by old and young, on Wednesday evening, March 23rd, when the Rev. R. Bertram Nelles, recently called to the charge of St. Peter's Church, was solemnly inducted to the charge, and following the induction services was introduced to the members and adherents of the Presbyterian Church by the leading elder, George West of Madoc.

Rev. Mr. Nicol, of Trenton an Interim Moderator of the Presbytery owing to the absence of the Moderator on a prolonged trip to Formosa, had charge of the induction services. Among the many causes for thankfulness and congratulation was the completion of the repairs to the large pipe organ which have been completed during the past few days, following the wanton distruction of many pipes by persons unknown some weeks ago. The snow bound roads have delayed the repairs somewhat, but the organ was ready for use for the first time for the evening's service. Psalm 38, "O send Thy light forth and Thy truth, was sung," followed by the scripture reading from Isaiah, 61st chapter. After the anthem by the full choir, prayer was offered by Mr. Nicol, after which Rev. Mr. Cameron of Deseronto spoke very earnestly from the text, "For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness, but to us which are saved, it is the power of God," 1st Cor. 1:18; and in recognition of the season coupled with the story from St. Luke's gospel, 23rd chapter, dwelling on the words, "And when they were come to the place which is called Calvery, there they crucified Him."

"The Presbyterian church," said the speaker, "has never officially recognized the keeping of special days and seasons, but an increasing number of our people are using these days, especially this time, to deepen their spiritual life, and to draw nearer to God and holy living. There are many activities at this time to which we draw attention; the commercial world and the world of fashion gets new impetus and fresh interests at this time; to many this season is one of restriction, and meditation and this week as it draws to a close will bring more freedom; to all the cross is a challenge."

The induction service brings memories of earlier days and of the first induction service at which the speaker took active part. It brings to memory many changes, in the architecture of the churches, in the mode of worship, in Sunday school work, and in young people's work, but the test of discipleship always remains the same. It is the call to service. Concluding the speaker reminded all that the task set before us is to enter more consciously into the service of Him Whose death and resurrection we commemorate this week."

After the hymn, "O love that will not let me go," Rev. Mr. Nicol, as Interim Moderator for this church appointed in December, 1931, gave an account of the things done by the Kingston Presbytery following the resignation of Rev. T. G. Marshall in December last. The pulpit was declared vacant by Rev. Mr. Nicol on December 27th, and after conferring with the session, it was decided to hear six candidates. Many were the applications, the telegrams sent and received, the telephone calls and letters written, as to the Interim Moderator fell the task of securing the candidates, until on February 9th, 1932, a unanimous call was extended to Rev. R. Bertram Nelles, then of Port Hope. This was dealt with by the March Presbytery of Kingston, and approved. Telegrams were at once forwarded to the Peterborough Presbytery, then in session, and the call was accepted by Rev. Mr. Nelles and by the Presbytery.

To the Rev. Mr. Nicol fell the task of addressing the minister and the people, though it was usual to have one man address the minister and another the congregation. To the Rev. Mr. Nelles he extended his congratulations on his induction, and exhorted him, 1st to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ our Lord; 2nd, to make known the Supreme Sovereignty of God, for He rules, not only as Creator, but as supervisor; and 3rd, to try to understand his people.

To the congregation, he urged them to "Pray for your minister; support the work of your church; attend services regularly, not only once a day, but twice a day; and to cultivate the spirit of unity, cooperation and true Christian brotherhood."

"O, Master, let me walk with Thee," was the hymn then sung, and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Mr. Craig of Trenton, clerk of the Presbytery.

Following the close of the service, and the introduction of pastor and people, a dainty lunch was served in the Sunday school rooms by the ladies of the congregation, and a pleasant hour spent in improving friendly relations among members and pastor.

Presiding at the organ was the talented organist, Mr. George Maybee, Jr., whose prelude numbers were three numbers from Suide Gothique, (Boellman): "Choral," "Minuet," and "Prayer in the Cathedral"; Postlude numbers were "Choral" and "Fugue" from the 6th Organ Sonata by Mendelssohn. The special anthem of the evening was "The Radiant Morn" (Woodward).

HAVELOCK LODGE VISITS NORWOOD

Initiatory Degree Conferred by Visiting Oddfellows on Home Members.

HAVELOCK, March 28 (Examiner Correspondence).—The officers and members of Havelock Oddfellows, about twenty-five in number, paid a very pleasant visit to Norwood Oddfellows on the occasion of their last regular meeting, Monday, March 21.

The chief business on hand was the conferring of the Initiatory degree by the Havelock degree team. This team came in for a great deal of commendation from those who were privileged to witness the perfect work done by the brothers, under the capable leadership of Degree Master Harvey Gordon.

Worshipful Brother Richard Dean, as well as Brothers Lumsden, Campbell and Baker, on behalf of the home lodge, extended a hearty welcome to the visitors who were accompanied by District Deputy Grand Master Ernest Seeney. Brother Harvey Gordon received the warm congratulations of all the speakers for the perfect exemplification of the degree by the team.

D.D.G.M. Seeney, in replying to the addresses of welcome, expressed the pleasure of all the visitors in being able to assist in the lodge work, and trusted that the Norwood brothers had enjoyed the evening as much as he was sure the Havelock brothers had done. He hoped that at some time in the near future, Havelock would be privileged to entertain them in their lodge room, and extended a hearty invitation for them to be present at any meeting, as the meetings are always interesting, and he was sure they would not regret a visit to Havelock at any time.

Brother Gordon also expressed the pleasure that was his in being privileged to put on the work of the degree team, and he hoped that the Norwood Lodge would not hesitate to ask his team to come there for the purpose at any time.

After the closing ceremony, all repaired to the dining room adjoining the lodge room and enjoyed a dainty repast.

District Churches

UNITED CHURCH

WARSAW, Mar. 28. (Examiner Correspondence).— Considering the state of the roads and the rain, there was a good attendance at the United Church Good Friday evening. Rev. J. W. Wilkinson reviewed the Lenten sermons he had given and stressed Christ's redeeming power that all could come to God through the one and only mediator, Jesus Christ who had been the supreme sacrifice. Pilate at Jesus' sixth trial had asked Jesus did He not know that He had power to save Him or have Him cruicified. He did not even use the power He had, but His power went only so far. The Father's power came. After the Saviour's words "It is finished" darkness came, an earthquake; they were bad enough, but to the Jews the great horror was the rending in twain of the vail of the temple, so that the holy of holies was exposed to the view of everyone. But that showed the way open to all directly through Christ.

The special anthem was "Christ our Passover was sacrificed for us."

Rev. J. T. O'Conor-Fenton motored from Norwood to conduct the Good Friday evening service in St. Mark's church, where he spoke very feelingly to a goodly number of the death and sacrifice of the Saviour and of all it meant to the world.

EYES AFFECTED BY RHEUMATISM

But Now Reads Without Spectacles

Since Kruschen Expelled the Uric Acid

theumatism has been described as he "uric acid fiend." Fiendish is he right word for all its work. Many a man has been made a ripple by it; and just as many more have hands and arms that it as rendered useless with swelling nd stiffness.

nd now comes this news of a man's eight being affected by the eumatism in his system. Fortunately, the trouble disappeared with the eumatism, for after Kruschen Salts ad put that right, he was able to ad without spectacles again.

his is how he told of his experience :— Whilst in Egypt I caught malaria. fter recovering from that, I suffered ribly with rheumatism, and my esight became very weak. After king Kruschen Salts for a short time e pains ceased and my eyes improved. nd now, after one year, the rheumatism has gone completely, and I am le to read without spectacles. ruschen is a great remedy. I could t do without it."—W. D. B.

he system of the rheumatic subject a producer of that dangerous bodyison known as uric acid. If you uld see the knife-edged crystals of ic acid under the microscope, you would readily understand why they cause those cutting pains. And if you could see how Kruschen dulls the sharp edges of these crystals, then dissolves them away altogether, you would agree that this scientific treatment must bring relief from rheumatic agony. Moreover, Kruschen so stimulates the organs of elimination that every trace of uric acid-forming waste material is regularly and completely expelled. Kruschen keeps your inside clean and serene. And your whole system—body and brain—responds to its purifying force.

PAINFUL PILES

Go Quick—No Cutting—No Salves

It takes only one bottle of Dr J. S. Leonhardt's prescription—HEM-ROID—to end itching bleeding protruding piles. This internal remedy acts quickly even in old stubborn cases. HEM-ROID succeeds because it heals and restores the affected parts and removes blood congestion in the lower bowel —the cause of piles. Only an internal medicine can do this; that's why salves and cutting fail. McDermid & Jury, Bond's Drug Store say HEM-ROID Tablets must end your Pile misery or money back.

New Train Service For Madoc Route

MADOC, Mar 28 (Examiner Correspondence) — Beginning to-day, March 28th, 1932, the Belleville-Madoc train will run only every other day, arriving in Madoc about 1 p.m. and leaving about three p.m. This means the removal of all trainmen and their families to the city, and Madoc is due to lose at least five families.

The recent snow storm has again blocked the roads. This is the second time this month, and the cars have not yet broken through from points north and south of Madoc. The mails to Ivanhoe have been carried by team and sleigh. Snow shovellers have been out to-day and yesterday and it is hoped to have traffic resumed to-morrow, with roads opened at least to Ivanhoe and Eldorado.

Rangers Take Lead By Beating Canadiens Saturday and Sunday.

TORONTO, March 28 (C.P.) — One game stands between New York Rangers and the National Hockey League title to-day following their double triumph over the week-end at the expense of the Montreal Canadiens. Defeated in Montreal Thursday, in the first of the three of five game series, Rangers managed to deadlock the series at one game each Saturday, when they came from behind to win a thrilling game in overtime 4—3.

Leg-weary and tired after Saturday's gruelling struggle, both squads entrained for New York for the final three games. Last night, Lester Patrick's scrappy puck-chasers showed their fighting dash and with a 1—0 victory ousted Canadiens from the favorites' post for the league title.

Injuries struck Canadiens a terrific blow in the pair of week-end battles. Saturday, Aurel Joliat, Habitants' first-string left-winger, was forced from the game through a leg injury, and was not in the line-up in New York last night. Sunday's game produced the most serious injury, however, as Pete Lepine, alternate pivot of the world champions, suffered a broken leg in a collision with Bill Cook.

Chicago Black Hawks will carry a one-goal lead into Toronto, Tuesday, when they meet Maple Leafs in the second of the total-goal series to decide which club will advance in the playoffs. Hawks gained their edge in Chicago last night when Lowery's shot from outside the blue-line fooled Goalie Lorne Chabot and drifted into the Toronto net for the only score of the game.

It will be a sudden-death affair when Maroons and Detroit renew last night's feud in the second game of the series in Montreal. Each club managed to count once before 14,000 in Detroit, and tomorrow's game will decide which club will advance to meet the winner of the Toronto-Chicago series.

Eastern Finalist To Be Decided To-Night

TORONTO, Mar. 28. — (By the Canadian Press.) — Eastern Canada's finalist in the Memorial Cup will be decided at Maple Leaf Gardens to-night when Sammy Rothchild's well drilled Sudbury Wolves engage Montreal Winged Wheeler juniors in the second of a two-game total-goal series for the right to travel to Winnipeg for the Dominion championships.

The teams played to a 1-1 deadlock in Montreal Friday and start to-night on even terms with the winner leaving immediately for the west.

No casualties were reported on either squad and the game is expected to draw a capacity house as Wolves have a large following in Toronto. The game little northerners have come through with flying colors since they came south to tackle the Ontario Hockey Association champions and win for the north the first provincial junior title.

Kansas City Sextet Wins 1st Play-Off

KANSAS CITY, Mar. 28.—Kansas City Pla-mors won the first game of the American Hockey League semi-final play-off by nosing out Duluth Hornets 2-1 in a fast overtime game here last night.

The winning counter came one minute after the opening of the second overtime period when Mitchell skated down the centre of the ice and flipped a pass to Dunfield, who converted with a high medium range shot. The second game will be played here Monday night after which the contestants will go to Duluth to complete the play-off series. The winner will engage Chicago in a five-game series, starting April 3, for the league championship.

Merrill got Hornets' lone goal, while Halderson also notched for

Spoils All-London Cup Final By Losing To Newcastle

Chelsea might have made the English soccer cup final an all-London affair had they beaten Newcastle United in the semi-final, but as it turned out the Novocastrians qualified to oppose Arsenal. Chelsea's team has some names to conjure with. There is the famous Jackson, secured from Huddersfield, and Gallacher, another Scotsman, who previously was at Newcastle and who, when he is not in trouble, is one of the finest players in the game. Chelsea recently paid a lot of money to buy O'Dowd, centre half-back from Burnley. O'Dowd was once with Blackburn, which club could not find him a regular place. Chelsea will now have to concentrate on finishing in a respectable position in the league table.

RANGERS WIN 3-1 VICTORY

Triple Header Hockey Program Sponsored by Lakefield Athletic Association.

SOME KEEN HOCKEY

LAKEFIELD, March 28.—(Examiner Correspondence).— Wednesday night was a gala night at the Lakefield rink when the Lakefield Amateur Athletic Association sponsored a triple header hockey match followed by a dance in the Town Hall. There was a good crowd and the games which were all keenly contested were so unlike in other respects that a varied evening was provided for the fans. The first game was between Captain Pat Young's Maroons and Allan Gill's Greyhounds and it had many points to commend it to the fans, who were vociferous in their applause and free advice to the players. John Sabatino handled the bell and while he had a busy night, he appeared to enjoy the duties which he had assumed and never did a player question his decision. The score was 4-1 in favor of Maroons.

A very different game was second on the evening's program, a game which was fast throughout with flashes of good combination play but in the main back checking prevented much which savored of combination. In speed the teams were fairly well matched with the weight on the side of Warsaw. Bower, who shone last Friday night, possessed the scoring punch of the team, but the fact that Warsaw team have played together for a number of years made them click together in team play, which won them the cup a week ago and the exhibition game on Wednesday night. The Juniors were a little out of practice as an aggregation and showed it and they were minus Wingett, who is a strong man in the junior ranks.

Bower, Bell and Wasson were the outstanding members of the Rangers team with the Darlings and Morgan also running close. The juniors were also in fair form with Kennedy, Stuart, Northey and Stenner doing good work and Wannamaker doing yeoman service in the nets. Penalties far outnumbered the goals. In the first period Bower in a lone rush from his own nets, carried the puck in close to the junior nets, shot and scored after ten minutes of play. McFadden had three rests in the penalty box and Jewell one while Bell, Bower and H. Darling also were given rests in that not too popular rest area.

The second period was fast all through but without a single score. Bell, H. Darling and Kennedy graced the penalty box in turn.

Bower added one more to the score sheet after five minutes' play in the third and last frame and one minute later added another for good measure and three minutes after Northery on an assist from Stuart found a way past the vigilant Wasson and added the one counter of the juniors. H. Darling, Morgan and Bell were penalized. Penalties were all minor ones, tripping being the great offence and most of it accidental because of the speed. The score was 3-1 for the Rangers who had battled their way through the snow-bound roads to play this game and went home modestly triumphant.

Buckhorn Bruins Vs. Wannamaker Wanderers

The third and last game had a new feature, the family element was introduced when the Wannamaker family team took to the ice and showed that they were in the hockey game. As all the family were not of hockey age Eric Morin and Douglas Davis were taken on to assist as subs. Buckhorn, who were minus Evans Blewett and Sam Trude recruited Wasson as goalie and Dave Darling and the game was keen from first to last.

"Mike" had the scoring punch of the Wannamaker outfit as he scored all three goals in a 4-3 fixture in which the Bruins had the big end of the score. In summarizing the games one can say easily that every man played hard and while both sides worked for a victory nevertheless it was a fair, close battle to a finish. Penalties were noticeably absent and while the pace was fast tripping was not much in evidence. The visitors won out 4-3.

TWEED, Mar. 28.—Following the arrival of the old graduates in the village for the holiday season, they engaged in a game of hockey with the High School hockey team and were defeated 2-1.

Although the older boys played hard and still performed the same work that they played while attending the school, they proved no match for the present speedy team, now organized in the school.

HERD CAPTURES WESTERN TITLE

Scores Fourth Straight Shutout in Allan Cup Games.

HACQUOIL STARS IN NET.

WINNIPEG, Mar. 28.—A mightier defensive hockey force than any other in the West, Fort William's Thundering Herd Saturday night carded their fourth straight shutout triumph and qualified to defend the Allan Cup against the challenge of the East.

The fleet Herdsmen from Thunder Bay, masters of backchecking, eliminated Calgary Bronks, Far Western bidders for the Canadian senior title by taking the second of their two-game series, 2 to 0. Forts won the first contest 3 to 0, capturing the round by a 5-0 shutout.

Little Ossie Hacquoil, leader of the Lakehead machine's first-string forward line, rattled in two goals that spelled defeat for Calgary last night. He got one early in the second period and the other in the third session.

The big Bronk team, conquerors of the hockey elite of Alberta, British Columbia and Saskatchewan, fought vainly to break through the stubborn defensive barricade patterned in front of them. They met with no more success than Winnipegs, Olympic champions, who stumbled earlier in the week on the rugged Fort defense and went out of the playdown scene without once scoring.

Hacquoil Stars In Net

Faster and far more dangerous on attack than in the first game, Calgary fashioned numerous scoring chances in every period. Schriner, tall frontliner, whose rushes constituted the chief Bronk threat, weaved in close on Goalkeeper Gordon Hacquoil a half dozen times during the contest, but the Foothills' flash was unable to put over the finishing touch.

Hacquoil, high-strung, nervous puck-stopper, went to his knees to handle nearly every shot directed at him, and gain his fourth shutout in a row. A little fellow who turned back Winnipegs with sensational performances, holding them goalless in three games—one exhibition and two playdown—was in danger frequently as the Bronks battled desperately to beat him.

The Forts left last night for home, and planned to leave Fort William Thursday for Montreal, where they meet either Toronto Nationals or Montreal A.A.A. in the Allan Cup finals.

Calgary — McDonald; Walshaw, Paul; Creighton, Schriner, Hergert; subs., Sorenson, Kenny, Luft, W. McLeod.

NATIONALS HOLD TWO-GOAL LEAD OVER WHEELERS

FINAL SCORE 3-1.

Collins, Hearn and McMullen Are Marksmen in Toronto Battle.

TORONTO, March 28 (C.P.) — Three fast goals in a dashing third period rally enabled Toronto Nationals, senior Ontario Hockey Association champions, to gain a 3-1 decision over Montreal Winged Wheelers, Quebec titleholders, in the first of a two-game total goal series here on Saturday to select a team to represent the East in the Allan Cup final. The speedy Toronto sextette will carry their two-goal advantage into the second game billed for Montreal on Wednesday.

Outplayed by a heavier and closer checking combination during the first two periods, Nationals were forced to revert to their most powerful offensive attack when the Wheelers were serving penalties in the final stanza. Their three goals came within five minutes while two Montrealers were serving time.

Mueller Stars in nets.

Big, fast, and well-drilled M.A.A.A. were masters of the play during the first two periods, and only the excellent work of Mueller between the posts limited the Easterners to a single goal. Dave Neville notched the only Montreal counter late in the middle session after a brilliant exhibition of stickhandling. Weaving his way through National's defence, Neville drew Mueller out of position with a fake shot to the corner only to slap the rubber into the open cage.

The single goal Nationals earned midway through the final period with Jotkus, McAlpine, and Massey in the penalty box appeared enough to spur them on to victory. Frank Collins flashed the light behind Coulter picking a corner on McMullen's pass for the first goal. Three minute s later Johnny Hearn found the mark with a hard shot into the corner while McMullen made the count 3-1 on a long shot from the blue line.

INDIANS END IN LAST PLACE

JACKETS DOWN REDS 6-4.

TORONTO, Mar. 28 (CP)—Four International hockey clubs are today preparing for the Round Robin series to decide the 1932 champions while the remaining teams are packing their skates in moth balls for another season. The regular schedule wound up in Syracuse last night and the top finishers in the league race will rest to-day before the final series commences Tuesday.

A trio of games rounded out the week-end program and as nothing depended on the outcome all provided listless fixtures. Cleveland Indians finished in the cellar by losing a pair of games in Pittsburgh and Syracuse on successive nights while Stars managed to edge into sixth place two points behind Pittsburgh with their triumph over Cleveland.

Buffalo Bisons with a 3-1 victory over Detroit Saturday night lengthened their lead over the second-place London Tecumsehs to five points. As there was nothing at stake the game was ragged throughout and the only flashes of real hockey were witnessed in the final session.

Seven goals in the final period provided the centre of interest as Pittsburgh marched to a 6-4 win over Cleveland. Entering the last period a goal down, Cleveland scored twice to once for Pittsburgh and evened the count. The fire works started in the final 10 minutes and Jackets barged in three goals.

Piling in four goals before Cleveland finally came through with a score, Syracuse finished their season with a 7-2 victory. Sid Howe and Savage were the main stays of Star's attack, each scoring twice while the former was also credited with an assist.

AMONG BEST ON DEFENSE.

The ideas of the red-heads in sport must run along similar lines. "Red" Grange, great star of football, delivered ice to get along. "Red" Horner, the battling sorrel-top of Toronto Leafs, for much of the season the penalty leader of the Canadian section of the National Hockey League, delivered groceries to get the price of his first hockey outfit.

Horner, put out of hockey when he collided with big "Ching" Johnson of the Rangers and broke his collar-bone, recently returned to the ice of wards. His presence with the Leafs will add a colorful note to the closing stages of the playoffs, for Horner is a typical redhead, a hard-battling and hard-working player.

Horner was born twenty-two years ago at Linden, Ont. His proud parents decided the cute little fellow was going to be a crooning tenor, so they called him Reginald.

Singing Not So Hot.

As time went on and the parents realized that crooning tenors are not appreciated in Linden, the family moved to Toronto, and young Reginald was tossed into the melting pot at one of the city's public schools where he had to fight his own battles or be annihilated at the daily playground pranks.

Like all boys, Horner developed a love for hockey, and was found on the defence of Knox Presbyterian Bantam team, champions of the Toronto Hockey League. Hockey paraphernalia means big dough to boys of twelve to fourteen years of age, so young "Red" found himself a job delivering groceries to provide the wherewithal in the line of equipment so necessary to a star bantam hockeyist. Then followed in rapid order a year with North Toronto Midgets, and two and a half years with Marlboro Juniors, O.H.A. champions.

Injuries to Duncan and Art Smith, regular Maple Leaf defence men, gave Horner his opening and he turned professional on the 23rd of December, 1926, playing his first game against the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Within two minutes of the time that he took his place on the defence, Tex White stick-handled right past the youthful recruit and Chabot was forced to make a sensational save.

In the mix-up that followed a face-off was called and the Pittsburgh players had time to go into a huddle and the word was passed around that Horner was the weak spot on the defence and to send all plays in that direction.

Frankie Went Boom.

On the very next rush, Frank Frederickson, the Pirate manager, one of the greatest stick-handlers of all time, carried the puck and made straight for Horner in an attempt to duplicate White's feat. Red handed Frederickson a body-check that lifted the former Olympic star about ten feet in the air and sent him to the bench for the greater part of the period.

Since that time, Horner has gradually gained confidence. He has missed many an incoming attacker, but he has jolted the finest puck-carriers in the league as they went in on the Leaf net without the precaution of gliding wide of the flame-thatched Horner.

HERO OF CHILDHOOD DREAMS FALLS BEFORE HELLER'S EYES

HAINSWORTH HIS IDEAL.

(By W. R. Wheatley, Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

NEW YORK, Mar. 28.—A bit of hockey drama was crowded into last night's 1-0 victory of New York Rangers over Montreal Canadiens—and few in the crowd of 14,000 realized it.

The story properly has its beginning in Kitchener, Ont., where George Hainsworth, veteran goalkeeper of Canadiens, grew up and learned the game; where Ehrhardt (Ott) Heller was born and first grasped a hockey stick—the beginning of an athletic career that has carried him to the defense line of the renowned Rangers.

Heller folowed in Hainsworth's steps — playing hockey on school rinks, "graduating" to the city league, and moving on to teams representing Kitchener in the Ontario Hockey Association. But Heller was a few years behind Hainsworth. As a school "kid" he saw George perform wonders for Kitchener in the old Senior O.H.A. days. He fololwed, perhaps somewhat in awe, George's upward climbz to professional ranks in Western Canada and then the next step to the National League as Canadiens' goalie.

The City League and the O.H.A. bade Heller good-bye. He moved to Springfield, Mass. the Canadian-American League farm of the Rangers. Late this season he was brought to the parent club, following Earl Seibert another Kitchener born and city league cradled puck chaser.

And last night the same Heller, young and boyish, began a single-handed rush on Madison Square Garden ice, manoeuvred past opposition and sudenly came face to face with Hainsworth. From close range Heller drove his shot with blinding speed. Hainsworth, unprotected, jumped to block it.

There was a rustling of the nets, a red light flashed on, and the score board read, Rangers 1, Canadens 0.

And that's how the game ended, decided on Heller's goal — a goal that well nigh may bring about the uncrowning of a championship team.

SAINTS DEFEAT WESTCLOX 12-1 IN SENIOR TILT

CLASSY FIXTURES.

St. Paul's and Blue Petes won the first games of the Ladies' City Basketball League playoffs at the Y.M.C.A. Saturday night, the former conquering Westclox Seniors 12 to 7, and the latter letting the Choate Juniors down with the short side of an 11 to 3 count. A large crowd saw the teams battle through two classy fixtures with little superiority shown most of the way. The series, best two out of three games, is resumed at the Y.W.C.A. this Friday night.

The junior squads lifted the curtain and put up a tight argument, with Blue Petes pulling away toward the end to finish on top, 11 to 3. They passed and checked well, but the win was chiefly due to better marksmanship, particularly in the dying minutes of the contest. The score at half-time was 2—1 for the Petes, both sides playing cautiously and defensively. M. Harvey hooped the ball in this period for her team, and B. Blade made sure of a free throw.

M. Blade got the only Ashburnham counter in the last session, dropping it in on a neat toss. The Blue Petes opened up more to stage an effective offensive that brought them nine points and the win; H. Bradley slipping in two baskets, M. Brooks counting three points, and R. Millyard getting two. With both crews flashing good combination tries and checking closely, no one player was outstanding, the forwards for the two outfits all going well, aided by their guards. The teams:

Choates: M. Blade, c; B. Blade, f; Y. Rose, s; G. Hawks, f; E. Ellis, s; M. Self, d; L. Heffernan, d.

Play Fast Ball

The senior fixture was fast and hard-fought, with St. Paul's finishing stronger to jog home in front of Westclox, 12 to 7. There was no difference seen in team play or defensive tactics, but the Saints took advantage of occasional openings and kept up a persistent attacking style that eventually won for them. They led 8 to 7 starting the second frame, M. Cowan getting four points, A. Comstock three and C. Patterson one for the winners. B. Thirnbeck was responsible for five of the Alarm Girls' points, and M. Mortimer encircled the pellet for the other two. M. Cowan squeezed in two more baskets for the Saints in the final stanza to wind up the scoring.

This contest was quite exciting from start to finish, and despite the fast travelling and close checking, it was comparatively clean. For the Westclox girls, B. Thirnbeck and the Mortimer sisters were most effective, but all worked hard to overhaul their opponents. M. Cowan was outstanding for St. Paul's, with A. Comstock going good, too. They had fine support in their teammates throughout. The teams:

Westclox.—E. Bradley, f; M. Mortimer, f; L. Kingdon, c; D. Webb, d; B. Thirnbeck, d; D. Millar, s; C. Mason, s; H. Joyce, s; M. Lloyd, s; G. Mortimer, s.

St. Paul's.—M. Cowan, f; I. Cowan f; C. Patterson, f; A. Comstock, c; E. Morrow, g; S. Jackson, s; J. Howson, g.

New Haven Sextet Wins 1st Play-Off

NEW HAVEN, March 28. — The New Haven Eagle opened the Canadian-American Hockey League play-off series last night by overcoming an early two-goal lead to defeat Boston 4 to 3.

The visitors scored two quick tallies in the first period followed by one for New Haven before the bell. The Eagles scored three times in the second while successfuly defending their own goal. A goal by Boston in the final period ended the scoring.

Conn of Boston and Speyer of New Haven were each credited with one goal and one assist.

New Haven Eagles Beat Indians 6-1

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Mar. 28.—The New Haven Eagles skated to a 6 to 1 victory and third place in the Canadian-American Hockey League here Saturday night, when they cleverly outclassed the Springfield Indians, who ended a hapless campaign. The triumph gives the Eagles the right to engage Boston in a home-and-home series. Mighty work in the net by Maury Roberts and George Patterson's determined play at right wing bulwarked the Eagles, who assumed quick command and ruled throughought.

Patterson scored the first brace of goals for New Haven, one in the opening frame and the second in middle session. Kuhn added another for the Eagles and Hughes. Wilson and McGoldrich scored in the finals. Himes notched the Indians' counter in the third period.

CASUAL COMMENT

Tomorrow night, the second scheduled games of the Inter-Alley Bowling League get into swing. Duffus No. 1 team is on top in Group A with three points, followed by the "Y" entry with one and the Knights with a zero. In Group B, the "Y" No. 2 crew leads with two points, and then comes Duffus and K. of C. second teams with one point each.

* * * * * * *

In capturing their three points last week, the Duffus first stringers burnt up the "Y" alleys for a nifty total of 3624. Bill Sweetman with 879 and Fred Hickey with 824 were the leading pin-spillers. The competition in this loop the rest of the way shrould be plenty hot.

* * * * * * *

And the C.G.E. Shop Bowling League starts down at the Duffus' Alleys this evening and will be wound up within a week. There were twenty-six teams in this year, including a number of the best five-pin bowlers in the city. The averages will be published toward the end of the week.

In a recent copy of the Kansas City Hockeyist, Bert McLeod's picture is featured on the front page along with that of "Porky" Levine, the two Pla-mor pucksters selected on this year's American League all-star team. Bert and "Biffer" Ranger continue to go great in this loop and will be heard from in the play-offs with Duluth for the right to meet Chicago in the finals. "Babe" Dye is coaching the Chicago Shamrocks this year.

* * * * * * *

"Biffer" leads the loop in penalties, the scrappy forward still liking the rough going as he did when wearing a Peterborough sweater. He may not be home this summer as he will be working in Kansas City between hockey seasons. Bert should be here about the middle of April. Both play-offs, semi-finals and finals, are best three out of five games. Duluth and the Pla-Mors have won the same number of games, and Shamrocks are just one win ahead, so the series are bound to be good.

The finest of hockey, both pro and amateur, is taking place these evenings as the various teams on the continent battle for the honors of the year. The N. H. L. playoffs are developing unusually low, close scores, as 1-1 and 1-0, despite the rules which were made this season to open up scoring. This year, as in others, the championship clubs and the runners- up, are finishing up in a blaze of glory.

The local senior baseball club meets at 7.30 in the Chamber of Commerce tomorrow night, and a full turnout of officers and members of the executive is hoped for as this is the last gathering before the O.B.A.A. session in Toronto next Saturday. The next league meeting will be held in Kingston about a week later.

We may expect to see some action in lacrosse circles here soon as Pete King, Doug Miller, Bud Fisher and Ira Dundas are all fired with ambition to put the game across in this district since they took in the O.A.L.A. convention in Toronto last Friday. The old sport is about finished and the big thing this summer will be the seven-man game of box lacrosse.

A suggestion put forward by some of the members of the Hockey Club is that a banquet be run off at the Empress one of these evenings for the purpose of getting things started toward having an artificial ice arena here this summer. The idea would be to invite prominent sportsmen, business heads and anyone interested in the project to organize committees and aid the present arena executive in every way possible. That sounds like a good idea to us, as action is needed.

A big crowd at the "Y" Saturday night saw two girls' basketball games in the city League playoffs. Many were surprised at the class shown in the cage game by the damsels and the second contests should draw a flock of fans to the Y. W. Friday evening. St. Paul's Seniors and Blue Petes' Juniors are one game up in the two-out-of-three series.

REDS FINISH ON TOP

BOSTON, Mar. 27. (CP) — The Providence Reds finished the Canadian-American Hockey League season with a seven point lead over the Boston Bruin Cubs with a grand total of 23 wins against 11 losses and six ties for a point score of 52.

MILWAUKEE PAIR LEAD AT DETROIT

Grand Shuffle Among Leaders Recorded During Sunday's Session.

DETROIT, Mar. 28. (CP)—Teams from 20 different cities will Toe the foul line in the American Bowling Congress tournament to-night. The opening squad is dedicated to line-ups from the south and far west.

Kentucky will be represented by teams from Louisville and Lexington, while Denver has two quintets carded.

Grand shuffle among the leaders was recorded during Sunday's busy session. The most noteworthy change was instigated by Charley Daw and Frankie Benkovic, of Milwaukee, who took a commanding lead in the two-man event with a 1,558 total.

On the late shift last night the George T. Scully five of Chicago found a spot open for their 2920 count, to go into seventh position. Their games were 966, 956, and 1008.

Jess Pritchett, of Indianapolis caused two changes. He and Johnny Fehr placed second in the doubles with a 2,290 score, and Pritchett took sixth place with his 1,899 aggregate in all the events.

Providence Defeats Philadelphia 9 To 3

PROVIDENCE, R.I., Mar. 28.—The Rhode Island Reds and the Philadelphia Arrows concluded the Canadian-American League season here Saturday night with the Reds winning 9 to 3. The game, meaning nothing to either club, was interesting only in spots, the players taking care not to injure each other. The Reds jumped into a four goal lead before the Arrows scored their first goal. Philadelphia scored just before the end of the second period.

The last session was played under altered rule which allowed the wings to precede the puck carrier into the attacking zone. During this 20-minute period, the Reds scored five goals and the Arrows two. Bert McCaffrey, former Canadian defence star, played goal for the Arrows.

Newsy Lalonde, the Providence coach, was presented with a set of golf clubs and bag by friends in honor of his splendid work during this season.

The scorers were: For the Reds, Conner and Murray, in the first period; Rivers and Trapp, in the second; Harrington, Murray, Giroux 2, and Hart. Hudson scored for the Arrows in the second frame and the same player and Kinsella in the last session.

Monarchs Down One Goal To Saskatoon

WINNIPEG, Mar. 28. (CP)—With one of the two Canadian amateur hockey titles she harbored for a year already gone Winnipeg wonders to-day if the other will be gone when Saskatoon's young Wesleys have finished a series here to-night.

One goal down as a result of a 1-to-0 beating they took a week ago at Saskatoon, Winnipeg Monarchs will attempt to-night to win the two-game total-goal round from Wesleys and quality for the Memorial cup finals with the east's champions. Despite the fact that they are playing away from home, Wesleys are slight favorites to oust Monarchs.

Major Ball Gossip

LANDS THIRD BASE BERTH.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 28 (C.P.). — Fritz Knothe singled his way into the third base berth of the Boston Braves yesterday.

The score was tied at 1-1 in the last half of the ninth of the Braves-New York Yanks game. Boston men were on second and third and two were out. Knothe's single drove the two men in and the Braves won 3-1.

STILL GOOD AT BAT.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 28. —Rogers Hornsby had demonstrated to his young Chicago Cub infielders that any time they slip, the Old Man himself can move into action with his big bat.

The Rajah played a part of the games against the Missions and the Seals of San Francisco yesterday, and cracked out two doubles and a single. Gabby Harnett contributed a pair of homers.

WHITE SOX TRIM STEERS.

DALLAS, Texas, March 28. — Still undefeated in their training season schedule, the Chicago White Sox to-day were down for their last game of the year on Texas soil.

After meeting Dallas, they move on to Shreveport for three games. The Sox trimmed the Steers yesterday, 10-8, with Victor Frasier pitching well, and Lu Blue hitting three doubles.

MONTAGUE FOR POST.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 28. —The one player needed by the Cleveland Indians to make them a pennant possibility this season—a good shortstop — apparently has been found. Eddie Montague's recent play at the hot-spot has been well-nigh perfect and he has been hitting satisfactorily also.

Notoriously weak in fielding last year, the Tribe yesterday played their second consecutive game without an error, and on a badly clear-scarred field. They defeated the New Orleans Pelicans 7-3.

REDS BREAKING CAMP.

TAMPA, Fla., March 28. — The problems of packing shirts and hosiery rather than punching out singles and homers troubled the Cincinnati Reds to-day as they prepared to break camp for the season, to-morrow, starting a road tour that is to deliver them at Redland Field for the season's opener against the Chicago Cubs on April 12.

Yesterday they evened matters with the Brooklyn Dodgers through a 7 to 6 victory, leaving the Grapefruit standing at a victory and a tie each.

TIGERS' NEW FACES.

LOS ANGELES, March 28. — There will be two new faces in the regular line-up of the Detroit Tigers this season if Manager Bucky Harris adheres to the plans he has announced for the season opener next month.

One will be Bill Lawrence in centre field, the other will be George Susee, who will share the catching burden with "Muddy" Ruel. The line-up Harris announced is the one which defeated Pittsburgh 10 to 8 yesterday.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

WHITEFOOT FINDS THE NEW HOME.

The blackest clouds will roll away
'Tis certain as the light of day.
—Old Mother Nature.

When Whitefoot the Wood Mouse, sitting on the woodpile outside the sugar house among the maple trees in the Green Forest heard ever so faintly a soft drumming, he squeaked aloud with relief and delight. No one but Mrs. Whitefoot could or would drum like that. He could barely hear it, but he knew that she was signaling to him, and that meant that she was alive and safe. At once he drummed back, but he was drumming on a piece of wood, and it was not a very good drum. He knew by the way Mrs. Whitefoot continued to drum that she didn't hear his signals.

At first he couldn t be sure just where she was. That sound came from the direction of the sugar house. He scrambled down from the woodpile and ran across to the sugar house. It didn t take him an instant to decide that the drumming was inside that house. There was a crack under the door and sitting close to this he could hear that drumming plainly. It was inside. There was no doubt about it. In great excitement Whitefoot drummed on the threshold, close to that crack. Instantly Mrs. Whitefoot replied, and he knew that he had been heard.

How could he get in there? He ran all around the sugar house, looking for a hole big enough for him to squeeze through, and growing more and more excited. He remembered a hole in the floor he had used once a long time ago. He crept under the house, but there was no hole. A piece of board had been nailed over it. Then he climbed on the roof. There was no hole there. Several times he drummed on the roof to let Mrs. Whitefoot know where he was. He was becoming discouraged, but he wouldn t give up.

"There must be a way to get in. There must be, he said to himself over and over again. And by and by he did find a way in. He found a knothole under the edge of the roof. It was the same knothole through which Chatterer the Red Squirrel had escaped a few days before. Just as he poked his head in Mrs. Whitefoot drummed again. He knew now exactly where that sound came from. He didn t stop to drum back. He scrambled in and down to the bunk in which Farmer Brown s Boy, jumped to a table and then to the floor. Then he raced over to that empty syrup can which Mrs. Whitefoot had for a drum. She jumped down to meet him.

Such a happy reunion as there was then! Such a caressing! Such a flood of questions on Whitefoot s part! Mrs. Whitefoot told him all that had happened. She told how she had been frightened from the home in the woodpile, and how Farmer Brown s Boy had picked up that stick with the home in it and brought it into the sugar house. She told how she had conquered fear enough to follow him and how he had put the stick down where she could get to the babies. She told how later he had split that stick, opened the nest and found her and the babies, and how he had put the stick together again and placed it back in the corner. She told how thereafter she had worried every minute for fear the same thing would happen again, and had hunted for and found a new home and moved into it.

"Where is it?" demanded Whitefoot.

"You come with me," said Mrs. Whitefoot, and led the way, Whitefoot right at her tail. Under the old coat in the corner she led him, and straight to the old can lying on its side beneath it.

"What do you think of this?" she demanded when they were inside that can.

Whitefoot ran all around inside. He peeped at the babies in the next. "It is wonderful," said he. "And there is room enough for me here. Yes, sir, there is room enough for me here. It is wonderful."

What To-Day Means To You

" ARIES "

If March 28th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:10 a.m. to 9:45 a.m., from 2:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. and from 7 p.m. to 8:15 p.m. The danger periods are from noon to 1:30 p.m., and from 9:40 p.m. to 11 p.m.

Astrological influences on March 28th are of a neutral nature, and no events, good or bad, are shown to modify the usual current of your life. An attitude of indifference to life in general will be taken, and things which might prove of interest or benefit will pass by unnoticed. An approaching storm within the family circle may be felt during the evening hours.

The child born on this March 28th will delight in active sports, will be fond of pets, and will have a bright and cheerful disposition. It will take its part in the world in an unselfish way and will have a daring, driving spirit. It will not "hide its light under a bushel," and will like to be both seen and heard.

Born on March 28th, you have been endowed by nature with more than a full measure of intelligence, perseverance and attractability. You are competent without being fussily efficient. You seem to do most everything with a large degree of ease, and this is due to your ability of keeping your mind focused on the thing in hand, more than to any innate skill. You will cling to your interests all through life, and will never allow your mind to become dormant or to lose any of its elasticity. You are not always thinking of self, and if modesty and too much unselfishness are faults, you possess them.

You take a delightful interest in other people in a kindly, helpful way. You are not of a suspicious nature and are not pryingly inquisitive. You will never have to be taught the give-and-take of loyal companionship. You are always ready to assume too large a share of the burdens going around. You are fond of reading and discussion, and intelligent companionship is essential to your happiness. You are not a great success at small talk and hate to listen to prattle.

Both men and women born on a March 28th will have an essential longing for family life, and will always try to create for themselves some semblance of a home.

DATES ARE SET MILLBROOK FAIR

Plan of Holding Car Draw Discussed at Agricultural Society Meeting.

COMMITTEE APPOINTED

MILLBROOK, Mar. 28 (Examiner Correspondence)—A special meeting of the Millbrook Agricultural Society was called for Thursday, March 24, in the Council Chamber of the Town Hall, the president, R. O. Larmer, being in the chair, and a fair number present considering the drifted state of the roads following the recent snow storm.

One item of business to be settled was the dates for the annual fair, which on motion of H. A. Fallis and R. J. McKnight, will be held this year on Friday, September 30, and Saturday, October 1. An amendment, sponsored by Harold Tate and Robert McCamus, that the date be September 29-30, was defeated. The fair has never previously been held on a Saturday, and as an increased gate receipt is very necessary to the success of the undertaking, the majority were apparently in favor of the change from Friday to Saturday with the hope that the experiment will bring about the larger attendance looked for.

Another item of important business that was fully discussed on Thursday related to the purchase of a car by the Agricultural Society, with a subsequent sale of tickets, in an endeavor to realize a substantial sum toward reducing the financial indebtedness under which the organization is at present laboring.

A committee had been appointed at the last regular meeting to secure information regarding prices, choice of car, etc., the members including Reeve P. Stinson, J. A. Vance, R. I. Fallis, R. O. Larmer and J. N. McGill.

Information as to what had been realized in other centres by means of a draw for a car, and the manner in which tickets had been disposed of, expenses involved, etc., was presented, the secretary making the suggestion that the township be divided into zones, certain directors appointed for each section, and a thorough canvass of every home to be made on a definite day, or two days, tickets to be offered for a specified price, and the result reported as soon afterward as possible.

The general opinion was that the draw should not be left until the fall fair, that date being too late in the season, and that six weeks or at the outside, two months, was long enough to allow for the sale of tickets, and the carrying through of the whole undertaking. A field day, or street dance, in June or early in July, would be the best occasion for the closing up of the whole affair.

On motion of V. R. Hunter, seconded by L. W. Smith, it was decided to leave the matter over until the next directors' meeting, within one month's time, the committee to come prepared to report definitely and fully regarding the car, so that action, one way or the other might be immediately taken.

On motion of R. J. McKnight and G. A. Fair, it was decided to have the secretary write to the Deputy-Minister of Agriculture, Mr. Fairbairn, inviting him to come to the village and open the Millbrook Central Exhibition next October.

The president reminded the members of the Easter dance the society is sponsoring on Tuesday, March 29, and the secretary was instructed to write the secretary of the Women's Institute, Mrs. G. Fallis, thanking them for the use of the piano in the Town Hall for concert and dances free of charge.

R. McCamus and I. W. Larmer sponsored the motion to adjourn.

HARD OLD ROAD IS HOBO'S LIFE DIARY REVEALS

WELL USED IN CITY

Surveyor's Assistant Travelled Far and Wide Looking for Jobs

That all the men who are "hitting the highway" in the present depression are not members of the illiterate classes is amply shown in the pages of a diary shown to The Examiner by a man who was a guest at the Peterborough Red Cross Hostel recently. A member of the so-called "white collar brigade, he has been forced to travel from place to place in search of employment.

By vocation a surveyor's assistant, he has followed this line in almost all parts of the world. He has worked before a transit in India, Peru, Mexico, and in Northern Ontario. But, like everything else, surveying is more or less in the dumps. In his travels he has kept a diary, an interesting and human document, portraying the trials and joys of a transient.

In glancing over the pages of this diary, several items have been picked at random, just to show what these men go through:

"March 5—Landed in Port Arthur and expect to stay here for a few days. Maybe there'll be a job for me. I hope so.

"March 8 — Left Port Arthur at 11.15 p.m. and into Sudbury at 3.00 a.m. One hundred and thirty-seven miles in weather that hit 32 degrees below zero. I hope that I never have to take another ride like that one. Thawed ourselves out in the round-house, and slept there until morning. Prepared to leave on the first drag (freight train), but the weather continues cold and we decide to wait over for a few hours. Stayed in the round-house all day and left on the 3.07 a.m. (March 10), bound for White River.

"March 10 — White River, supposedly the coldest spot in Ontario, and it lives up to its reputation. A mere 20 degrees below zero. My chum goes to sleep in the tool-box of an engine, but he is soon roasted out. We manage to sleep a little, but stir out at eight o'clock, wash up and start for the nose-bag (if we can find it).

"Our luck is in, and we have a hearty meal, not much variety, but filling. Bread, raw onions, and salt, washed down with God's greatest gift to man. Not so bad for us. Maybe our next meal will be raw onions, water and bread. Just by way of a change! Oh! it's the life all right.

"March 11 — We have just arrived in Chapleau. A drive of 140 miles from White River, and the further you go the colder it gets. I almost froze. We went to a Chinese restaurant and warmed up on hot coffee. This is the life of a road knight. Well, to-morrow is coming. It may bring a change.

"March 12 — Well, to-morrow came as to-morrows have a habit of doing, and it finds us back in Sudbury. Colder than we have been since we left Port Arthur, and believe me that is cold. We find an ash pit in the yards and manage to thaw out. As we always do when we come into a warm spot, we go to sleep. One never gets much sleep when they are on the move and learn to make use of every opportunity.

"It doesn't last long, though. The yard monkey (engine tender) evidently thinks we need a bath, so he turns on the water to wash the pit. By the time we are fully awake it is like sitting under Niagara Falls. Oh, well, a wash always comes in handy, and it was warm. We dried out and worked around the yard a bit to square things up.

"Having spent a few hours in Sudbury we think it a good idea to go out and look the town over. Luck is with us and we do ample justice to a REAL square meal. Then back to the yards, and about 7.00 p.m. we catch a freight to Parry Sound. We arrive there OK, but it is still cold, real cold. The station agent gives us permission to sleep in the station and we roll up next to the radiators until morning.

"March 13 — Another day, and the sun is shining for the first time since we left Port Arthur. Our morning wash is taken in the station rest-room, and we manage to erase some of the travel stains. Uptown, and the first person we meet is the Chief of Police. His heart is as big as his frame, and he gives us each a meal ticket. Two square meals on two consecutive days. The depression must be lifting.

"After eating we walk to Parry Sound Junction, 3 miles. As the time finds us now we are sitting on the sunny side of a box car, waiting for our side-door pullman to be made up. The process is a slow one, and one by one we drop off to sleep.

"All is quiet, when, of a sudden, there comes a noise like dozens of hammers ringing on as many anvils. We awake with a start, and there is our iron horse coming down the track, pawing dirt and snorting at every leap.

"In a moment we are all set to grab the saddle horn when she comes to a dead stop. The big locomotive goes over to her stall, replenishes her store-house, makes her toilet, and is ready for the road. She picks up her train and we are off for parts unknown. Travel of a hundred miles brings us to Washago Junction. eW bid good-bye to our gallant steed, and set out to see the town.

"One look and we have seen it all. Six houses, a hotel, general store, and a can (jail)—and what a can. One big cell and ice cold. We meet the local policeman, the real Sherlock Holmes type, handlebar moustache, slouch hat and all. He pipes us (looks us over), and gives us the OK for a night's sleep in the jail.

"March 14 — First thing in the morning we catch a train headed East and plan to go to Lindsay. But it was just another of our bad guesses. We had struck a through freight that high-balled straight through to Toronto.

"Well, Toronto didn't appear very anxious to help us, so we made up our minds to go to Belleville. From Sunnyside to the Danforth is some walk, but we made it, in time, right out past Henry Ford's Toronto plant.

"When we left Port Arthur there was about six feet of snow, and we have been seeing it ever since. But when our train pulls into Port Hope the ground is bare, and the sun is shining. We utilize our few minutes' wait in Port Hope by having a good old-fashioned tear on a patch of grass that had a faint green tinge. We may have looked crazy, but we felt and acted like a brace of colts turned oose in the first spring pasturage.

"Belleville, however, has its winter when we arrive, and we find plenty of snow. Late at night we arrive here, and are given a bed in the yards by the railroad men.

"March 15—Well, we have waited all day for a freight going East to Brockville, where we have some friends, but the depression has evidently hit the railroads, too. No freights at all until late in the afternoon. Then we catch a ride on the '490' East-bound.

"Into Brockville late at night, and immediately up to see our friends who kill the fatted calf for us. We are treated like kings and it certainly feels like a million dollars to sleep with a roof over your head that is not a jail or railroad roof. We would like to stay here indefinitely, but, unlike the man in the fable, we do not want to kill the goose that lays the golden eggs.

"March 16 — We have spent the day in Brockville. Just lazing around, with a feeling of security which has become a stranger to us. Three squares to-day, thanks to our friends, which constitutes a record.

"To-night, instead of riding on a freezing tender, we are sitting in a cozy room and listening to the strains of real music, via the radio. WEAF, New York, is coming in like a bell. They have just announced 'Strictly Rhythm" as the next number, and it brings back memories of better times and happier days.

"March 17 — 'The Seventeenth of Ireland' to some, but just another day to us. Instead of continuing East we have decided to double back to Peterborough. The train we pick is a through one, and we make no stop in Belleville. Arriving in Peterborough, we make a call at the Police Station to ask for shelter. We are told that the Red Cross maintain a hostel for transients, and are given tickets which entitle us to a bed and two meals. It is a problem to decide which is the most welcome.

"The meal comes first and we then go to the Hostel to register. The man in charge tells us there is a washing machine in the basement, which we are free to use. And use it we did, with a will. Clothes that have become dust laden and stale are given a magic bath and come out clean and fresh. Then to listen to the Hostel's radio. A hockey game being broadcast which takes us right up in a box seat at the Maple Leaf Gardens.

"Lights out at eleven, and finds us in a warm, comfortable bed, in a room good enough for any man to use.

"March 18— To-day we have canvassed Peterborough from end to end for jobs. Any kind, just jobs. We find the city no better, no worse than any of the dozens we have struck in our search for a means of livelihood.

"One thing that must be said for this city, though, and that is that the man coming in on a freight, is given an even break. He is given a hot meal, a chance to wash up, both his clothes and his person, he gets a good night's sleep, and is sent on his way the next morning with a good breakfast under his belt. And that is a good deal more than can be said for many places.

"We have struck them all in our travels, but Peterborough is the best."

These are the excerpts which The Examiner was allowed to copy from this man's diary, and picture graphically what a man who travels from place to place goes through. Does it not seem that those of us who are in better circumstances, even though they are a trifle straitened, should extend a helping hand?

TARZAN AND THE GOLDEN LION. NO. 55

By Edgar Rice Burroughs
(Metropoli tan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

All looked in the direction of the reverberating roar. Just within one of the windows, standing like a statue of golden bronze, they saw a huge black-maned lion. An instant he remained motionless. Then again the palace trembled with his mighty roar. Towering above them all, Tarzan of the Apes looked down upon the great beast below him. In quick elation he raised his voice above the growlings of the Bolgani. "Jad-bal-ja!" he cried, and pointed toward the Bolgani, "Kill! Kill!"

Scarcely had the words been uttered, when the huge beast was upon the hairy gorilla-men. And with its leap there came to the ape-man a daring plan to save himself and those dependent upon him. "Quick," he cried to the Comangani. "Fall upon the Bolgani. Here, at last, is the TRUE Emperor Numa, King of Beasts. He slays his enemies, but he will protect Tarzan of the Apes and his friends." Seeing their hated masters falling back before the terrific onslaught of the lion, the Gomangani rushed in to attack.

Tarzan took his place among them with drawn knife, keeping close to Jad-bal-ja, directing the lion from one victim to another lest he fall by mistake upon the Gomangani, the old man, or even La. Twenty Bolgani fell before the rest managed to escape. Then Tarzan called Jad-bal-ja to heel. "Go," he said, turning toward the Gomangani, "and drag the body of the false Numa from the dais, for the TRUE Emperor has come to claim his throne." With a grim smile the ape-man whispered to La, "I think we shall be safe now!"

Tarzan ordered Jad-bal-ja to sit upon the dais. Addressing the simple blacks, he said: "See! The new Emperor does not have to be chained to his throne. Three of you go to your people. Summon them to the throne room that they, too, may see. Hurry, that we may have many warriors before the Bolgani return in force." Away sped the messengers, while the others gazed at Tarzan as though he were indeed a god who had worked a miracle with a savage beast of the jungle, not knowing he and the lion were friends of long standing.

BELLEVILLE MAN SLAYS HIS WIFE THEN SUICIDES

Daughter Found Woman Dead at Foot of Her Bed.

REVOLVER USED.

Man Was 52 Years Old and His Wife Was 55.

BELLEVILLE, March 29 (C.P.)—Samuel Bowler, 55, to-day shot his wife, Coral, 52, to death at their home here, afterwards taking his own life by shooting two bullets into his head.

Domestic trouble is said to have led up to the tragedy. Bowler and his wife had been estranged for some time, although they kept on living in the same house.

The shooting took place around 1 o'clock. A daughter, Margaret, 15, was tending to housework in the kitchen at the time. Hearing two shots in quick succession, she rushed to the bedroom on the same floor in the front of the house, where she saw her mother stagger and fall to the floor near her bed. The father was holding a gun in his hand. The girl ran screaming out of the house, while Bowler was sending two bullets into his head.

Mrs. Horace Bowler, a daughter-in-law, who was also in the house at the time, found the man lying prone on the living room floor with the .32 calibre revolver lying near him. She ran across the street to Alexanders grocery store where she notified police by phone. Sergeant Arthur Harmon and Constable Taylor proceeded to the house, with ambulance. Coroner Dr. F. R. Cronk, who had also been summoned, pronounced life extinct. Mrs. Bowler, who had two bullets in her body, had succumbed to internal hemorrhage while Bowlers death followed the self-inflicted shots. An inquest will be held this afternoon. The bodies were removed to a local undertakers

Almost every branch of the Japanese military service here and at Mukden, the old capital, was called out to-day to stop the rebel march.

Japanese airplanes attacked with bombs and machine guns the rebel ranks at Nunban, only 35 miles from here, in Eastern Kirin.

The rebel troops, sworn to overthrow the new government of the federated state, which they have charged with usurping the power in Manchuria under tutelage of the Japanese, are led by General Li Hai-Tsing.

Regulars Defeated

They apparently had defeated the regular troops of Governor Hsi Hsia outside the town of Nangun, which was reported on the verge of surrender. The small Japanese detachments sent from here messaged for help, saying they had suffered heavy casualties in the fighting.

The rebels have established their headquarters at Pu-Yu and are in control of the territory south of there as far as Nungan.

Japanese infantry troops from Mukden and artillery corps from Chengchiatun already have arrived here and an infantry regiment under Col. Oshima prepared this evening to entrain at Harbin for the battle zone.

The staff of the Japanese branch Consulate at Nunga and the remainder of the Japenese residents of the city were believed to have escaped before the presumed occupation by the Chinese

The last message received said a band of Japanese civilians, with the aid of air bombers, was proceeding through the surrounding rebel lines in the hope of proceeding eastward to the Yaomen, a station on the Chinese Eastern Railway, fifty miles north of here. It was not known whether small detachments of the Japanese police and soldiers, pre-

PRISON BREAKER ELUDES POSSES

Detective Shot By International Crook Making Desperate Fight for Life.

U. S. AIDING IN HUNT.

VANCOUVER, March 29 (C.P.)—Gallantly fighting against death from wounds, inflicted by bullets fired from a gun in the hands of William Bagley, international crook, jail breaker, bank robber and fugitive from justice late Saturday night in Vancouver, Detective David Maxwell of the Burnaby Municipal police force was holding his own in hospital here this morning. His condition was reported by hospital officials as "fair and easier." He is, however, in a very critical state.

Although armed posses have continued to scour the city and adjacent districts for Bagley since the shooting of Maxwell, not the slightest clue as to the whereabouts of the bandit has been reported, and Bagley appears to have dropped from sight just as completely as he did when he, with four other convicts, escaped from Oakalla Jail the night of Jan. 3. The man-hunt, however, is continuing.

Armed police in launches are searching along the banks of the Fraser River and tributary streams, as well as small bays and inlets of the Gulf of Georgia for the fugitive.

Washington State Police are cooperating in the hunt also and are running down every clue under the belief that he escaped the British Columbia police net and crossed to United States territory.

Girl Dope Smugglers Hide Contraband In Between Layers of Elastic Garters

CAIRO, Egypt, March 29.—(AP)—Girl dope smugglers into Egypt have taken to secreting their contraband in between layers of elastic in their garters, frequently lovely pink and green silk Paris creations.

Since girls are not liable to search at the gangplanks of vessels docking at Egyptian ports the smugglers are able to obtain heroin from sailors and get it off with little chance of attracting attention.

Another dodge recently discovered to be in use by dope smugglers involved secreting little packets of hashish, the wrappers of which had been plastered with camel's hair, in tufts of hair on the back of camels coming into the Egyptian cities from the desert.

So clever was the hiding of the little packets that it was impossible to discover them except by running fingers through the animals' hair.

James A. Beatty Is Found Dying Beside His Car

TORONTO, Mar. 29.—James A. Beatty, widely known power site engineer and president of Morrow and Beatty of Toronto and Peterborough, builders of the Abitibi Canyon development, the huge power dam and buildings at Smoky Falls, Kapuskasing, and recently the Chats Falls hydro plant on the Ottawa River, was found dead Monday near Fairport Beach, victim of the fumes from his motor car's engine.

He was a professional partner of Harold A. Morrow of Peterborough, this firm having constructed some of the largest engineering works in this country, especially in the harnessing of water powers.

Try to Raise Rear Wheels

Apparently overcome as he was trying to hoist the rear wheels of his light coupe from a slippery rut into which they had slid, Mr. Beatty had fallen forward after breathing the carbon monoxide fumes from the motor which he had left running. Despite efforts of physicians to resuscitate him, he died a few minutes after he was overcome. The engine was still running when he was found by a party of young Toronto people.

Following investigation by Coroner Dr. V. E. Cartwright of Pickering, it was announced there would be no inquest and the body was brought to Toronto. Mr. Beatty was 53 years of age and one of the most widely known power development contractors in Canada, his company having completed many of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission projects of the past decade

From the signs found by Coroner Cartwright and Chief of Police Oliver Crummer, of Pickering Mr. Beatty had managed to drive the car a distance of about 10 feet after it had first struck. Then it had struck a shallow furrow, heavily overgrown with grass. Into this the rear wheels had slipped and started to spin. After vain attempts to drive the light car out of the rut, the driver had alighted and taken a jack and a bundle of burlap from the tool compartment and set to work to free the foundered vehicle.

Knelt Near Exhaust Pipe.

With the motor still running while he undertook his work and breathing rapidly from his exertions, Mr. Beatty, in the opinion of the coroner, fell a ready victim to the fumes escaping from the exhaust pipe, which was only a few inches from his face as he knelt at the rear of the car. He had fallen forward, apparently overcome without realizing his danger.

Within a few minutes, a carpenter named McNeil, who was working at a nearby cottage, became attracted by the motor car standing isolated.

"He was a very fine engineer, and a man of the highest integrity and ability" said Fred Gaby, chief of the Hydro Power Commission engineering staff, last night. "I am thunderstruck at the news of his death. He was a capable contractor and known for his engineering skill all over Canada. I regret very much to hear of his being a victim of such an accident."

Engineering Graduate

Mr. Beatty was born in Fergus, son of Matthew and Catherine Beatty of that town. His parents were both of pioneer families and widely known in the district. After attending and graduating from the Fergus public and high schools, he came to the University of Toronto and entered the School of Practical Science, graduating in engineering.

Immediately after leaving university, Mr. Beatty joined the Riter

NOTE FOUND IN COAT.

BELLEVILLE, Mar. 29 (CP). The body of Roy M. Rosborough, 27, was found lying face downward beside his parked car on a side road on the 3rd concession of Thurlow with a .32 calibre revolver a short distance away, early this morning, by Walter Sheffield and his wife, who were returning home after visiting friends.

His coat was neatly folded and lying in the car, while a box of cartridges, the same as used in the gun, were lying on the running boar dof the car. A note was found on his coat stating: "If I do not make a good job of this do not revive me as it took much nerve."

The young man for some years has had periods of "melancholia" believed due to head injuries received in an automobile accident some years ago in the United States.

He leaves a father, four sisters and four brothers. He was a member of the United Church and fraternally was identified with the Belleville lodge A.F. and A.M. No. 123.

Dr. R. W. Tennent, coroner for the district and provincial Constable Gordon Campbell visited the scene and an inquest was considered unnecessary.

LEAGUE GROUP TO SEE HANKOW

Chinese Claim Commission Influenced by Japs—Urge Visit to Manchuria.

CONCESSION TROUBLE.

NANKING, March 29 (C.P.). — The commission sent out here by the League of Nations to investigate the Sino-Japanese conflict decided tentatively to-day to visit Hankow depite efforts in certain Chinese quarters to persuade them to go to Manchuria at the earliest possible moment.

The Nanking Government's contention is that the commissioners were sent here primarily to examine the Manchurian problem and that the suggestion for a visit to Hankow originated with the Japanese.

It is believed here that the Japanese are eager to have these visitors learn as much about Hankow as possible, particularly about the former British concession which was handed back to China in 1927.

It is generally admitted that the concession has been affected disadvantageously by unsettled conditions in the Hankow district, by the recent disastrous floods and by other influences.

The Commissioners, however, plan to leave Nanking on Friday by steamer for Hankow whence they will go on to Peiping by train. To-day they had a round of conferences with Chinese officials.

IN MEMORIAM

WEAVER—In loving memory of my dear wife, Mrs. Lorne Weaver, who died March 27th, 1928.

There is some one who misses you sadly
And finds the time long since you went,
There is someone who thinks of you always
And tries to be brave and content.
Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent the voice we loved to hear:
'Tis sad, but true—we wonder why,
A silent voice and empty chair,
It almost breaks our hearts,
But soon we'll meet again
Never more to part.

—Sadly missed by loving husband, Lorne and little family, Margrette, Jennie and Marion.

IN MEMORIAM

McCARTNEY—In loving memory of my dear sister, Mrs. George McCartney, who passed away on March 28, 1929.

RAY. — In loving memory of Ezra Ray, who passed away on March 28, 1931.

I have lost a dear companion,
A life linked with my own;
And day by day I miss him more
As I walk through life alone.
The blow was great, the shock severe—
I little thought the end was near;
It's only those who have lost can tell
The sorrow of parting without farewell.
In lonely hours of thinking,
Thoughts of you are always near;
I who loved you, sadly miss you
As it dawns another year.
Some may think that I've forgotten
When at times they see me smile;
But they little know the heartache
That smile hides all the while.

—Sadly missed by loving Friend, Glad.

IN MEMORIAM

LANGTON. — In loving remembrance of Helen Langton, who passed away 3 years ago to-day, and Phyllis Jean Langton, who passed away one year and a half to-day.

My heart is filled with memories
And will be to the end;
The memory of my darling girls
Who always were my friends.
As I sit and wonder
Just why they were the first to go?
A voice as soft as a baby's breath
Just whispers, "Don't you know?
"It's because God in his wondrous Love
For them, who were two of the best,
Has taken them from this weary world,
To Heaven and eternal rest.
The angels of heaven were robed in white,
All happy at play in the spirit of of light,
When Jesuse came smiling and said to his band:
'Here's two more little playmates, Give Helen and Phyllis your hand.'
They were only two little rosebuds,
Two sweet little flowers from birth;
But God took them home to heaven
Before they were soiled on earth."

—Ever remembered by Mother and Father.

Police Court

Whether it was Easter festivities or just the luck of the police, the docket in police court was crowded this morning for the first time in several months. In the absence of Magistrate Langley the heavy duties of the day were shouldered by two J. P.'s, Mayor Denne and City Clerk Armstrong, who were content in all but one case to adjourn hearing until the return of the regular occupier of the bench.

The one man dealt with was Elmer Liddell, who pleaded guilty to drunkenness on Woodbine Avenue. On April 26 last year Liddell was in the toils on a similar charge, so today he was charged as a second offender under the L.C.A. and was given the choice of paying a $50 fine or spending a month in jail. The court was in a kindly mood and levied no costs.

Clarence Smith, drover of Port Hope, did not plead to the charge that on Saturday afternoon he, while intoxicated, drove his car on the Port Hope highway. The information was laid by Highway Patrol Officer Ted Hornick. The case will be heard on Thursday. Smith posting a cash bail of $300 and a bond for an additional $2000.

Having pleaded guilty to selling liquor, Albert Buott urged that he be given a few days remand with freedom to settle up some business before being sentenced to jail. The court agreed to this favor, and a friend went Buott's bail for $500 until Thursday when sentence will be passed

Police expressed the expectation that several other will be implicated in the Buott case

Twice police have caught J Silvester Hart, Toronto youth, wandering about local streets and twice they have despatched him back to his family circle in the Queen City He bobbed up here again Saturday and was again boarded at the police station and charged with vagrancy in court He was remanded for three days to allow police to correspond with his parents and tighten up the reins of control

MAIN STREET TOPICS

Jabs and Jottings as Picked Up by an Examiner Reporter

Messengers of Spring — a chirpy little robin and a flock of wild geese are reported by Arthur Head, 257 Bethune street. The redbreast was seen this morning by Mr. Head, hopping around in the jerky manner peculiar to robins and stopping every now and then with head inclined to one side lisening inently for the movements of some unsuspecting worm, which would provide a juicy breakfast.

Wild geese were observed on Good Friday, winging westward in arrowhead formation. One of their number it is said, became separated from the rest of the flock and was obviously in distress.

PETERBOROUGH RELIEF ROOMS

The Relief Rooms on Hunter Street will be open on Wednesdays and Saturdays until further notice.

Winners of the door prizes at Brock Street Rink on Thursday night were: 1st, L. Dyer; 2nd, Mrs. R. Miller; 3rd Miss Gertrude Stabler. On Friday night the winners were: 1st, Miss Phyllis Davis; 2nd, Gordon Sabin; 3rd, Tom Snowden.

These special nights have been very popular, and if cold weather comes there will be one or two more of them.

ALL DEPARTMENT CALLED OUT

Entire equipment of Peterborough Fire Department was rushed to 183 Murray street at 1.35 p.m. to-day in answer to a frantic telephone call for assistance. The fire turned out to be nothing more serious than a troublesome chimney. No damage was caused.

Weddings

WHATLEY—WESTON.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at George Street Church parsonage on Thursday last, when Miss Alice Weston, daughter of Mrs. Martha Weston, of 487 Park Street, was united in marriage to Garfield Whatley, son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Whatley, 231 Wescott Street. The attendants were Harry Weston and Miss Daisy Leal.

After the ceremony the happy couple assembled with their guests at the home of the bride's mother when they were tendered a reception.

BELLEVILLE MAN SLAYS HIS WIFE THEN SUICIDES

Daughter Found Woman Dead at Foot of Her Bed.

REVOLVER USED.

Man Was 52 Years Old and His Wife Was 55.

BELLEVILLE, March 29 (C.P.)—Samuel Bowler, 55, to-day shot his wife, Coral, 52, to death at their home here, afterwards taking his own life by shooting two bullets into his head.

Domestic trouble is said to have led up to the tragedy. Bowler and his wife had been estranged for some time, although they kept on living in the same house.

The shooting took place around 1 o'clock. A daughter, Margaret, 15, was tending to housework in the kitchen at the time. Hearing two shots in quick succession, she rushed to the bedroom on the same floor in the front of the house, where she saw her mother stagger and fall to the floor near her bed. The father was holding a gun in his hand. The girl ran screaming out of the house, while Bowler was sending two bullets into his head.

Mrs. Horace Bowler, a daughter-in-law, who was also in the house at the time, found the man lying prone on the living room floor with the .32 calibre revolver lying near him. She ran across the street to Alexanders grocery store where she notified police by phone. Sergeant Arthur Harmon and Constable Taylor proceeded to the house, with ambulance. Coroner Dr. F. R. Cronk, who had also been summoned, pronounced life extinct. Mrs. Bowler, who had two bullets in her body, had succumbed to internal hemorrhage while Bowlers death followed the self-inflicted shots. An inquest will be held this afternoon. The bodies were removed to a local undertakers

CHINESE REBELS MOVE STEADILY ON CHANGCHUN

BATTLE AT NUNBAN.

Dictator Pu-Yi's Throne Trembles as Defenders Call for Reinforcements.

CHANGCHUN, Manchuria, Mar 29 (A.P.)—The throne of young Mr. Henry Pu-Yi, heir of the old Manchu emperors and newly-made dictator of Federated Manchuria, trembled to-day before the march of 7,000 Chinese rebels, advancing victoriously upon Changchun.

Almost every branch of the Japanese military service here and at Mukden, the old capital, was called out to-day to stop the rebel march.

Japanese airplanes attacked with bombs and machine guns the rebel ranks at Nunban, only 35 miles from here, in Eastern Kirin.

The rebel troops, sworn to overthrow the new government of the federated state, which they have charged with usurping the power in Manchuria under tutelage of the Japanese, are led by General Li Hai-Tsing.

Regulars Defeated

They apparently had defeated the regular troops of Governor Hsi Hsia outside the town of Nangun, which was reported on the verge of surrender. The small Japanese detachments sent from here messaged for help, saying they had suffered heavy casualties in the fighting.

The rebels have established their headquarters at Fu-Yu and are in control of the territory south of there as far as Nungan.

Japanese infantry troops from Mukden and artillery corps from Chengchiatun already have arrived here and an infantry regiment under Col. Oshima prepared this evening to entrain at Harbin for the battle zone.

The staff of the Japanese branch Consulate at Nunga and the remainder of the Japenese residents of the city were believed to have escaped before the presumed occupation by the Chinese

The last message received said a band of Japanese civilians, with the aid of air bombers, was proceeding through the surrounding rebel lines in the hope of proceeding eastward to the Yaomen, a station on the Chinese Eastern Railway, fifty miles north of here. It was not known whether small detachments of the Japanese police and soldiers pre-

PRISON BREAKER ELUDES POSSES

Detective Shot By International Crook Making Desperate Fight for Life.

U. S. AIDING IN HUNT.

VANCOUVER, March 29 (C.P.)—Gallantly fighting against death from wounds, inflicted by bullets fired from a gun in the hands of William Bagley, international crook, jail breaker, bank robber and fugitive from justice late Saturday night in Vancouver, Detective David Maxwell of the Burnaby Municipal police force was holding his own in hospital here this morning. His condition was reported by hospital officials as "fair and easier." He is, however, in a very critical state.

Although armed posses have continued to scour the city and adjacent districts for Bagley since the shooting of Maxwell, not the slightest clue as to the whereabouts of the bandit has been reported, and Bagley appears to have dropped from sight just as completely as he did when he, with four other convicts, escaped from Oakalla Jail the night of Jan. 3. The man-hunt, however, is continuing.

Armed police in launches are searching along the banks of the Fraser River and tributary streams, as well as small bays and inlets of the Gulf of Georgia for the fugitive.

Washington State Police are cooperating in the hunt also and are running down every clue under the belief that he escaped the British Columbia police net and crossed to United States territory.

WORLD TRAVELLER DEAD.

WASHINGTON. — Crittenden Marriott, 55, author, newspaperman and world traveller, died here yesterday after a long illness.

CAIRO, Egypt, March 29.—(AP)—Girl dope smugglers into Egypt have taken to secreting their contraband in between layers of elastic in their garters, frequently lovely pink and green silk Paris creations.

Since girls are not liable to search at the gangplanks of vessels docking at Egyptian ports the smugglers are able to obtain heroin from sailors and get it off with little chance of attracting attention.

Another dodge recently discovered to be in use by dope smugglers involved secreting little packets of hashish, the wrappers of which had been plastered with camel's hair, in tufts of hair on the back of camels coming into the Egyptian cities from the desert.

So clever was the hiding of the little packets that it was impossible to discover them except by running fingers through the animals' hair.

James A. Beatty Is Found Dying Beside His Car

TORONTO, Mar. 29.—James A. Beatty, widely known power site engineer and president of Morrow and Beatty of Toronto and Peterborough, builders of the Abitibi Canyon development, the huge power dam and buildings at Smoky Falls, Kapuskasing, and recently the Chats Falls hydro plant on the Ottawa River, was found dead Monday near Fairport Beach, victim of the fumes from his motor car's engine.

He was a professional partner of Harold A. Morrow of Peterborough, this firm having constructed some of the largest engineering works in this country, especially in the harnessing of water powers.

Try to Raise Rear Wheels

Apparently overcome as he was trying to hoist the rear wheels of his light coupe from a slippery rut into which they had slid, Mr. Beatty had fallen forward after breathing the carbon monoxide fumes from the motor which he had left running. Despite efforts of physicians to resuscitate him, he died a few minutes after he was overcome. The engine was still running when he was found by a party of young Toronto people.

Following investigation by Coroner Dr. V. E. Cartwright of Pickering, it was announced there would be no inquest and the body was brought to Toronto. Mr. Beatty was 53 years of age and one of the most widely known power development contractors in Canada, his company having completed many of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission projects of the past decade

From the signs found by Coroner Cartwright and Chief of Police Oliver Crummer, of Pickering Mr. Beatty had managed to drive the car a distance of about 10 feet after it had first struck. Then it had struck a shallow furrow, heavily overgrown with grass. Into this the rear wheels had slipped and started to spin. After vain attempts to drive the light car out of the rut, the driver had alighted and taken a jack and a bundle of burlap from the tool compartment and set to work to free the foundered vehicle.

Knelt Near Exhaust Pipe.

With the motor still running while he undertook his work and breathing rapidly from his exertions, Mr. Beatty, in the opinion of the coroner, fell a ready victim to the fumes escaping from the exhaust pipe, which was only a few inches from his face as he knelt at the rear of the car. He had fallen forward, apparently overcome without realizing his danger.

Within a few minutes, a carpenter named McNeil, who was working at a nearby cottage, became attracted by the motor car standing isolated.

"He was a very fine engineer, and a man of the highest integrity and ability" said Fred Gaby, chief of the Hydro Power Commission engineering staff, last night. "I am thunderstruck at the news of his death. He was a capable contractor and known for his engineering skill all over Canada. I regret very much to hear of his being a victim of such an accident."

Engineering Graduate

Mr. Beatty was born in Fergus son of Matthew and Catherine Beatty of that town. His parents were both of pioneer families and widely known in the district. After attending and graduating from the Fergus public and high schools, he came to the University of Toronto and entered the School of Practical Science, graduating in engineering.

Immediately after leaving university, Mr. Beatty joined the Riter

MAN FOUND DEAD BESIDE HIS CAR

Young Belleville Man Takes His Own Life on Lonely Side Road.

NOTE FOUND IN COAT.

BELLEVILLE, Mar. 29 (CP). The body of Roy M. Rosborough, 27, was found lying face downward beside his parked car on a side road on the 3rd concession of Thurlow with a .32 calibre revolver a short distance away, early this morning, by Walter Sheffield and his wife, who were returning home after visiting friends.

His coat was neatly folded and lying in the car, while a box of cartridges, the same as used in the gun, were lying on the running boar dof the car. A note was found on his coat stating: "If I do not make a good job of this do not revive me as it took much nerve."

The young man for some years has had periods of "melancholia" believed due to head injuries received in an automobile accident some years ago in the United States.

He leaves a father, four sisters and four brothers. He was a member of the United Church and fraternally was identified with the Belleville lodge A.F. and A.M. No. 123.

Dr. R. W. Tennent, coroner for the district and provincial Constable Gordon Campbell visited the scene and an inquest was considered unnecessary.

TORONTO, Ont., Mar. 29.—(CP)— Intimation that an agreement regarding the St. Lawrence waterway is expected shortly is contained in the prorogation speech of Rt. Hon. Sir William Mulock, Chief Justice and Administrator of Ontario, who today officially ended the third session of the 18th Legislative Assembly of the Province.

"My ministers expect to arrive at an agreement with the federal authority in relation to the construction of a joint seaway and power development in the international section of the St. Lawrence River," the speech said. "This is a matter of special satisfaction because it will facilitate the negotiation of the deep waterways treaty between the United States and Canada, and its submission to the respective legislative bodies concerned."

Favorable Outlook

The Chief Justice, after thanking members of the Legislature for "earnest consideration of the public welfare and for the enactment of much beneficial legislation," continued: "The favorable outlook for agricultural production during the coming season and the gradual restoration of commodity prices, promise materially to help the commercial situation.

Promise of detailed consideration by the government of the report of the Royal Commission on Cancer is also contained in the speech. The report "is a valuable contribution to the available information on the subject," Sir William said.

"Legislation has been adopted to enable the government to exercise the constitutional rights of Ontario with respect to insurance, as affirmed by the Judicial committee of the Privy Council. There is a general disposition to uphold firmly the provincial authority in this important respect.

Will Continue Work.

"Under the authority of your legislation, the Ontario Municipal Board will combine and continue

SINGER TO FACE TRIAL BY JUDGE IN SERIOUS CASE

Montreal Youth Held on Wounding Charge is Chief Witness.

TELLS OF STRUGGLE.

Admits Shooting Anderson Twice, Then Driving in Own Car to Toronto.

HAMILTON, Mar. 29. (C.P.) — George Anderson, choir singer, was to-day committed for trial on a serious charge involving Harry Brightwell, Montreal youth. Anderson was committed by Magistrate Vance, allowed $10,000 bail, and will be tried by a judge.

Brightwell, who is awaiting trial at the next assizes on a charge of wounding Anderson, was the chief witness against Anderson to-day.

Anderson was shot and wounded in his motorcar at a lonely spot on Green's side road late on the evening of Jan. 17. The affair was shrouded in mystery for several weeks until Anderson made a statement saying that Brightwell was his companion at the time. Brightwell was arrested in Montreal, charged with wounding Anderson. The charge against Anderson of attempting to commit a serious offense against Brightwell was laid on Saturday.

Shot Twice

In the course of his testimony today Brightwell declared: "I took a revolver out of my left hand coat pocket and shot him twice."

The court room was crowded when Anderson entered, still in a weakened condition from his injuries. He was arraigned and pleaded not guilty, and Brightwell was called to the stand, G. W. Ballard, crown attorney, obtaining the protection of the court for him.

LEAGUE GROUP TO SEE HANKOW

Chinese Claim Commission Influenced by Japs—Urge Visit to Manchuria.

CONCESSION TROUBLE.

NANKING, March 29 (C.P.). — The commission sent out here by the League of Nations to investigate the Sino-Japanese conflict decided tentatively to-day to visit Hankow depite efforts in certain Chinese quarters to persuade them to go to Manchuria at the earliest possible moment.

The Nanking Government's contention is that the commissioners were sent here primarily to examine the Manchurian problem and that the suggestion for a visit to Hankow originated with the Japanese.

It is believed here that the Japanese are eager to have these visitors learn as much about Hankow as possible, particularly about the former British concession which was handed back to China in 1927.

It is generally admitted that the concession has been affected disadvantageously by unsettled conditions in the Hankow district, by the recent disastrous floods and by other influences.

The Commissioners, however, plan to leave Nanking on Friday by steamer for Hankow whence they will go on to Peiping by train. To-day they had a round of conferences with Chinese officials.

NEW IMMUNIZATION ANNOUNCED FOR DREADED SCARLET FEVER

Treatment is "Toxoid" of Mixture of Fever Germs and Anti-toxin of Blood.

EASIER TO TAKE.

By F. B. Colton, A. P. Science Writer

WASHINGTON, Mar. 29.—(AP)—A new way to immunize children against scarlet fever, considered more potent than the anti-toxin now in use, was announced today by the U. S. Public Health Service.

The new treatment is a "toxoid" consisting essentially of a mixture of scarlet fever germs and the anti-toxin manufactured by the blood to resist them, with formalin added as a preservative. The "toxoid" is still undergoing tests but is considered so satisfactory that physicians of the public health service are treating their own children with it.

Better Protection

The toxoid is not only considered a better protection against scarlet fever than the old anti-toxin but is much easier to take because it produces only a mild reaction in the child.

The principle of the toxoid is to "fight fire with fire." Scarlet fever germs that have been made harmless are used in it to fight other scarlet fever germs that are still dangerous.

The new toxoid is made by mixing scarlet fever germs grown in the laboratory with the anti-toxin from horse blood. The mixture is treated with formalin to preserve it and is kept in a farm chamber for two months. At the end of that time the germs in the mixture seem to have lost their power to produce scarlet fever, but the anti-toxin is still capable of fighting the disease.

LITTLE HEADWAY ON PEACE TERMS

Sino-Japanese Negotiators Agree on Section Dealing With Cessation of Fighting.

SNIPING PROBLEM.

BY MORRIS J. HARRIS
(A. P. Staff Correspondent)

SHANGHAI, Mar. 29.—The first of the major obstacles which have confronted the negotiators for a Sino-Japanese truce was cleared away to-day when a definite agreement was reached on the section of the proposals dealing with cessation of hostilities.

But in spite of this achievement reached just before the conference adjourned until Thursday, the negotiators appeared to be practically as far apart as ever. "We have made no headway on the important issues," Quo Tai-Chi, chief of the Chinese delegation, said after to-day's conference.

Sniping Continues

The sniping problem was one of the hurdles that had to be leaped in achieving the agreement on ending hostilities, however, and the negotiators expressed the belief today that sniping would subside as soon as a truce agreement is signed.

Withdrawal of the Japanese troops, the great stumbling block to all peace efforts heretofore, was no nearer settlement.

The adjournment was taken to give an opportunity to both sides again to refer matters to their respective governments. In the meantime a military sub-committee will again take up the troop withdrawal problem and try to work out some plan of gradual retirement of the Japanese army that will be satisfactory to both sides.

The time limits for the withdrawal now have developed into a moot point, a conference spokesman said.

Famous Hindu Shrine Pipers Go On Strike

TORUVALUR, India (By Mail) (C.P.). — Temple pipers in the famous Shrine of Sri Tyagarajaswami, one of the most richly endowed temples in India, have gone on strike.

Their action, which created a sensation in Hindu religious circles, caused a suspension of the great procession of the Hindu idols through the streets surrounding the temple, a ritual of great antiquity.

The pipers claim a hereditary right from time immemorial of giving whole-time service in the temple. In consideration they receive a small honorarium. Their complaint is that this sum is not paid to them regularly.

MOLLISON GETS FINE RECEPTION

NO SLEEP 3 DAYS, NIGHTS.

CAPE TOWN, Mar. 29. — (C. P. Cable).—J. A. Mollison, young Australian aviator, rested to-day after setting a new record of four days 17 hours and 19 minutes for the flight from England to the Cape of Good Hope which clipped 15 hours and 18 minutes from the previous record of five days, eight hours and 37 minutes set last summer by Peggy Salaman, London society girl, and Gordon Store, young flying club instructor.

Exhausted by three sleepless days and nights during which he flew almost continuously and dazed by the crash of his little plane as he sought to bring it down on a beach rather than face the glare of airport lights in his weakened condition, Mollison could scarcely speak or stand when he finally got away from the vast crowd which welcomed him and was driven to his hotel.

His main concern was his plane, from the wreckage of which a Negro taxi-driver dragged him unconscious after he had missed his landing and piled it up in the soft sand, and he asked airport officials to do what they could towards salvaging it.

Over New Route

Mollison had gone through a severe ordeal on a flight which took him on a route never before flown an almost straight line south from Lympne Aerodrome, Eng., across the Sahara desert and down the west coast of Africa. He had flown 6,230 miles, 800 miles less than Miss Salaman and Shore, and had averaged 1,400 miles a day with only six stops enroute.

The Australian sacrificed everything in the plane which he might have termed a luxury, wheel brakes, passenger seats and all the upholstery, in an effort to lighten the machine as much as possible. He discarded a revolver which most desert fliers carry, and arrived here with only one piece of personal baggage, a toothbrush.

Mollison finished the flight in worse shape than he did his record-breaking dash of less than nine days to Australia last August. The hot pace set for him by Miss Salaman and Store forced him to fly in longer jumps and take less rest than he had intended during his preparations before their flight.

He was almost incoherent when interviewers fired questions at him after his black skinned recuer took him to the administration office of the airport. He explained his crash on the beach by saying: "I landed on the beach because the lights were too much for me. For the last two days I have seen all the instruments in duplicate. I simply couldn't land on the aerodrome in the glare of those lights."

Amy Johnson Present

Among the crowd that greeted the flier was Amy Johnson, noted British aviatrix, who forced her way through the throng to congratulate Mollison. She had arrived yesterday unexpectedly on the steamer Winchester Castle. "I think you're wonderful," she told Mollison and sympathized over his "washed out" appearance.

After the mayor of Cape Town had greeted the flier on behalf of the city, police tried to force a lane through the crowd. Hundreds of people, however, broke through the lines and, hoisting the exhausted man to their shoulders, carried him to a waiting automobile which finally bore him away to his hotel and much-needed sleep.

Age-Old Signal Has Court Sequel

LONDON, (By Mail, A.P.)— When London bus drivers pass each other in their busses they lift their right hands and waggle two fingers at each other.

It is an age-old custom, and was always rather pleasant until an omnibus pedant revealed that the gesture had its origin in an old Roman insult, and was known in ancient Rome as "putting horns to the devil."

Therefore when Edwain James Walker, bus inspector, was so signalled by Thomas William Sealey, conductor, he took offense and struck him, knocking out two teeth.

Haled to court, he pleaded "guilty under great provocation" to assault and paid a fine and costs of £5 10s (about $20).

NORFOLK DEAN SEES LINDBERGH

Clergyman Mum After Conference Regarding Return of Stolen Baby.

NO IMMEDIATE RESULTS.

HOPEWELL, N.J., March 29 (A.P.)—Hope that the Lindbergh baby would be sent home before the month's end ebbed to-day.

The Very Rev. H. Dobson-Peacock, former Canadian rector, of Richmond, Va., who risked his life yesterday for an hour's talk with Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, said afterward he would probably confer again with the flying Colonel in three or four days.

This statement by one of three Norfolk intermediaries who are trying to get the kidnapped child back was interpreted by newspapers as meaning that his immediate release was not expected.

Dean Dobson-Peacock said again, however, he and the other two, Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage and John H. Curtis, wealthy boat builder, were optimistic.

Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the State police, said again that "Col. Lindbergh does not believe the information obtained at Norfolk to be of specific significance in this case."

What the Norfolk Dean told the famous airman was kept closely guarded, although he did say the conference resulted from a "contact" with the kidnappers.

Storage Plant Burns, Loss Over $250,000

NORTH SYDNEY, N.S., Mar. 29. —(C.P.)—Fire following an explosion destroyed the $250,000 cold storage plant of Leonard Brothers and an adjacent warehouse of Thomson and Sutherland early this morning.

The explosion, so far not explained, occurred about 2.30 o'clock, and within an hour the large storage plant, the only one in Eastern Cape Breton, was a mass of flames.

Several other buildings were threatened for a time, but a shift in a brisk wind altered the situation and the firemen had the blaze under control shortly before four o'clock. They had been reinforced by detachments from Sydney and Sydney Mines.

60 PETERBORO' MEN MEET.

Stressing the need of an intelligent survey of present-day merchandising methods and the application of modern and progressive business principles, George S. Hougham, executive secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, last night addressed a large and representative group of local retail merchants, and issued a challenge that will in all probability result in consolidation and re-organization of the local branch of the association in the near future.

Presided over by James Juby and held at Hooper's Palm Tea Rooms, the function took the form of a dinner meeting, and was also addressed by Frank H. Boselly, merchandising service division of the association. It was attended by some sixty individual retail merchants.

The gathering was largely the outcome of negotiations between the headquarters of the association at Toronto and M. J. Maher of this city, who explained briefly that he had interviewed the provincial board of the association in the knowledge that Peterborough merchants required the services of such an association.

While favoring the voluntary chain of individual stores, which he considered to be the manifestation of a desirable form of co-operation, Mr. Hougham touched upon the effects to the individual retailer in the large chain store corporations.

In that respect he mentioned certain amendments to the Corporations Tax Act which had passed the Legislature on Thursday last, and which he was surprised to note had received scant mention in the press. The act was very significant, he thought, in so much as the new sub-section 24 imposes a tax of $50 upon each place of business of every incorporated company doing business in Ontario.

Section II. of that act further imposes a tax of 1 per cent. on the net revenue of incorporated companies in Ontario.

He did not wish to suggest that competition from chain stores should be repulsed by unfair taxation, but he did wish to point out that the amendments to the Corporations Tax Act as put through at Queen's Park represented a principle for which the association had stood for many years.

Pay Its Fair Tax

A PHYSICIAN of over 20 years' family practice in a Canadian city writes:— "Bran does not interfere with the normal acidity of the juices of the stomach or bowel, as is the case with alkaline laxatives. My wife has noted that the finest muffins are made of Quaker Natural Bran."

BRAN... Natural Corrective for constipation ills...

NATURAL bran . . . the coating of the wheat . . . supplies you with the roughage nature intended you should have. It is needed to sweep the intestines clear of accumulated body waste. It encourages the natural action of the intestinal walls by stimulating the muscles, thus promoting healthy, regular normal action.

Quaker Natural Bran furnishes this roughage in its finest form. It is milled to a softness so that it does not irritate.

Many physicians recommend Quaker Natural Bran. It is not habit forming. It induces healthy movement by the bowel itself rather than the action gained by using any drugs which abnormally stimulate certain organs. For constipation ills, abandon drugs. Use Quaker Natural Bran every day. Sprinkle it over your regular cereal. Or, eat it in muffins or cookies or some other form of bran baking. Easy recipes are found in every package.

REEVE STONE LAID TO REST

Community Mourns Passing of Prominent Citizen—Active in Public Affairs.

MASONIC FUNERAL.

CAMPBELLFORD, March 29 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent).—Mourned by the community and district the remains of the late J. Nelson Stone were laid to rest yesterday in the Stone Cemetery, Norham, after an impressive service at the Campbellford home conducted by the Rev. R. C. Tait and under Masonic auspices. Friends from many parts of the province were present to pay their last respects to one who was held in the highest esteem and as the cortege slowly wended its way through the streets of Campbellford toward the township of Percy, the band of the Northumberland Regiment under the baton of Bandmaster W. Pearson, played solemn funeral music in token of the community's respect. Reeve Stone was the chairman of the Band Committee of the Campbellford town council.

The death occurred on Saturday morning, March 26, when after a relapse of a few hours a stroke was sustained. The late Mr. Stone has been unwell for some time and recently under went a serious operation in Toronto, but was sufficiently recovered to attend to his duties, and was in attendance at a meeting on Thursday afternoon. He was taken ill on Friday morning. Born at Norham 64 years ago, he farmed in that locality and took a very active part in local activities, being a member of the Percy township council for many years in which he was for some time in the Deputy-Reeve's chair. He was also the president of the Norham Cheese Company.

A very enthusiastic Mason, he was Past Master of the Warkworth Masonic Lodge, A. F. and A. M., and Past First Principal of the Warkworth Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, being affiliated with the Golden Rule Lodge, A.F. and A.M. and the Ionic Chapter, R.A.M. of Campbellford.

Fifteen years ago the late Mr. Stone moved to Campbellford and became actively identified with the public life of the town. Holding every office in the town council with the exception of mayor, he was the reeve of the town at his death.

Active in the affairs of agriculture he has for many years been the secretary-treasurer of the Seymour Agriculture Society, which office he held at death; a member of the Dairy Council and the Fairs' Board and was also associated with the Widows' Allowance Board. In politics he was a Liberal and was an ardent worker for the cause, being a past president of the Ontario Liberal Association, County of Northumberland. Mr. Stone was a devout member of St. John's United Church, being an official of that body and took an active and keen interest in the church's work.

No immediate family survive, the late Mrs. Stone having predeceased her husband last December. The pall bearers were all members of the Masonic Order: G. A. Kingston, H. Donald, Frank Menzies, Dr S. L. O'Hara, Garnet Cassan and R. McDonald. Among those who attended the funeral from outside points were W. A. Fraser, M.P., Trenton; Nelson Parliament, ex-M.P.; J. F. McArthur, M.L.A., Cobourg; N. H. Hartt, Warden of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham; Harry Phillips, ex-Warden; George Grier, County road superintendent; Walter Fowlds and Dr. Hess, Hastings; Gordon Parker and George Quinn.

stores should be taxed because they were chain stores," he remarked, "but we have stood four-square on the principle that every corporation should pay its fair tax to the Government treasury. The Government has now accepted that viewpoint."

Mr. Hougham contended that the only manner in which competition could be successfully met was for the individual retailer to adopt modern and progressive merchandising methods.

"You are not licked if you will make intelligent use of organization," he told the retailers. He also remarked, "You have the world by the tail if you only knew how to exercise the pull."

He believed that a great many retail businesses were drifting. Like a ship without a compass, they did not know where they were going. But he reminded them they possessed a powerful organization with a Dominion charter in the Retail Merchants' Association, which was out to serve and assist retailers from coast to coast. "If you would only test and demonstrate your strength," he urged his hearers, "you would not only have your competitors tested, but licked."

Retailers Problems

What the association was trying to do, he said, was to relate itself to the problems of retailers and to do for the retailers from its headquarters precisely what was being done for the chain store managers by their headquarters.

In the past twelve months, he related how the association had taken hold of 25 to 30 retail businesses and by the introduction and application of tested plans had turned them from losing propositions into profit-making businesses. He felt proud of that achievement, he said, because it went to prove that the individual retailer who would adapt himself to modern methods could and would steal the thunder of his competitors.

There were three alternatives which the individual owned store faced to-day, he said. They were (1) extinction or elimination; (2) involuntary absorbtion, or (3) voluntary co-operation. He made a strong appeal that the retailers of Peterborough and district adopt the latter alternative.

Mr. Boselly's lecture provided an insight into the assistance which the association is affording to the individual retailer through its merchandising service department. Several charts were used by the speaker in making certain of his points more clear. One of the charts outlined the following eleven steps to success in retail distribution: (1) Accurate knowledge of operation; (2) Know how operation costs compare with competitors; (3) Rapid stock turn; (4) Control of stock turn by lines; (5) Continuous, accurate knowledge of financial standing; (6) Attractive store front; (7) Modern Store management; (8) Merchandise arrangement; (9) Right buying; (10) Correct selling; (11) Advertising.

Mr. Boselly dwelt upon the value of an attractive store front. He advised that best results could be obtained by the display of one particular line of merchandise at a time and with frequent changes of display.

Advertising Necessary

Advertising was another point which he stressed. It was an absolute necessity to success in business whether done through the newspapers, by dodgers or by direct mail campaigns. The main thing was to get the message across to the buying public and then to fully back up that advertising by the quality of goods and service.

His definition of success was: "The triumph of effort over obstacles, the achievement of a worthwhile purpose, the respect and confidence of all who know you, and the independence of a sound financial position."

A vote of thanks was tendered the speakers on the motion of Alderman J. D. Fitzpatrick, seconded by T. L. Edwards. Alderman Fitzpatrick was of the opinion that Peterborough more than any other place of its size needed a livening-up of its Retail Merchants' Association.

Once active in this city, he said, the organization is going back. It was a necessity in any community. He hoped that the meeting held that evening would provide the initiative for a great many of the retailers to get back of the association and re-organize in this city.

Take Infants' Feet For Identification

NOT MUCH CHANCE OF A MIX-UP NOW

Officials of Jefferson hospital, Philadelphia, seeking some method of positive identification in the case of new-born babes, have each and every young 'un footprinted immediately after birth. Nurses Margaret Spatz and Marie Scheerer are shown demonstrating this method on a youngster. While this system of identification is new in this hospital, the method has been used for years in Toronto Western hospital.

SALARY CUTS NOT CONFIRMED

No Trouble Expected Through Failure to Pass Necessary By-laws.

RESOLUTION PASSED

"It is claimed that the salaries of officials which were reduced by resolution at the last session of the Counties Council are really not affected by the by-laws appointing them have not been amended" says the Cobourg World. "Does this mean that all the resolutions passed at thhe January session about reducing salaries was just a lot of time wasted, and that no reductions are to take place until after the whole matter is rehearsed again, and confirmed by by-law?"

Enquiries by The Examiner from members of the council express the opinion that the salary reduction will be effective although most of them were adopted only by resolution, and original by-laws were not amended. It is felt that the officials will abide by the wishes of the Council, and if necessary the by-laws will be changed at the June sessions. From one source it was learned that by-laws cannot be made retroactive, but in the meantime the belief is held that no official will take advantage of any loophole that may have been left in the concluding rush of business at the January sessions. Some of the counties' officials are paid quarterly.

Compliance with the intention and resolution of the council is also expected of any commissioners whose stipends may have to be definitely fixed by by-law.

PETHERICK HOME IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

PETHERICK'S CORNERE, Mar. 29 (Examiner Correspondence).—A disastrous early morning blaze provided not a little excitement here Monday when the home of Herbert Petherick was practically demolished by fire. While seated at breakfast, Lorne Barnum noticed his neighbor's home was burning and immediately phoned Mr. Petherick, who was unaware that part of his roof was about to fall upon him. Neighbors were quickly on the scene and due to their energy practically all the furniture was removed from the lower part of the house as well as some from the upper storey. The fact that the fire started in the west end of the house while a high wind was blowing from the north-east, gave the firefighters a chance, and they were able to save the summer kitchen and wood house after much hard work.

As a fire had not been burning for some hours in the section of the house first attacked by flames, it is thought that a spark from the eastern chimney fanned by the breeze had started the conflagration.

Mrs. Langford's maiden name was Didama Campbell. She was born in Cramahe Township where she lived until they moved to Norham, some years ago. Her husband predeceased her many years ago. She leaves to mourn her loss, one daughter, Mrs. Claire Copperthwaite, of Dartford, and two sons, Wallace, of Niagara Falls, and Leonard, at home. One stepdaughter, Mrs. A. Morrow, of Percy Township; one half-sister, Mrs. Andrews, of Brighton, and a half-brother, Wilbert Campbell, of Dartford, also survive. Two members of the family, a son, William, and a daughter, Jessie (Mrs. Gilbert Nelson, of Warkworth) died some years ago.

MAURICE W. GRAY.

MILLBROOK, March 29.—(Examiner Correspondence). — The death of Maurice W. Gray, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Wentworth Gray, following an illness of several weeks, took place on Sunday, March 27, in his twenty-eighth year. For the past year deceased, who was born and brought up in this vicinity, had been manager of the local plant of the Lindsay Creamery Company and the Millbrook Coal Company. In politics he was a Conservative and in religion an Anglican, a member of St. Thomas' Church, and as long as health permitted, an active worker in the A.Y.P.A.

Last September Mr. Gray was married to Miss Gladys McQuilkin, of Colborne, and besides his sorrowing widow, is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wentworth Gray, with whom he and his wife had been living since failing health compelled his resignation from his business responsibilities in January of this year. There are also three brothers—Dr. Alvin, of Vancouver, B. C.; Henry and George, at home—and three sisters—Mrs. Lloyd Acton, of Detroit, Michigan; Mrs. Russell H. Smith, of Millbrook, and Miss Maretta, of Raeboro.

Called away at such an early age, Mr. Gray, who with the exception of living for a short time in Detroit where he held a business position, had spent practically all his life in Millbrook, and was a highly respected young citizen, actuated by fine principles in all his conduct, and had won for himself a wide circle of friends. An expression of the esteem in which he was held was evidenced by the community gathering at the home of his parents before he left for Detroit a few years ago, when on behalf of the citizens generally he was presented with a handsome solid leather club bag, the accompanying address mentioning with sincere regret his departure from his home town.

The funeral took place from the family residence, King street, Millbrook, to-day, at 4.30 p.m., the Rev. William Simpson, B.A., rector of the parish of Cavan, officiating. Interment was in the Presbyterian Cemetery, Millbrook.

SHAKESPEARE ROTARY THEME

AT CAMPBELLFORD.

CAMPBELLFORD, March 29 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — The background of the life and conditions surrounding the works and activities of William Shakespeare was the subject taken for the Campbellford Rotary Club address yesterday by G. A. Kingston, who gave a splendid talk on the growth of the drama and the literary atmosphere in which the great English poet lived and produced. The chair was occupied by the president, Rev. R. C. Tait. A short address on the cause and cure of the present depression was given by Dr. H. B. Longmore.

Mr. Kingston outlined the growth of the drama from its origin in 500 B.C. to the time of Shakespeare. The commencing of the drama was in Greece and consisted of songs and dialogues portraying the achievements of some of the national heroes.

Rome took from Greece this art and used it until the decline of that empire when the church carried on the work, using it; however, to portray events in the life of Christ, given by the priests at certain seasons of the year. This eventually became a lay activity.

Sea Trade Prominent.

English sea trade played a big part in bringing to England the drama which was first made prominent by Spencer in his "Fairie Queen." Although music was used in the old theatres to a great extent, and as Green writes "England became the home of singing birds," the tendency of the people was dramatic.

London at this time, the reign of Queen Elizabeth, was a small city of 15,000 people, dirty and squallid, the first theatre being built in the suburbs, the old Globe Theatre. It was in this house that Shakespeare first produced his plays. Drama was the prevailing theme and the house was crowded for the most part with men, for during the Elizabethan period the theatre was the newspaper of the day. No scenery was used in these productions, and boys took the place of girls in the performances. Many writers of indifferent plays lived during this time, but many, like John Marlow, met their end in drunken brawls.

It was into this atmosphere that Shakespeare was born on April 23, 1554, the son of John Shakespeare, of Stratford-on-Avon. He was educated at the Grammar School at that place, but was forced to leave owing to his father's financial conditon. In 1582 he married Ann Hathaway, eight years his senior. He went to London in 1592 because he could see opportunities in that city and joined a company of players who were known later as His Majesty's Players. He took part in many of his own plays, and in 1594 had the honor of playing before Queen Elizabeth. It is said that Leah was the greatest creation of any man's mind, and that Falstaff was the greatest comedy.

Shakespeare was intensely practical and in his work portrayed England from the point of view of every social strata in the land. He was human and on a level with all classes. His works speak of humor, morality and common sense, and have been among the finest gems ever given to the world.

Committee Appointed to Deal With All Questions Relative to Bus Service.

(By Examiner Staff Correspondent)

CAMPBELLFORD, Mar. 29.—Very little business came before the Campbellford Board of Education at their regular meeting held last evening in the Public Library and at which George O'Sullivan, chairman of the board presided.

Mr. O'Sullivan addressed the members of the board stating that he had appointed a committee pro tem to deal with all questions relative to the bus service, this committee comprising Principal E. H. Greig, T. E. Hall and A. G. Thompson. This action had been taken he said owing to certain matters relative to this sphere of the board's work which had demanded prompt attention. After discussion this committee's appointment was ratified on motion of W. M. Stephens and Dr. H. B. Longmore, to function until the end of the school term.

Dealing with the correspondence, T. E. Hall was appointed the board's delegate to attend the annual meetings of the Ontario Ratepayers' and Trustees Association being held in Toronto on March 29, 30, 31.

KEYSTONE COP LEADS AS MOVIE ATTRACTION

HOLLYWOOD, Mar. 28.—Modern prototypes of the Keystone cop and his pie-throwing gang, who made their debut when films were in their infancy, are the favorites of the screen, a wide survey indicates.

Running the slapstick comedians a close second for honors are the pictures" based upon mystery plays, detective stories and the like.

Then comes the travel pictures and films of explorations. Western pictures have lost but little of their popularity and follow next.

These preferences are noted in the first ballots to be analyzed in a movie poll now being conducted in many cities by the Association of Motion Picture Producers, Inc.

AN ASTOUNDING PERFORMANCE.

Australian flyers have added some of the most brilliant pages to the history of post-war aviation, and the latest addition to the list of record-breaking Antipodean airmen, the youthful J. A. Mollison, is apparently well worthy of a prominent place in the hall of fame.

Mollison landed yesterday at Cape Town, South Africa, just four days, 17 hours and 19 minutes after he had taken off from England, covering the 6,000 miles nearly fifteen hours faster than the best previous record, and thus adding the England-to-the-Cape mark, to his feat of making the fastest passage from Australia to England.

As a triumph of sheer courage, endurance, flying skill and navigational accuracy, Mollison's latest performance places him in the forefront of the world's greatest airmen.

His dash to the Cape was undoubtedly a terrific ordeal; for three nights in succession the young Australian flew all night, speeding over the ocean, over the desert and then over wild sections of Africa where a forced landing would have meant disaster, and the physical and mental strain involved in such a flight must have been almost crushing, yet he won them to complete success.

In the list of great flyers the name of J. A. Mollison should be printed in imperishable letters.

THE SALES TAX REVOLT.

The difficulty of endeavoring to arrive at a taxation program that will come even remotely close to pleasing everybody is admirably illustrated by recent developments in the United States Congress where the rank and file bolted against the House leaders and defeated a proposal to establish a sales tax.

That revolt was inspired by the pressure of opposition to the sales levy from mercantile interests throughout the United States, who set up a lobby that is described as one of the most powerful intangible battering rams that ever hit a congressman on the head.

It succeeded, and now Congress is faced with the task of finding other less objectionable forms of taxation that will permit of a balanced budget.

According to some authorities, the House leaders are endeavoring to make these substitute tax proposals as obnoxious as possible in the hope that Congress may yet revert back to the sales tax plan.

Thus there are being brought forward taxation proposals in regard to automobiles, telephones, bank checks, real estate transfers, electricity and other things, all of which are expected to produce another terrifying barrage of protest.

Canadian experience with the sales tax would go far to show that it is the most effective and least painful of all levies, and with heavy taxation necessary, most people in this country will feel that our neighbors have made a mistake in rejecting this simple method of raising revenue.

THE ONTARIO SITUATION.

The story that in provincial Conservative ranks there is a movement on foot to endeavor to persuade Hon. G. Howard Ferguson to resign from his post as Canadian High Commissioner at London and to resume his position as leader of the Conservative party in Ontario has a convincing sound.

Certainly the manner in which the Government has functioned during the session and its attitude toward the $125,000 payment to John Aird, Jr., has left a large number of Conservatives in all parts of the Province with the feeling that unless there is more decision and better judgment shown their provincial organization is riding to a fall.

The pressure of economic conditions is in itself a decidedly potent factor against the administration's chances of success in a general election, but at least some of that handicap could be offset by bold, courageous and wise leadership and a keener ability to judge public opinion.

Mr. Henry's leadership has not been marked to any noticeable degree by such qualities; in many questions, but particularly in regard to Hydro affairs, the Premier has shown a tendency to ignore public sentiment that if persisted in until a provincial election becomes necessary may well be fatal.

The desire to see ex-Premier Ferguson back at the helm is, therefore, natural under the circumstances, but a lot of water may run under the bridge before that hope is turned into reality.

THOSE RADIO LICENSES.

There is one feature in connection with the radio controversy on which Canadians should be able to find common ground, and that is that the Federal Government should either give value for the increased license fee to be collected from set-owners or else make an honest admission that the extra dollar has been added purely and simply for the purpose of raising revenue.

As everybody knows, radio broadcasting is conducted in Canada on a competitive basis with the stations financed through advertising.

The Government has done nothing in the way of providing broadcasting facilities, although it maintains control over them, and the $1.00 license fee it has collected each year has been levied for the purpose of providing a radio interference service, and not as a tax.

If this contention is still advanced as a reason for doubling the license fee, then Canadian set-owners have every right to demand that the Government's interference service shall be increased in proportion, and that listeners-in shall be assured therefore of better reception conditions.

There has been no announcement, however, of any intention of bettering the service hitherto rendered, and in default of such an announcement those who have to pay this heavier fee are justified in the conclusion that the increase is not based on services to be rendered, but is just a bit of new taxation framed in accordance with the all-the-traffic-will-bear policy that too often distinguishes public spending bodies.

CAMPAIGN FUNDS.

What a tendency there is to duck when campaign funds are mentioned, and the public has been taught to believe that there is something sinister about such funds. Every organization, or association, in the known world has campaign funds for the carrying on of its work, no matter what it is.

The Church carries on a campaign for funds all the time, and collects at least once a week. The municipality taxes us all and carries on its campaign once a year to secure money to prosecute the necessary work of the municipality, etc. Governments are getting after people everlastingly now, and they come right into your back door and insist upon knowing everything about the place, even to the number of dogs and cats you have.

A fund raised for party purposes is no more tainted than is any of these. A political party fund is just as respectable as a Bible Society fund, and it is time that a lot of this snivelling hypocrisy about party funds, by men who are even beneficiaries, should be exposed.

If party funds are used for corrupt purposes, then they do become a public menace and a blot on the good name of the party and the country. Under present-day conditions, however, there is very little of the party funds used for corrupt purposes, and that is why the Recorder and Times says party funds devoted to legitimate purposes are just as respectable as the funds collected for any other cause.

Speaking of the Press and party funds, pray where do these gentlemen think the money comes from to pay for their page advertisements, and, take it from the Recorder and Times, we are all after them? From what source is the cash derived that pays for the big billboards, the huge cartoons, the expenses of speakers, the payment of halls and the providing of tons of literature issued by both parties? This is all perfectly legitimate work that could not be carried out except funds were provided from some source.

Further than that, there is the added cost in this age of the radio, which is enormous in itself. Where do the innocent people sitting about the receiving set, arrayed probably in dressing-gown and slippers, imagine the money comes from to deliver into their ears the speeches of leaders and others during the campaign? If there were no party funds this would be impossible.

In addition, each of the leading parties must keep up head offices twelve months of the year, with competent, intelligent men and women employed in the work, and from these offices goes out almost constantly printed matter advocating the policies of one party or the other.

Campaign funds do not all imply corrupt use of the money obtained, but they are essential to the carrying on of political propaganda, just as they are essential to the carrying on of any other organization, and their distribution is just as honorable.

The question will be asked, "What about the sources of these campaign funds?" That is a matter that must be seriously considered by the people of Canada. It probably will be admitted that the great bulk of campaign fund subscriptions come from those who are interested, either in legislation, contracts, tariff, the banking business, or other items closely identified with the Government. The banking institution that has a big account with the Government is just as much to be condemned for subscribing to the party funds of the Government as is the contractor, who has a contract from the same party.

It has been suggested that all subscriptions to party funds should be published, and that might aid in a measure in lessening the contribution of those who have received, or expect to receive, some direct gain. The terms of such a statute would have to be very clear, and, in addition, the legitimate expenses of campaigns would have to get more than a ten per cent. cut, if the larger contributors were to be prohibited from following the usual custom of contributing to the party, the policies and practices of which are expected to do them most good.

It is a big question, and it is well worth thought, consideration and action, but what the writer is trying to make clear in this article is that a political campaign fund, if properly used, is just as respectable as any other fund raised and distributed for the benefit of the public.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Every new flying record makes the world just that much smaller.

It looks as if old man winter is trying to maintain a blockade on spring. The latter had better apply the closure.

President De Valera is sticking to his position in regard to the abolition of the oath of allegiance. The next move will be up to the British Government.

The introduction of decidedly low week-end rates by the Canadian railways looks like very good business. Travel by rail should be greatly popularized as a result.

THE IRISH SITUATION

To The Editor of The Examiner,

Sir,—An Irish Roman Catholic in the well known Catholic journal "The Commonwealth" gives his view of the present crisis in Ireland. He says that the oath of allegiance referred to is not an oath of subjection but an obligation voluntarily agreed to by Southern Ireland to be faithful to that organization of free states known as the British Commonwealth of Nations.

Valera can rescind this oath or agreement but to do so is to rescind an agreement entered into when Home Rule was given. The annuities referred to are the interest and sinking fund by which Southern Ireland (and this applies to N. Ireland also) pays back to England the money advanced to Ireland to buy out the landlords under the Wyndam Act of 30 years ago. To repudiate this is to repudiate a common debt.

JEWS OF TO-DAY NOT ALL JUDAH

The Editor, Examiner,

Dear Sir,—I have herewith to thank you for reporting my address delivered to the Peterborough Branch of the British Israel World Federation of Canada Inc. in your issue of March 11th.

I would, however, like to draw your attention to the following facts that you may publish if you care so to do.

First of all, it is the International Jew who is the actual active agent in Anti-Christian work and propaganda, and the International Jew Government set up in Russia under the Bolshevik regime is separate from, and does not connote, the whole Russian people, but holds them in a terrible bondage. Again, I was tracing the history of the Israel people, with whom Judah are now incorporated, and state very definitely that the Jews of today are not "all Israel," they are not "all Judah," they are "a remnant" representing the extremely ...ed generation which have come down through the centuries, from the representatives of the families who came out from Babylon in the time of Cyrus and Darius of Persia, "I will take you one of a family and two of a city and bring you into Zion," that is why the genealogies are given of those who returned under Zerubabel to build the second temple. The first temple was built by Soloman under God, and was destroyed. The second temple was built by the "Yehudim" from which is derived the general name of jew, and was utterly destroyed.

The third temple is to be—and has been in process of building since the type, "The Headstone of the Corners," was given to the then builders—and they, having rejected "The Type," can now never build again, but those who, as a race of World builders, have "accepted" "The Headstone" will compose a living temple—built without hands—of living stones, and "The Headstone" will be manifested when the temple has been built.

Now the Head is Christ, and by the power of that Head will the temple come into being and in no other way, and so will come to pass the saying in Revelation: "A pure river...of...water of life." See the Old Testament, "and out of thee shall flow rivers of living waters," for comparison. The tree of life—12 fruits, yielded "her" fruit every month. The "Tree of Life" is the woman Israel, "and the leaves of the tree for healing of the nations," the Christ-men are the "leaves" of the tree. —see His face, and His name in their foreheads, they will be thinking and acting Christ who is "in them." His servants shall serve Him. Who are "His Servants?" The nation and company of nations—the pure river of water of life." That is what I wanted to convey to my hearers.

It means, to vision of the Kingdom of God in being, in the "living heart" of the "living earth," not alone physically living, but spiritually also, and to contain the Holy Spirit makes the "earth" "live." Physical lumps of "earth" only physically alive are "dead" while yet they stand upon their feet, if they have not "the spirit." And it is only Jesus—following—doing—like Him that shows the spirit.

If we could get the whole race and nations "wakened" with the spirit of Jesus, then it would be—"not by might, nor by power, but by My Spirit," saith the Lord.

The conductor of the band glared at the cornet player. "Why on earth," he yelled, "did you leave off playing just as we got to the chorus?"

"Well," said the cornet player (a raw recruit), "on my music it said 'Refrain'—so I did!"—Pearson's.

Tommy was hopeful, but doubtful, as he handed in his exouse to his teacher. Seven times he had worked the same long sum, and seven times he had been told to repeat it.

Teacher was sympathetic, but the figures were still wrong. "I'm very sorry, Tommy," she said, "but it is still twopence out."

Wearily Tommy searched his pockets and then proffered two coppers. "Here you are, Miss," he said, "I'll pay the difference."—Pearson's.

CROP REPORTS.

Durham—Most farmers are of the opinion that fall wheat has not been hurt as yet, although it has become very brown. Livestock seem to have wintered exceptionally well and from all reports the majority of farmers have sufficient supply of roughage to carry them through. Commercial hatcherymen are somewhat disappointed with the percent of hatchability they have obtained so far this year. The demand, however, for young chicks has been exceptionally good.

Frontenac—Number of farmers questioned as to condition of new seeding of clovers report many fields damaged by heaving, especially on knolls. Another fall of snow has helped to keep meadows covered. No indication as yet of any winter killing in small fruits. Some cheese factories are running but not enough milk is being diverted to manufacture of cheese to make any material difference to quantities received at creameries and milk plants. Calves are being marketed in larger quantities and bring around $5.00 to $6.00 each, depending on quality. Prices for butter and cheese have advanced and the outlook is a little more promising.

Lennox and Addington — Several farmers are enquiring for small quantities of seed grain; owing to very poor quality of the high percentage of 1931 crop, many farmers have decided to feed their grain and purchase fresh supply for seed purposes.

Peterborough—Some cattle are going to market, one car load of heavy steers brought $6.40 on the Montreal Market early in the week. Hogs have been bringing around $4.40. There is quite a good demand for baby chicks, at prices from 12-15c. Many of the breeder hatcheries are sold out until the end of April.

Prince Edward—Many farmers harvested their ice supply this week. Others took advantage of the snow to draw up their wood. A carload of grade cows was shipped to Timmins during the week. Prices ranged from $40 to $50 each. There are more early lambs in the county this year than usual.

Hastings—The travelling clipper cleaners are busy throughout the district preparing seed grain. The run has been about average. Heavy loss in spring litters of hogs. Lamb crop is reported as good throughout the district and losses of lambs have been less than usual. Veal calves are being marketed in increasing numbers.

DISTRICT NURSE

by Faith Baldwin

Esposito came up to eat his dinner. "You stay," begged Mrs. Esposito of Ellen. She added something in rapid Italian to her husband and he laughed and translated. "She says you are too thin, all American are too thin," he told her, white teeth gleaming, "She wants you to take dinner with us. She's always complaining about Gilda, you know, trying to make her fat."

Ellen stayed. She liked the Espositos. And it was a good opportunity to find out about the little Vitar boy next door. She had been called in there a week or two previously to look after the child. There was a suspicion that the stepmother ill-treated him. If so, something had to be done, and quickly. But all her questioning of the other neighbors had brought forth nothing. They were afraid, she thought, of Vitar himself and his dark, thin, dynamic second wife, Sicilians——

During dinner soup, ravioli, spaghetti and melon—the hospitable Mrs. Esposito talked continuously about Gilda and about Mike. Her husband, smiling, translated. They were both intensely proud of the two children. "So American," said Esposito, with, it seemed to Ellen, a certain wistfulness.

She managed to speak of the Vitar boy. Yes, Esposito told Ellen, frowning, the child was ill-treated; the woman beat him with a leather strap. You could hear him screaming.

Ellen nodded, sombrely, and said nothing. Presently she took her departure. Standing a moment at the doorway, Esposito having left and gone down to the shop, she was saying good-bye to his wife, when she saw a tall dark young man coming up the stairs. He carried a small package in his hand. He hesitated, seeing Ellen; Mrs. Esposito's face darkened. She screamed at him in Italian. He said something, thrust the package into her hands. Gilda, Ellen caught that much. A little box fell out. She picked it up, stooping and grunting. A string of imitation pearls. She tossed them from her. "Madona!" said Mrs. Esposito to Ellen, "that Fontana! Always after mia Gilda! She not like heem."

Ellen left, smiling a little. So Gilda had a beau, whom she didn't like, whom, presumably her mother and father didn't like.

Ellen went on back to the sub station to make her reports and to see what could be done about the Vitar boy, to get in touch with SPCC and other authorities. The boy should be taken away from those dreadful people.

And now Nancy and her mother had returned, a little color in Mrs. Adams' face, while Nancy had managed to tan beautifully during her short stay.

"What have you been doing?" Mrs. Adams wanted to know of Ellen.

Ellen told her. Mrs. Adams was silent. She then remarked, "I hope you had good sense enough not to bring Mr. Bartlett to the apartment while I was away."

"Only," said Ellen, "as far as the door. You do stay conventional, don't you, Mother."

"It pays," said Mrs. Adams, and her eyes darkened.

A few days later, just before the start of her own vacation, Ellen, coming out of a house on the outskirts of her district, was walking down the street when from a tall, narrow, dingy looking lodging house an elderly hag of a woman rushed out, wringing her hands and screaming. "Police," she was shrieking.

People started to hurry toward her just as she saw Ellen. She ran to her. "Nurse," she said, "Nurse!" Her loose lips were white, they shook. "A woman——" she gasped—— " my house——suicide—— you can smell the gas——"

The officer on the beat hurried up. Ellen knew him. He nodded to her briefly. "What's this? Stand back, you!" he ordered the little gathering crowd.

He jerked a thumb at Ellen. Together they raced into the house and up the rickety stairs, the woman at their heels. "Top floor, back," she gasped.

A knot of people, possibly other lodgers, were gathered at each landing.

They reached the door. It was locked. The cop said to Ellen tersely—"Hold everything!"

A shove of his strong shoulder, another, another, another, and the flimsy lock had broken.

The room was small, dark, narrow. There was one dirty window. There was a bureau which had seen better days. A chair, straight-backed, with a coat flung over it. There was a wash-stand. There was also a narrow bed.

Ellen, choking, got to the window and opened it. The officer was bending over the bed. The pipe line to the gas jet had been wrenched away, by what desperate and despairing hands, and was pouring its deadly fumes into the room.

The policeman carried the woman who lay on the bed out of the room and down to a lower landing. He said, "Will you take charge, nurse? I'll ring headquarters and get an ambulance and the gas company. She's not dead," finished the cop, without brutality but with the indifference engendered by a hundred such scenes in a workaday world.

She was not dead. She lay there fully dressed. Ellen knelt down beside her. The lodging-house keeper came close. "She only come here last night," she said. Said she'd pay me today for a week in advance."

Ellen was staring down at the unconscious woman. There was a window on the landing which a moment before she had raised, high. A little wind stirred through. A little sun. Ellen thought, I musn't faint——

She was working, while she fought against the sickness, the blackness which crept over her. Working.

Dark hair, with red lights in it; faint color in thin cheeks, eyes that were closed but that would be blue, Ellen knew, if ever they opened again.

"There's the emergency wagon," reported the cop, after what seemed years.

She spoke to the policeman, standing a little apart, her hand on his blue sleeve, here eyes never leaving the slim form stretched out on the dirty boards, wrapped in the blankets Ellen had managed to pull off the bed and put about her. The cop gulped and swore, under his breath.

She thought of the police blotter, the report that must go in, and so she said, merely, "I'll attend to things when the ambulance comes. I know her, you see."

The ambulance clanged down the street. Ellen's heart was choking her. Pete would be on it. Oh, God, why hadn't she thought of that!"

Coral, Coral, why did you do it? Didn't you know how much we love you, didn't you know we wanted you to come home?

INSTALMENT 12.

Down the street swung the dark ambulance, leaving a trail of sound, sinister sound, the back-wash of an insistent clangor. It stopped. People were standing about. A second policeman had come up. People were whispering, exclaiming "Wisht," said a gaunt individual, "wisht I had the noive. . . ."

Pete McGregor swung himself off the ambulance and spoke briefly to his driver. He ran up the steps of the house, carelessly shoving aside the people who had gathered on the peeling stoop. "Suicide, doc? Is she dead?" asked some one. "How the hell do I know?" inquired the interne.

He spoke to the policeman who was on the stairs. "Gas," explained the cop, briefly. "What! Another?" asked Pete. "Can't they do something different for a change? This gets monotonous."

Hard-boiled, you see. Because he had to be. Because his own years had been so strange and difficult. The boyhood of the neighborhood, this neighborhood. More to eat, warmer clothes than a lot of fellows. Baseball, spring evenings; football; a second-hand bike. School and a girl with dark thick braids, roughened into curls at the ends. A darkness shot through with ruddy lights. Blue eyes, very deep. His girl, growing up, growing out of the adolescent braggart attitude toward girls, growing into manhood, very young manhood, loving, planning to work to be something. For her. Then, disaster, and the drifting downward. Too young, too hurt to pull himself up by the bootstraps and tell himself there were other girls . . . a poolroom brawl, a young man rescued from the quick flash of a knife, out of sheer perversity, perhaps, because Pete didn't happen to like the knife wielder. Then, interviews, conferences, the big doctor with his shock of gray hair. "I want to do something for you, son. You've done something for me I can't repay."

Well, he'd led his class at high school. The university was no, so different—not so difficult nor medical school. And then a gradual growing into an interest which blocked everything else out, which anesthized him, somehow.

Now the interneship at ths hospital. Nearly over. They spoke of him there, the men who mattered. "McGregor's a good man. He's sound on diagnosis. A worker."

But the things he saw, the things he heard! He'd thought himself calloused, thought he knew life pretty well, thought nothing could turn him sick, wound him with pity, clutch at his heart. He was mistaken. Charity wards; an ambulance clanging through the streets.

Hard-boiled. Pete McGregor.

He ran up the stairs. At the head of the landing a girl, in a dark gray uniform. In that curious moment he saw everything with an individual distinctness. Saw the fair hair under her unbecoming hat. Saw that she was ashen, that she had been crying. Heard her say as he himself said—"Ellen!" Pete, you must help us, it's —oh, Pete, it's Coral.

No, things didn't happen like that. The emergency crew from the gas company were working over her. One said, "She's coming around, doc."

He said to himself, as he mechanically replied, "Oke, good work, boys. I can't look. I mustn't. He was shaking. The hands which held the stethescope were shaking. His mouth shook.

God, I can't look!

Ellen's hand was on his arm. She said, low, for his ears only, "Brace up. You've got to. You've got to help."

She was thinking . . . her stage name . . . on the reports . . . on the police blotter. Perhaps we can keep it from mother . . .

He forced himself to look. That wasn't Coral. Yes, it was Coral. He said to himself, I've got to get out of this . . .

But he took no step. He stayed. He did all that was necessary. The stretcher came up the stairs. He and his driver carried her down, breathing now, moaning a little.

Ellen ran down after them. She said urgently, "Get her into the hospital, do everything you can for her. I'll telephone Nancy. I'll come as soon as I can."

"I'll fix things up," he promised, roughly.

The stretcher had been shoved into the waiting car. The cop swung himself aboard. Pete said to Ellen, "It can't be Coral."

He knew it was.

She said dully, "I ought to go with her. Nancy will come right away. Pete, be gentle with her, won't you?"

He laughed. He had to laugh. He couldn't help it.

She said, her eyes blazing, "If you dare to—" Her eyes were tragic and accusing. "How do you know—anything—about her? And what right have you to judge her? Or any other man?"

He lifted his hand in a signal to his driver. The ambulance, clanging, drove off. Ellen went away slowly. The crowd, some of them, followed, asking their interminable questions. She shook them off.

STANDARD LIST HOLDS STEADY

Although Higher Priced Golds Show Recessions From Thursday's Close.

MOSS ADVANCES TWO.

TORONTO, Mar. 29. (C.P.) — Though some readjustment due to weakness on New York boards over the long holiday week-end was evident in interlisted stocks the general tone was firm on the Standard stock and mining exchange market on resumption of trading to-day.

When taken at noon higher-priced golds showed recessions from Thursdays close. Lake Shore was off 25 at $29, Dome 20 at $11.25; Teck-Hughe 15 at $4.50 and Hollinger 10 at $5. International Nickel and Noranda were down 40 apiece at $8.50 and $17.40, respectively.

Eldorado was steady and Mining Corp sold at $1.08.

Among the cheaper golds Moss advanced a couple to 43 and Kirkland Lake Gold and Ventures a cent each at 45. Alexandria Gold was under pressure and off a couple at 5, but Bidgood, McLeod River and Moffatt-Hall were active and firm.

Montreal Trend Is Fractionally Lower

MONTREAL, March 29 (C.P.).— The list of stocks traded on the Montreal Stock Exchange this morning was quite broad in character, but the price trend was fractionally lower.

Nickel was the most active stock in the resumption of trading after the three-day Easter recess. About 3,000 shares of Nickel were traded during the forenoon at a price of 8⅛, down ⅝ from the previous close. Brazilian was next most active stock, and at noon showed a drop of ⅞ at 11⅞. Canadian Pacific Railway shares recovered an early loss and held firm at 15⅝ about noon.

Bell Telephone was weaker, selling off 1½ points to 106. Canadian Bronze recovered slightly after a weak opening, and at noon sold at 12½ for a net loss of ¼. Cement eased ¼ to 5⅜. B.C. Power A was off ¼ at 24¾, and Dominion Steel and Coal sold off ¼ to 1⅝.

BELL DECLINES SINGLE POINT

WALKERS GAINS FRACTION.

TORONTO, March 29 (C.P.). — Stocks followed an irregular course on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. Volume was not large, and price changes were generally narrow.

Bell Telephone and Brazilian lost about a point each, while the other utility issues sold unchanged. Ford was about the only industrial to change, selling fractionally higher on publication of details of the new models, to be shown Thursday.

In the distillery group, Walker Old gained a fraction, while Loblaw 'A' was the only food to change, also adding a fraction.

International Nickel was easier, but Smelters added over a point, to sell at 67.

Modern Civilization Proves Startling To Tasmanian, 46, Off Farm First Time

HOBART, Australia—(By mail, A. P.)—Electric lights, telephones, radio, phonographs, typewriters, automobiles and trolley cars, the sea, steam boats and locomotives, tall buildings and aeroplanes and hundreds of other commonplace things bewildered Percy Goldsmith, 46 years of age, when he made his first trip away from the farm in which he was born.

He lives on a self-contained farm established by his father in the Lake Tooms district in the secluded centre of Tasmania. The only things he does not produce himself—flour, tea, sugar and clothing are supplied by his two brothers, also farmers, who pass his place on their fortnightly trips to the little town of Oatlands.

Percy was almost mentally exhausted after a newspaperman had piloted him around Hobart. Later he was interviewed by professors of Hobart University who declared that he had a virgin mind so far as the civilized world measures brain. Nevertheless, he has an alert mentality.

A schooner of beer pleased him. Although he did not like the taste he told the newspaperman that he enjoyed the effect.

REV. JOHN LYONS

Seager of Huron. The presentation of the Bishop-elect was followed by the reading of the certificate of election and the certificate of the Acting Metropolitan by the Chancellor of the Diocese, Dr. J. P. Walkem.

The Oath of Obedience to the Metropolitan was then read. The Litany was sung by Rev. T. Austin Smith, Minor Canon and Precentor of St. George's Cathedral, and the questions were put to the Bishop-elect by the consecrating Bishop.

The newly-elected Bishop then retired and donned the robes of office and was then consecrated by the Bishop's present.

The consecration service was followed immediately by the installation of Bishop Lyons as Lord Bishop of Ontario.

First Service in 1862

The first consecration service to be held in St. George's Cathedral was in 1862, when Archbishop John T. Lewis was consecrated, the first consecration in the Anglican Church in Canada. Bishop Lewis was followed by Bishop W. L. Mills, who held office until succeeded by Bishop E. J. Bidwell. The latter was succeeded by Bishop C. A. Seager, who recently was chosen for the Diocese of Huron.

Colorful and impressive was the procession of the clergy from St. George's Hall into the Cathedral for the consecration services: visiting clergymen, secretaries of synod, Canons of the dioceses, Archbishops of the diocese, and the Dean of Ontario, W. W. Craig, were followed by Chancellor J. B. Walkem, followed by the Bishop-elect, and then the visiting Bishops and Chaplain, with the consecrating Bishop last in the processional.

erson and narrated the events of the night of Jan. 17. He declared they had driven to the spot where the shooting occurred where he alleged that Anderson made certain proposals and a struggle ensued. "He struggled but nothing more was said" said Brightwell. "I took a revolver and fired twice."

Brightwell told the magistrate his right hand was crippled and he was lefthanded.

"After I shot he fell beside the car on his back" Brightwell continued. "I turned and ran along Barton and Elm Streets and back to where my car was parked up town. I left for Toronto immediately, throwing the gun away somewhere near Port Credit."

After that, Brightwell added, he went as speedily as possible to Montreal, where he was taken into custody in February.

After the jury viewed the body, the inquest was adjourned until Friday, April 8.

NEW MIRACLES BY SCIENTISTS

Claim Invention of Silk Stronger Than Iron—Non-Deadly Illuminating Gas.

MISSING PLANT LINK.

WEST CHESTER, Pa., Mar 29.—Like magicians pulling rabbits from hats scientists revealed their latest research miracles at the eighth annual session of the Pennsylvania Academy of Science at West Chester State Teachers College.

Silk said to be stronger than iron, produced from chemicals, and synthetic rubber more elastic than the real were among the exhibits of Dr. Elmer I. Kraemer of Dupont experimental station at Wilmington, Del.

Dr. Kraemer predicted that chemical pots in that laboratory some day will yield "better and more beautiful plastic materials to supplant wood, metal and ceramic materials" in the making of statues, furniture and other other articles.

Flowers grown at higher altitudes are richer and deeper in color than those of the lowlands was the discovery of Dr. John C. Johnson, head of the science department of the Teachers' College. He forecast a day when florists will grow their blooms on mountain tops.

Sex Chromosome

Discovery of the elusive sex chromosome called "X"—the minute mystery that turns an egg into a male or female—was announced by Robert T. Hance of the University of Pittsburgh. He said it has been found in pidgeon eggs but that in the present stage of research scientists have to kill the eggs to find the chromosomes.

The "missing link" in plants was contributed by William C. Darrah of the Carnegie Museum at Pittsburgh. For years, he said, scientists have sought a link between ferns, which never bear flowers, and flower-bearing plants. A fossil fern that bears flowers which is called "pteridosperm" solved the problem.

Dr. Max Trumper of Philadelphia said he perfected an illuminating gas that would defeat suicide attempts. It is a combination of natural and manufactured gas with no carbon-monoxide he said, and with greater heating power than the gas now used.

Mollison Planning Leisurely Return

CAPE TOWN, Mar. 29 (C.P. Cable).—A leisurely return by air following the Empire mail service route from the Cape up the east coast of Africa and thence to London, is contemplated by J. A. Mollison, daring Australian aviator who last night broke the record for the distance from England to Cape Town.

"The route I chose," Mollison said in an interview, "avoided mountain ranges and followed the coastline for the latter part. These were two advantages. On the other hand, crossing the Sahara provided two thousand miles of a featureless waste."

Market Closing On All Exchanges

WALL STREET.

NEW YORK, March 29 (C.P.).—The Stock Market tried to rally at times to-day, as sentiment was improved by news of real progress toward balancing the Federal budget, but fresh selling cropped out in the last hour, and gains of a point or more in leading issues were largely cancelled. American Can, and U.S. Steel lost gains of about a point. Southern Pacific and Anaconda sagged about a point to new lows. The close was irregular. The day's turnover exceeded a million shares.

STANDARD EXCHANGE

TORONTO, March 29 (C.P.) — Stocks moved into lower ground in dull trading on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange to-day.

The market leaders, Nickel and Noranda, sold off, losing substantial amounts. Coast Copper, Eldorado, San Antonio and Sherritt Gordon also suffered recessions.

TORONTO EXCHANGE

TORONTO, March 29 (C.P.) — Toronto Stock Exchange was quiet throughout to-day's session, with leaders off fractions to more than a point. Some of the more robust stocks held out against the trend during the morning, but with only one or two exceptions, dipped in the afternoon.

C.P.R. although off from the morning, still did not show a net loss. Bell Telephone dropped 1¾ points to 105¾ and Consumers' Gas went down 1½ to 151½.

Trio On Fatal Ride Remanded To April 6

TORONTO, Mar. 29.—(C.P.) — Arthur Thurston, Thomas Sheppard and Harold Schlumski, three local youths who were with Albert Heward when the latter was shot to death by Motorcycle Officer Petit Thornton on Sunday night following a wild chase through city streets, appeared in police court to-day charged with theft of the car they were riding in at the time of the tragedy. They were remanded until April 6 by Magistrate Jones.

Sheppard and Schlumski gave themselves up this morning to police upon their returning from Orillia. Thurston was arrested Sunday immediately after the chase.

Frenchmen Shown To Excel In Humor

MONTREAL, Que., Mar. 29.—(C.P.)—French wit, which has enlivened the gaiety of nations for centuries, found its keen analyst and exponent recently when Wesley Frost, consul-general for the United States in Montreal, addressed the St. James Literary Society on that subject.

Drawing distinctions between national humor characteristics, Mr. Frost said the English might be said to excell in humor, whereas the French excelled in wit and he accepted the judgment of many who declare that the French are the wittiest people in the world. French wit he defined as "like champagne, extra dry, not 'mum' and very exhilirating."

It was usually purposive, he noted, and classified it as wit used to clear the air at embarrassing moments, wit used to stimulate and wit for its own sake. That it was a common heritage of the French people was illustrated in their own saying that "In Paris wit is allowed to run loose in the streets, and the police do nothing about it."

It was far from true, Mr. Frost commented, that French wit was nearly always licence. He repudiated this idea vigorously, and while admitting that much of French wit had its basis in the institution of marriage and departures from its rules, he made it clear that even in this branch of wit the Frenchman disarmed criticism by his finesse and delicateness.

Norman McGee Wins In Checker Tourney

WHITBY, March 29.—The Ontario Checker Association brought its annual tournament to a close in Whitby last night after three days of interesting and well contested games.

The officials and players expressed themselves as highly gratified with the success of the tournament, the number of entries, 40 in all, exceeding any year since 1924. The attendance for the three days was estimated at over two hundred, and many parts of Ontario were represented.

The town of Whitby and the Checker Club received many congratulations on their management of the tournament, which has previously been held only in one of the larger centers.

Norman McGee of Oshawa, gained the greatest number of points in Class A and therefore holds the Ontario championship title for 1932.

Class A.—Norman McGee, Oshawa, 32 points; 2nd, C. Rone, London, 30 points; 3rd, A. W. Flindall, Trenton, 28 points; 4th, Dr. Annis, Lindsay, 27 points.

Class B.—1st, Ed. Morton, Cobourg, 26 points; 2nd, R. E. Sinclair, Toronto, 22 points; 3rd, G. S. Walwin, Whitby, 17 points; Barket, Uxbridge; Neal, Whitby, and Rae, Port Hope, with 16 points, tied for fourth place.

Class C.—1st, George Charlton, Whitby, 29 points; 2nd, Wilbur Down, Oshawa, 27 points; 3rd, Cecil Wood, Whitby, 24 points; 4th, Heber Down, Whitby, 20 points.

GEORGIAN LAKE VANISHES AGAIN

Drops Through Mysterious Tunnel, Leaving Bed Dry Every Few Years.

SPORTSMAN'S HAVEN.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Mar. 29. — Big Jackson, husky brother of a triumvirate of fresh water lakes, is visiting unknown parts again. He has a habit of disappearing suddenly and then returning to his bed in a most amazing manner. Big Jackson is about 10 miles long and four miles wide when feeling good and full and this is the second time this year he has dashed away through some mysterious subterranean channel and left only mud in his bed to explain his escapade.

Jackson, Miccosukee and Iamonia form a triangle of big lakes along the Georgia-Florida line and have a partnership in the disappearing act. Each does the trick at irregular intervals every few years, but Jackson is the most proficient.

Last Jauary, Jackson's waters drained suddenly and then returned in a few weeks.

He was a well behaved lake, a sportsman's haven, again until a few days ago when the water suddenly slipped through a trap door known only to nature. The fish that fill the lake went too. When the water returns, fish will be unusually abundant if this visit is as fruitful as previous ones.

SESSION CLOSES

the work of the Railway and Municipal Bureau with more ample powers, and will be able to render valuable assistance to municipalities in safeguarding their financial status," the speech said in reference to the Ontario Municipal Board Bill, a measure which received Royal assent to-day, and which gives very wide powers to the Board.

Your legislation, to assist co-operative associations in marketing agricultural products opens up a wide field of useful activity."

Municipalities which are in financial difficulties, on appeal to the Board, will receive assistance in the form of a supervisory board over their affairs. The supervisory board will have power to declare a moratorium on the municipalities' debts, approve all its debentures, control its public works and improvements, and generally handle all the affairs of the municipalities concerned.

"Further provision has been made for the development of northern and north-western Ontario by setting aside the sum of $5,000,000 for that purpose. The expenditures of public funds in Northern Ontario, which now aggregate $60,000,000, constitute a profitable investment for the whole province."

Relief Question

A measure of relief has been extended to the municipalities and to the Province by the reduction of their contributions to the Old Age Pension Fund. This change has been made possible by the assumption by the Federal authority of three-quarters of the pension payments, Sir William continued.

Amendments have been made to the educational laws to clarify the School Attendance Act, and to create country representation on Continuation school boards. The definition of township school areas has been extended so that boards may organize themselves, if they so desire, into larger administrative units.

Changes had been made in the Workmen's Compensation Act, Factory, shop and Office Building Act, Mining Act and other measures, continued the administrator. In addition, the provincial inspection of plants operated for the manufacture of non-intoxicating beverages will constitute an additional measure of protection to the public health, for which there is a general demand.

By providing for the creation of a commission to control the waters of the Grand River and its tributaries, you have taken a step likely to confer far-reaching advantages on an important portion of the province. This undertaking is designed to remedy conditions which periodically involve serious danger to life and property.

Taxation

Only brief reference is made to the next taxation. My ministers have been clled upon to anticipate a shrinkage of provincial revenue, coupled with the continuance of special expenditures on account of unemployment. It has, therefore, been necessary to adopt measures of retrenchment on the one hand, and to apply increased taxation of a temporary nature on the other hand, in order to balance the provincial budget.

The taxation proposals of the government, which received royal assent to-day, were gasoline tax of one cent, already in effect; the corporations tax; fuel oil tax of one-half cent per gallon; a tax on natural gas; increased amusement tax and an increased tax on imported and native wines spirits.

Hunting dogs in Ontario will now be forbidden. An amendment to the Game and Fisheries Act, sponsored by Hon. Charles McCrea, Minister of Mines, received royal assent. Last year, the legislature forbade the use of dogs north and west of the French and Mattawa rivers. This year, after lengthy debates, a bill which completely prohibited the dogs was passed by the House.

To reduce their salaries councillmen of Holborn, England, were asked to meet monthly instead of fortnightly, but the city fathers indignantly refused.

Complete Details of New Ford Car Are Announced

NEW FORD CAR DESIGNED FOR MOST COMFORT

Complete Details of New V-8 Cylinder Ford Car Made Public.

19 BODY TYPES

Body Interiors Roomy and Richly Furnished—Capable of 75 M.P.H.

EAST WINDSOR, March 29. — The new Ford V-8 will be presented to the Canadian public next Thursday. Wallace R. Campbell, president of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, announced to-day. One of the most important factors in the announcement, Mr. Campbell said, is the confidence shown by the entire Ford organization that a measure of business revival is possible at this time.

"We are convinced that our public duty lies in doing everything possible to start employment again," said Mr. Campbell. "For months we have labored with that objective in view. Now we are ready to go ahead. As quickly as we find it possible production will be increased at our main factory and branches.

Impetus to Industry.

Manufacturers which supply us with products also will increase their output. The announcement of the new Ford car, therefore, in our opinion, should give a definite impetus to industrial activity in Canada.

"The principal objective in our plans toward this end was the development of an 8-cylinder engine, with plenty of power, yet so simply designed that its simplicity would be as important a feature as its speed and power. We sought to develop a car which would be a great advantage over former automobile valves in every respect. Yet which could be built and sold at a price which would fit the average present pocket book.

"We have accomplished what we set out to do. Next Thursday the public may judge our work.

"In addition to our V-8-cylinder car of 65 horse-power, we are offering a 4-cylinder car of 50 horse-power.

"Either may be had in fourteen different body types. Except for the engines, there is very little difference between the two cars. Bodies and chassis are practically the same. There will, however, be a difference in price. The V-8 car will sell in the low price field, which has always been dominated by the Ford car. The 4-cylinder car will sell for still less.

"That is our conception of our duty to the public at this time and of the service which we should render, particularly in the face of present economic conditions."

The new Ford is large, long, roomy, fast, powerful and alert. Its V-8 engine develops 65 horse power. The car is capable of 75 miles an hour.

Numerous mechanical improvements are incorporated in the new car. These embrace a silent, synchronized gear shift and silent second gear, rubber engine mountings, downdraft carburetor, automatic spark control, fuel pump and rear fuel tank. Other features include soft flexible springs, self-adjusting double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, large mechanical four-wheel brakes, small, strong electrically welded steel-spoke wheels with large hubs and hub caps and large tires. The chassis and running gear are cushioned by rubber insulators in the spring shackles and shock absorber links. The body is insulated from the frame by rubber pads.

Bodies are Graceful

The new bodies are fresh and modern from the gracefully rounded V-type radiator to rear bumper. The stream lines are carried out by the long hood with its rustless steel centre strip, the slanting safety glass windshield and rounded roof line. The convex lamps, full crowned fenders and long, low running board harmonize with the balance of the design.

Body interiors are roomy and richly furnished. Seats are of new style, designed for utmost comfort. Driver seats in all closed cars are adjustable. A large ventilator is provided in the cowl. The instrument panel is oval and has a rustless steel moulding. Inside sun visors, which fold out of the way when not in use, are provided in all closed cars.

The new Ford V-8 engine is compact and remarkably free from vibration. Frequent and overlapping impulses deliver the power in a smooth constant flow.

The engine is of the 90-degree V-type, developing 65 brake horse power at 3400 r. p. m. The 65-pound crankshaft is of the 90-degree type, with its four cranks at right angles to each other.

The crankshaft is statically and dynamically balanced and its throws counter-balanced. The crankshaft, connecting rods and pistons also are in balance so that the engine operates with remarkable smoothness at all speeds. Pistons are of aluminum alloy and have three rings, the lower acting as an oil-control ring.

Cast in One Unit

Cylinder blocks and crankcase are cast in one unit giving exceedingly rigid engine construction. New type, one-piece valves operate directly off the camshaft without push rods.

Connecting rods from opposite pistons are placed side by side on each crankshaft throw. These are mounted on new floating steel bushings, babbitted inside and out, which serve to give the benefit of the full crankpin bearing area to each connecting rod thus affording longer wear.

A cast aluminum cover embracing the intake manifold forms the top of the engine, giving it an unusually finished appearance. The downdraft carburetor and the fuel pump are mounted on this cover.

The gas is preheated in the intake manifold by a hot spot created by hot exhaust gases surging back and forth through a small passage in the manifold cover plate. Exhaust ports are on the outside of the engine blocks, the left exhaust pipe being carried around the front of the engine.

The distributor operates directly off the front end of the camshaft without interposed gears. Spark control is automatic. Crankshaft and crankpin bearings are lubricated by pressure as are the main bearings of the camshaft. Pistons and valves are oiled by spray and splash.

A fan of airplane propeller type and two centrifugal water pumps together with the large surface of the radiator insure ample cooling under all driving conditions.

New Low Rear Spring

The rugged new double-drop frame is formed to the shape of the body and, with the new low rear spring, provides a low centre of gravity with consequent increase in roadability.

The riding comfort of the car is due to many factors but particularly to the new flexible springs, large tires, rubber insulation and the newly designed shock absorbers.

Two new features have been incorporated in the hydraulic double-acting shock absorbers. One is a thermostat control which compensates for varying temperature conditions and the other a special valve which automatically lessens the effect of sudden road shocks.

The Ford rear spring is of new design. It is mounted on perches at the rear of the axle housing and bowed out so as to clear the differential housing.

The brakes have a braking surface of 186 square inches. Wheels are 18 inches in diameter. The large hubs enclose the bolts which attach the wheel to the drum. There are 32 steel spokes, sharply pitched and electrically welded to the drop centre rim and hub shell, forming an unusually strong unit. Tires are 18 X 5.25 inches. Each is balance to prevent "tramping" or vibration at high speeds.

The drive is of the torque tube type, the drive shaft being of tubular construction.

One application of Musterole often brings relief. Used once every hour for 3 hours this "counter-irritant" should give complete comfort.

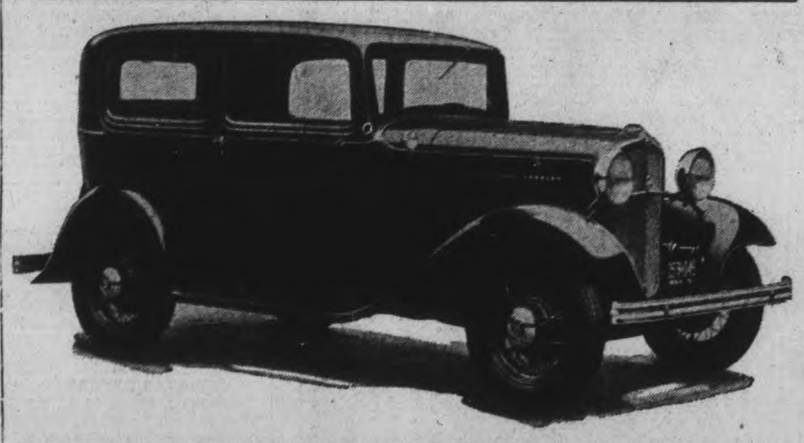
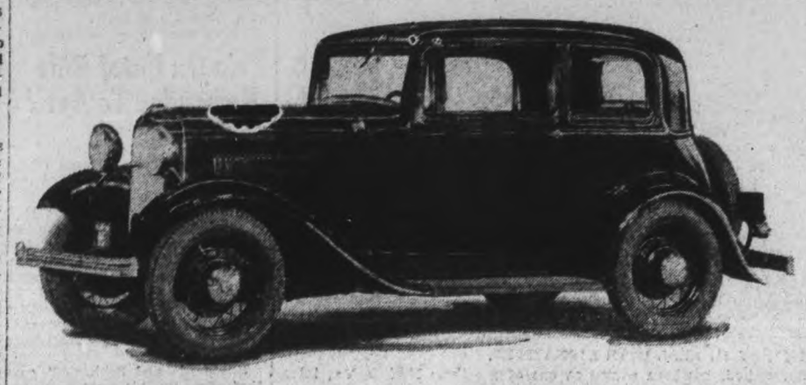
The New Ford V-8 De Luxe Tudor Sedan



Flowing streamlines form the basis of the body design of the new Ford V-8 De Luxe Tudor Sedan, illustrated above. Mohair or broadcloth upholstery is optional. The driver's seat is adjustable. A dome light is fitted in the center of the ceiling. The car has many de luxe fittings.

The New Ford V-8 Victoria



The Victoria is one of the most attractive of the new Ford V-8 group. Interior furnishings are luxurious. A choice of mohair or broadcloth upholstery is available. Fittings include cowl lamps, dome light, ash trays, toggle grips, pockets, arm rests and floor carpets.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE REVIEWS

TORONTO PRODUCE

TORONTO, March 29. — The opening of trading this week on the local produce market found activity in butter quiet, with prices slightly easier than at last week-end. The top price obtainable for regraded grass quality was 27½c, while the general range for this product was 27¼c to 27½c. Offerings of Western butter for future shipments were fairly free, but asking prices were out of line with the local market. Fresh makes were more plentiful, but not sufficiently to have any effect on the market.

Cream

Cream prices were unchanged, and, with the butter market softening slightly, will probably remain so. Local buyers were quoting the levels in effect last week-end, or 24c for special, 23c for No. 1, and 20c for No. 2 f.o.b. country points.

Cheese

Cheese prices held to the advances made recently. Brokers were quoting new makes at 11½c to 11¾c for large, 11¾c to 12c for twins, and 12c to 12¼c for triplets. Wholesalers were offered new makes at the unchanged prices of 13c for new large, 13¼c for twins, 13½c for triplets, and 15½c for Stiltons.

Eggs

Brokers' prices for eggs were about steady, but prices to country shippers and retailers lower. Brokers offered graded eggs, in free, used cases, at 16c for extras, 14c for firsts, and 10c for seconds, delivered, ungraded, cases returned. Wholesalers offered the trade supplies at 21c for extras in cartons, 19c for extras loose, 17c for firsts loose, and 15c for seconds loose.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, March 29.—For the first time in more than a year, the United States wheat visible supply yesterday showed a decrease as compared with twelve months previous. Largely as a result, grain values averaged higher, notwithstanding numerous transient setbacks.

Temporary weakness shown by cereals were associated with Washington reports that President Hoover frowned on any attempt to abolish the Farm Board. Bearish effects also followed word that J. W. T. Duval, head of the grain futures administration, had been in conference with the House subcommittee which was seeking ways and means of raising taxes.

Oats Advance

Wheat closed nervous, ½c to 1¼c higher than Saturday's finish; corn, ⅜c to ⅝c advanced; oats, ¼c to ½c up, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 5c.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, March 29.—Butter prices declined, while egg, cheese and potato quotations were mainly unchanged on the produce and dairy market here yesterday.

No. 1 butter, in car lots or broken lots, lost a quarter of a cent at 27¼c to 27½c a pound. To retailers solids at 28c and prints at 29c a pound were steady. Receipts were 1,009 boxes.

Fresh graded Ontario eggs, in car lots or less, were mainly firm, extras at 18c to 19c, and firsts at 16c to 17c, both being unchanged, while seconds gained 1c at 15c to 16c a dozen. Quotations to retailers held steady at the lower prices announced over the week-end. Receipts were 3,205 cases.

Current cheese was unchanged at 10½c to 11c, as was summer make at 12c to 12¼c a pound. Receipts were 92 boxes.

The potato market was firm, quotations of broken lots per 80-pound bag being 30c to 40c for Quebec whites and 45c to 50c for Quebec and New Brunswick Green Mountains. Car-lot prices were 10c a bag cheaper.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, March 29. — Fair buying by seaboard houses and an increased French foreign wheat quota brought about upturns in the grain values here yesterday. Prices at the close were ⅞c to 1¼c higher than Saturday's final quotations.

May wheat was ⅞c higher at 60¼c. July gained a like amount at 62¼c; while October climbed 1c to 1⅛c to close at 64c to 64½c.

Export trade was disappointing.

The general run of crop news was quite bullish. Unfavorable reports were received from the winter wheat belt of the United States and European countries, including Russia. Reports concerning the Soviet crop stated that the winter wheat had suffered, and the outlook for spring wheat seeding was not reassuring.

Statistics for last week showed a drop of about 2,000,000 bushels in world shipments of wheat and wheat flour. North America, however, shipped about 2,000,000 bushels more than in the previous week. The Liverpool market remained on holiday yesterday, but re-opened to-day.

Demand for durums at spreads 2c better than the previous close featured the cash wheat section. Cash interest in coarse grains was of little account and values held firm.

Bogart Crew Beats Never Sweats 1-0

TWEED, Mar. 29. — (Examiner Correspondence.)—In a closely contested game the Bogart boys defeated the Never Sweats 1-0. Both teams were well matched and the players closely checked ther opponents. The goalies saved the situation many times by their coolness and quick thinking. Half way through the last period the Bogart boys were able to break away from the Never Sweats and score the lone counter of the game. The remainder of the game they played defensive hockey.

Although the ice was soft, the boys displayed considerable speed and won the support of the crowd. Both teams received many penalties, handed out by Ross Maguire, who refereed the game.

Village Get Right To License Pedlars

Under an amendment introduced in the Legislature on March 16th last, by T. P. Lancaster, M.L.A. for Peterborough County, incorporated villages are now empowered to pass by-laws, as cities and towns may do, to license, regulate and govern hawkers and pedlars.

Under section 422 of the Municipal Act, villages did not have power to pass by-laws affecting hawkers and pedlars, but by this amendment, they may do so.

Village merchants and citizens of villages will welcome this amendment, as the ever increasing army of hawkers and pedlars was fast becoming an intolerable nuisance generally, and no relief or control was possible on the part of village councils.

FRANKFORD COUPLE OBSERVES 50TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Stillman Herrington Honored by Friends at Social Gathering.

WORKED WITH HYDRO

FRANKFORD, March 29 (Examiner Correspondence).—Mr. and Mrs. Stillman Herrington celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage on Tuesday, March 22, amidst a number of friends and relatives.

On March 22, 1882, the happy couple were united in marriage by the late Rev. D. O. Crossley at the home of the bride, who was then Miss Clara Pake, of the 3rd Concession of Brighton.

Mr. and Mrs. Herrington engaged in farming for a number of years on the 3rd Concession of Brighton, after which Mr. Herrington was engaged in the machinery business with the McCormick Co., until he joined the Hydro-Electric staff at Frankford, leaving their service about six years ago.

The house was prettily decorated for the occasion with gold and white streamers, and numerous small tables were used for the wedding supper, beautiful yellow roses adorning each one.

The bride and bridegroom, along with Mr. and Mrs. E. Terrill of Wooler, sat at the head table. Mrs. Terrill is a sister of the bridegroom. Roy Herrington acted as toastmaster for the evening.

The toast to the bride and bridegroom was proposed by the Rev. A. S. Doggett, pastor of the Frankford United Church, and the toast to the guests was proposed by Mr. Frank Herrington.

A number of the guests gave short speeches touching on events of long ago.

Owing to the bad roads and illness, a number of guests could not be present, sending their regrets along with best wishes for the future.

Among those present were the two sons and their wives, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Herrington of Richmond Hill and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Herrington of Melville, Sask.; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sarles of Trenton, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Powell of Stockdale. There were 19 guests in all.

Many messages and beautifu gifts were received, including a wedding cake from friends in Toronto, and a purse of gold from the children.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Herrington are enjoying fairly good health.

TRENT RIVER'S PIONEER DAYS ARE DESCRIBED

Isaac Lawson Came to Trent River 72 Years Ago With His Parents.

FISH WERE PLENTIFUL

(Examiner Correspondence)

TRENT RIVER, Mar. 29—"Things certainly aren't as they used to be around Trent River," Isaac Lawson an aged pioneer of this district, told The Examiner in a recent interview.

When Isaac and his brother John Lawson, now aged 83, came to Trent River with their parents, 72 years ago there was no bridge across the Trent at this point. A ferry, a leaky rowboat, transferred light loads across the wide stream, but most traffic was compelled to make the long journey around by Healy Falls or Hastings.

Oxen were used as beasts of labor in those days, said Mr. Lawson. Grain was threshed with a flail and the bags of grain were then carried on the back to the river and conveyed down the river by rowboat to Hastings where it was ground.

One time Mr. Lawson's father was making the trip home with a bag of flour when the boat upset in the darkness of early evening and cargo was lost. However, next day he returned to the spot and salvaged the bag of flour.

Making Maple Syrup

Maple sugar making was then one of the chief occupations of the district in the Spring. Sap troughs were made carefully of rough timber and four or five hundred stout maples were tapped. The sap was boiled down in a giant potash kettle and often one man had more than a thousands pounds of sugar, which was almost wholly used for sweetening.

There was a ready market for potash and most of the virgin forest was sacrificed in making of this product. The timber was cut and burned for their ashes and this was boiled down for potash, or lye.

Most of the meat in those early days, stated Mr. Lawson, was fish, which were so plentiful then as to make the present day Izaac Walton rave with envy, and deer and bear meat.

The first church, Episcopal, was erected on the corner of Fred Cook's property and Rev. Mr. Lunn was the minister.

The school stood at Polmount Corner and Miss Maggie Elliott, sister of Mrs. Ridley Wood, was the first teacher on a munificent salary of $150 per annum. Successors to Miss Elliott as pedagogue were Henry Pollock, Sr., Dr. John Maconn, Dr. Brown, Thomas Spencer and Miss Maggie Donald, of Burnbrae.

Produce Was Cheap

Mr. Lawson quoted produce prices of those days: butter, 10 cents a pound, eggs 7 and 8 cents a dozen; cheese 6 cents, sugar 25 pounds for $1.00; tea, 10 to 25 cents a pound.

Homespun was the general dress of high and low and a suit of full cloth was hailed as something outlandish and praised as the "very best."

Indians still were prevalent about the district and Mr. Lawson treasures a sharpened oblong piece of stone, found on his farm, which was at one time used by the natives for skinning deer.

For nine year's perfect attendance at school, Elizabeth Murray has been presented a medal by the Educational Committee of Angus, Scotland.

Child Quite Safe

The Duke and Duchess of York have been busy recently denying rumors that their daughter, the Princess Elizabeth, has been threatened by kidnappers. Scotland Yard is quite satisfied the child is in no danger. The Duke and Duchess are shown here in a recently posed photograph.

Advertising for the Merchant of To-Day

Conducted by HAROLD S. EDGAR

A series of weekly articles on advertising and merchandising prepared for the merchants of Peterborough District with the co-operation of The Peterborough Examiner.

DISTRIBUTION OF EFFORT

The merchant in business in our smaller cities, towns and rural districts must play the role that is filled by many men in the stores of the larger centres. Under one man's hat has to be the buyer, the sales manager, the merchandising or stock control, the advertising manager and that of floor walker or chief salesman; and he is frequently put to it to handle even passably all those jobs, and yet each must receive a necessary minimum of attention if the business is to prosper.

There are some of these particular duties he likes, while others he almost hates, and he may easily become one-sided in his store management through favoring the line of activity that he prefers, or being forced through pressure of circumstances to place too much emphasis on one or more activities, neglecting the others.

There is no merchant that has not to eternally guard himself from becoming one-sided in his business management.

He may love selling and on that account wants to be on the store floor most of the time, and this leads him frequently to take away a customer from an assistant, which belittles the clerk, kills his or her initiative, to the detriment of the store spirit. He plans the advertising in the odd moments that he can steal, erroneously deeming the talk with one customer on the floor of more importance than a talk through his local paper to the thousands of homes of the district.

Presidents, owners and managers of our biggest businesses today pay most particular attention to the two twin activities of sales and advertising, and no man in business can afford to neglect this most vital phase of his business.

While the advertising should represent the personality of the store and should appear as though it was written by the owner or one of the partners, there is no absolute necessity that it should be written by them, for frequently there is on the staff a smart young woman or young man who, if given a little encouragement and the opportunity of reading the advertisements in the papers from out of town, could develop advertisements that, being written without the distractions of the business, flow more freely and with more originality, and carry more weight than those advertisements written by the boss himself. The Big Chief should see the advertisements before they are ordered in the paper, alter anything that is not quite correct as to statement, but outside of keeping to the line of policy and guarding against definite inaccuracies he should use the blue pencil very sparingly, as in this way he will develop the initiative of his assistant.

John Wanamaker, whose personality always dominated the advertising of the Philadelphia store and who wrote it in the early development of the business, found that Manley M. Gillman wrote better Wanamaker advertising than Wanamaker ever wrote and yet it was the same general style. And when Wanamaker bought the old A. T. Stewart store in New York, becoming "John Wanamaker of New York," the New York advertising, written by another man, still followed the ideals, theme and spirit of the copy originally written by the founder of the business.

DURHAM COUNTY GRAIN SEEDS SHOW MUCH CLEANING NEEDED

248 REJECTED

CAVAN, Mar. 30. — (Examiner Correspondence.) — In May, 1931, Durham District Agricultural Representative, E. A. Summers, Port Hope, sent a letter to each Public school teacher in Durham county, asking the co-operation of the teachers, pupils and parents in collecting from each farm represented in each section, a one pound sample of spring grain taken from the seed drill. All told, 709 samples were collected and this month they are being returned to their original owners properly cleaned, and with a full report of the survey.

The purpose in carrying on this project was to get definite information with respect to the quality of seed grain being sown and to encourage and further stimulate the sowing of clean seed. As soon as these samples were received they were sent to the Dominion seed branch, Ottawa, for weed seed count and grading. Then they were returned to Mr. Summers, and were cleaned through his office fanning mill.

The Result.

A brief summary was given:

Sixty-two samples were absolutely clean of all weed seeds.

241 samples graded No. 1, with the number of weeds indicated.

85 samples graded No. 2.

134 samples graded No. 3, and 248 samples were rejected.

He stated that in his opinion, 90 p.c. of the samples would have graded No. 1 or better if properly cleaned. Many samples were very poorly graded and by removing the small grain, his estimate showed that there would have been an average increase per acre of about 5.8 bus. An increase of even four bushels per acre over the present 86,000 acres of spring grain in Durham county would mean 285 freight car loads of 1,200 bushels per car. Apparently the grading sieves on many fanning mills are worn out or are improper sizes. Old sieves can easily be repaired by obtaining sieve material from firms whose names were given. Our best farmers put the grain through the fanning mill two or three times and needless to say their crops show the effect.

Power Cleaning Plants.

Where power seed cleaning plants are available, a good practice is to put the grain once through the farm fanning mill and then take it to the plant for final cleaning. Some farmers in Durham county are already following this policy.

With this statement of the grading of the grain and suggestions for cleaning, this week, the pupils are receiving their samples of grain, cleaned and graded. They come in three parcels, 'Good seed," "small grain' and "chaff, coarse material and light grain."

Samples of sieves for the fanning mills are enclosed and the number of the sieve used for different kinds of grain indicated.

Pamphlets were also enclosed with full directions for treating grain smuts.

District Churches

ST. PAUL'S MARMORA.

MARMORA, March 29.—(Examiner Correspondence).—Bright and well attended Easter services were held at St. Paul's on Sunday. Celebrations of Holy Communion at 8 a.m. and 11 a.m. appealed to the total number of 82 communicants. The rector, Rev. A. B. Caldwell, officiated throughout the day, choosing for his morning subject, "From the farther shore," and for the evening discourse, "The First Easter." A children's service was conducted at 10 a.m. at which the mite boxes were brought in, their total contents amounting to approximately twenty-five dollars. The hearty singing of bright Easter hymns marked the services. The interior of St. Paul's was beautified as daffodils, narcissi, tulips and Easter lilies contributed to artistic decorations in the sanctuary and chancel. The afternoon service at Holy Trinity was also of the brightest description and was well attended.

Before the refreshments were served, Mrs. Ray Syer, vice-president of the institute, in a few well-chosen words expressed regret at Mrs. Papineau's leaving and best wishes for happiness in her new home, and on behalf of the institute presented her with a linen tablecloth. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Papineau will, as soon as the roads permit the use of trucks, move to their farm near Castleton.

Miss Margaret Fallis spent the week-end in Peterborough.

Full use has been made of the sleighing in drawing out grain, getting home chop, drawing logs to the mill and many other jobs which had been put off because of lack of sleighing.

FOR THE YOUNG PEOPLE

RABBITS AND EASTER EGGS

THOUGH they lived in the country and had no opportunity of celebrating Easter like their city cousins, with elaborate church services and a fashion parade, Ted and Helen still looked forward to a most delightful time on Easter morning.

And when they awoke there was nothing to mar their prospect for a good time before they dressed and drove to the church in the nearby village with papa and mamma. The air was clear and balmy and the sun was shining brightly.

At breakfast each found a small gaily painted basket by his plate, filled with colored Easter eggs—red and blue and purple and green and even gold. And the Easter rabbits were supposed to have left them there.

So, after breakfast, Ted and Helen went to the grass-covered hill just beyond the house to roll their Easter eggs, just as do the little children of Washington, D. C., on the gentle slopes around the White House where the President of the United States lives.

And they took with them their four pet white rabbits. Even on ordinary days they wouldn't have been content to play without these little long-eared friends; and on Easter morning it seemed particularly proper that the rabbits should accompany them.

For awhile they rolled their eggs down the hill and scattered them all over the greensword. How pretty they looked, too, with the sun shining upon them and lighting up their colors against the background of green! In the meantime the rabbits were skipping about nibbling at the fresh, juicy grass and enjoying themselves quite as much as were the children.

Presently Ted noticed that the rabbits were paying no attention whatever to the eggs lying about; and it seemed a strange thing that they did not.

"Oh, they've had so much to do with eggs, Ted," explained Helen, who was the older by two years, "that I 'spect they hate the very sight of them."

But little Ted shook his head slowly. "Helen," he asked, "do you really believe rabbits lay Easter eggs?"

"Of course, I do, Ted," she answered. "Aunt Dinah says so and even if she is black and just our cook, I guess she ought to know!"

"Just like chickens?" inquired Ted.

"Certainly!"

"An'-an' some of them green and blue and red an'—?

"Of course not, silly!" interrupted Helen. "You know Aunt Dinah dyes them—she let's us watch her, doesn't she?"

Little Ted said nothing for awhile but stood watching the rabbits playing about. He seemed to be deep in thought.

"Well, then," he said presently, "I guess that's why rabbits aren't green an' red an' purple an' gold an'—"

"Of course!" agreed Helen, emphatically. "The eggs are white so the rabbits are white. I'm surprised at your ignorance, Ted."

As Contented As You Please. The Rabbit Munched Away At The Carrot

Suddenly Ted began to laugh. "I know what let's do, Helen, I know what let's do!" he exclaimed. "Let's make the two biggest rabbits sit on the eggs and hatch them just as papa's hens sit on their eggs and hatch out little chicks! Then we'll have lots of little rabbits! Won't that be fine!"

Helen, who considered herself quite a grown-up little lady and, therefore, very reserved and dignified, wasn't exactly enthusiastic about the scheme. It might succeed; and then again it might not. So she did not wish to be enthusiastic about it until she knew how it would turn out.

She tried to recall having heard about rabbits hatching out Easter eggs into little rabbits, but she couldn't seem to remember. So she merely answered, "Maybe they won't want to!"

"Oh yes they do," Ted insisted. "An' even if they don't we'll make them! An'—an'—" his bright little eyes were fairly dancing now with anticipation of the great experiment—"an'—an'—I guess the little rabbits will be green and purple and red, won't they Helen?"

Without waiting for a reply, he sat down on the grass by the side of the gravel-walk and grabbed up one of the little rabbits who had been frisking about and had paused for a moment to rest.

"Hurry, Helen, bring me the basket of eggs, quick!" he cried out gaily as he held the rabbit by its long, velvety ears.

So Helen hastened to gather up the eggs that were strewn about on the grass and presently she came running to him with the basket filled.

Ted very carefully selected a red and a blue and a green and a purple and a gilt one and placed them close together on the ground. Then he pick up the rabbit by its ears and short knob of a tail and sat it down on top of the eggs!

The poor rabbit looked up at her little master in an amazed hurt way. Its little nose was sniff-sniff-sniffing away at a great rate. Then it began to wriggle and kick and squirm.

"Whoa! Whoa there!" cried Ted, holding on to the ears and tail for dear life.

But the rabbit wasn't of a mind to "Whoa" at all. Instead it wriggled and squirmed and kicked all the more. And presently out rolled the red egg; then the blue one; then the green egg, with its shell broken and squashed. And finally only the gilt one was left.

The rabbit had evidently overlooked it, or maybe it wasn't uncomfortable, for it quieted down instantly at the first sniff of the carrot which Ted had managed to extract from his pocket without losing his hold on the rabbit.

And so, as contented as you please, the rabbit munched away at the carrot, with Ted squatting beside it and resting his hand gently on its back.

"Wonder if it takes long to hatch?" asked Ted, looking up at his sister. "Gee, won't a gold rabbit be great!"

And Helen agreed that it would.

Just then Mamma came down the walk to tell them to come dress for church. And, of course, she straight-way wanted to know what Ted was doing. Both Helen and Ted began to explain at one and the same time and finally when Mamma was able to understand just what it was all about she laughed so heartily that she had to sit down on the grass beside Ted and fairly hold her sides.

But after awhile she explained how rabbits neither lay nor hatch eggs; and how it is just a pleasant little superstition about rabbits bringing the Easter eggs, and one that has come down from olden times.

And then she told them why the egg itself is a symbol of Easter because it represents a new life that can be brought into the world; and how when Christ died and rose on the first Easter morn he brought a new life to all mankind and the promise of a new and better life after the grave.

So they gathered up the eggs and the rabbits and went to the house to dress and ride behind old Dobbin to the church down in the village and to raise their voices in praise of the Risen Lord.

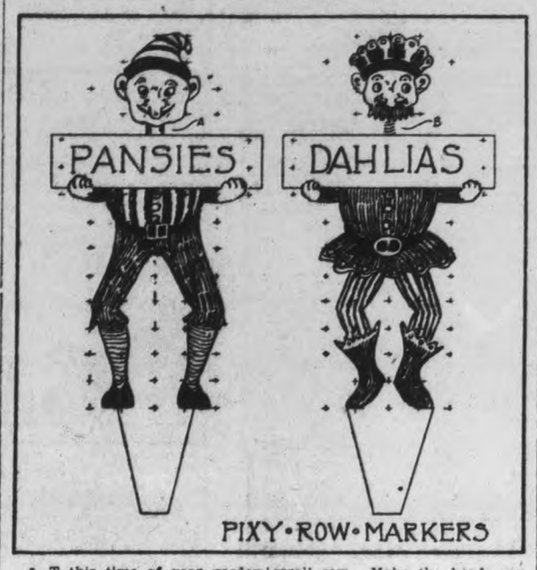
The HANDY BOY AT HOME

BY CHARLES A. KING,
STATE NORMAL SCHOOL, PLYMOUTH, N.H.



At this time of year garden lovers are seeking novelties that will add to the interest of their gardens; these row markers will furnish spots of color while the newly planted gardens have only the colors of freshly worked earth and perhaps the light green of new growth.

The figures may be drawn upon ½" wood, or on pasteboard if a pattern is needed to make several, by reproducing the crosses 1" apart and drawing the lines, which will give shapes and dimensions and make the completed figures about 14" high above the ground. Make the body, legs, stake and sign, the stake to be pointed and pushed into the ground for support, using a coping saw, a band saw or a scroll saw. Make the heads separately and fasten them to the sign with a dowel as at A or with a flexible wire spiral spring as at B; if this method is used and the spring is not too stiff the heads will nod and bob about amusingly in the wind.

Paint all in brilliant colors, leaving the spaces between the legs white. Plant rows of seeds or of bulbs and place one of these at one or both ends, and the bright colors will be a continual reminder of the glories of the garden in full bloom.

JUNIOR COOK

CELERY STICKS

Wash and crisp enough stalks of celery to serve two to each person.

To crisp celery, let it stand in cold water for about a half hour, and then drop into a cheesecloth bag and put in a very cold place for at least an hour.

To prepare for serving, work a tablespoonful of cream into one small package of cream cheese, making the cheese just even enough to spread. With this cheese mixture fill the hollows of the sticks of celery.

Put back in a cool place for 10 or 15 minutes and serve. If desired a teaspoonful of chopped nuts may be added to the cheese mixture.

A FLORAL EASTER

Easter in Buenos Aires, the capital of the Argentine Republic, is literally a feast of flowers. Nowhere else in the entire world, perhaps, are they seen in such rich and fragrant profusion as there on that greatest of church feasts. The entire city, it seems, sends gifts of flowers to friends and loved ones on Easter morning—dainty, sweet-smelling violets, both white and purple, lilies of the purest white and gold, camillias, white roses and pomegranate blossoms.

The houses are decorated with wondrous floral displays and the altars in the churches are fairly loaded down with the beautiful blooms. Everyone wears a flower of some sort on Easter day; the women seeming to prefer white violets and the men a rosebud or a boutonniere of choice blooms. Flowers are indeed appropriate reminders of Easter and its message, and in Buenos Aires they are particularly effective.

EASTER SURPRISES

(To be colored with paints or crayons. Whenever you come to a word spelled in CAPITAL letters use that color.)

YELLOW-haired Susie May and BROWN-haired Teddy are showing each other their Easter surprises.

"See, my big BROWN rabbit!" cries Susie May. "He came with this ORANGE color (use RED and YELLOW lightly) sweater and GREEN pants on! His slippers are the same color as his sweater. An', see, he has PINK (use RED lightly) lining in his ears!"

"Well, just look what I have!" exclaims Teddy. "A whole cap full of YELLOW peepers!"

"Oh, oh! How nice!" cries Susie May. "They look too cute for words in your GREEN and PURPLE school cap!"

"I see you have a lot of colored eggs, Susie May, in that YELLOW basket with the GREEN straw in it. Some PURPLE and some RED and ORANGE eggs," says Teddy.

"Oh, yes, won't you have a few!" replies Susie May. "I cannot possibly eat them all!"

Susie May wears a PINK frock and ribbon about her hair. The bows on her arm and at her throat are YELLOW. She has PINK slippers and White socks.

Teddy wears a White blouse and GREEN tie and trousers. His shoes are BROWN and his socks YELLOW. He wears a BROWN belt.

The sky is BLUE and the grass a dark GREEN.

Both children have PINK cheeks and RED lips.

The daffodil has light GREEN leaves and a YELLOW blossom. The violet is PURPLE with GREEN (mix PURPLE with the GREEN to darken it) leaves.

Susie May and Teddy have a very jolly Easter with all their surprises and they wish you all the same.

AN APRIL FOOL JOKE

TOM and his cousin Bob were great at playing tricks on each other. Neither let an opportunity go by, and since one was as bad as the other neither could get angry.

April first was a great day for them. They played every known and every new joke they could think of on each other, so that when afternoon came, the words "April Fool" had been repeated so often that they ceased to be a joke.

"I say," said Tom to Bob, "let's fool some one else for a change."

"The idea is good, but how?" answered Bob, "let's think."

Tom jingled some coins in his pocket, then he gave a whistle of satisfaction.

"What's up now," said Bob.

"Here is a foreign coin that looks like a dime, I'll use that to April Fool them. It's in my way, anyhow, as every conductor and tradesman refuses to take it. I'll be well rid of it if I should lose it.

"What will you do with it?"

"I'll stick it on the ground and from behind the front door we can shout 'April Fool' at the jays who try to pick it up."

In a few seconds the coin was glued to the sidewalk and then the boys' watch began. The first passerby chuckled when he saw it, and clasped his hands tighter behind him. He was on—for he had a boy as roguish as Tom, at home. A good-natured woman stooped to pick it up, and when Bob called "April Fool" at her, she gravely shook her finger at the laughing faces peeping from behind the door, and walked on. Then came a shabbily dressed girl, about ten years old. She was hungry, and when her eyes caught sight of the shining coin, she trembled with delight and stooped to pick it up.

"April Fool" and "April Fool!" shouted Tom and Bob. The little girl began to cry and ran.

"Do You Think We Ought To Keep It?" Asked Jane

"Whatcher cryin' fer?" asked her big brother when she reached her poor home.

The little girl, whose name was Jane, sobbed her story into sympathetic ears.

"The mean things, I'll make it hot fer them," said Big Brother. "Come along Sis, and point out the coin."

Presently, Tom and Bob saw the same poor little girl come up with a big boy, and they saw the big boy use the worn toe of his shoe to kick the coin. It flew into the gutter, where it was soon picked up by Jane.

"Oh," she said, ready to cry again, "it isn't real."

"You silly, it's foreign, but it is silver."

"Do you think we ought to keep it," asked Jane, eyeing it greedily.

"Sure thing. Them that's had it threw it on the ground for smarties such as us to pick up."

"Say, whatcher goin' ter do with it?" asked Jane. "Today's Mom's birthday, let's buy her a party."

Big Brother was game, and together they entered a nearby bakery.

"Is this any good ter yer?" he asked, handing the coin across the counter.

The woman looked at the date. "In shuran it tis. It's the year I waz born in. Whatcher want fer it? I'll keep it fer my lucky-piece."

"Cakes, and plenty of them fer Mom's birthday's today!"

The woman gave them two dozen assorted.

"April Fool's day ain't so bad after all, is it?" said Jane, running gaily home beside her brother. "But I hopes as how the kids what stuck it on the pavement, won't mind."

"If they do, it serves them right for getting stung. It's a poor rule what won't work both ways," said her brother.

YOU CAN'T FOOL ME!

LAST year today, on my way to school
(You know that that was April Fool)
Some fellows called to me: "Say, look
You've dropped your copy book"—
But I was smart, I knew the day,
I told them as I walked away—
"You can't fool me!"

I saw the girl across the aisle
From me in school try not to smile
As on my desk she slipped this note—
"You've got an ink spot on your coat!"
I only said, "It's no use, Sue,
I know the day as well as you—
You can't fool me!"

And that is how it was all day,
They tried to trick me every way—
They said my shoe lace was undone.
They said: "You're late, the school's begun."
But I've got brains inside my head
So I just grinned at them and said—
"You cant fool me!"

Hunting Eggs at Easter

HUNTING eggs at Easter is the best of fun,
And when played at our house here's the way it's done;
Papa always hides them after we're in bed
In whatever places come into his head;

Under chairs and tables, corners on the floor,
Back of sofa pillows and behind the door.
Then on Easter morning we begin to look,
Search the rooms to find them, peer in every nook.

Till they're all discovered, when we give it o'er
And set down together to count up our store;
And if one's unlucky and doesn't get his share
Mother makes us give up enough to make it fair.

The MOST USEFUL GIFT

Once long ago a city in Greece was to be named and two of the Greek gods contested for the honor of naming it. Neptune, the god of the sea, and Minerva, the goddess of wisdom, each wanted to have the honor. Finally the rest of the gods were called into assembly and they after a conference agreed to select as the one to name the city, the one who could bestow the most useful gift upon mankind.

Neptune stepped forward and asked to be the first to contest, and as he spoke he struck his trident upon the ground, and out of the earth sprang a horse, strong and handsome, an emblem of war and bloodshed.

The gods applauded. They were loud in their praise and admiration. They were sure Minerva's gift could not surpass it.

Then Minerva came forward and she produced the olive tree, an emblem of peace. She told them that the olive tree could furnish wood for fire, for building houses and making useful articles, that food and oil could be obtained from it and that even the fibre could be used for making clothing.

The gods at once agreed that Minerva had won, and because she was sometimes called by the Greeks Pallas Athene. Athens was the name given to the city in her honor.

Minerva was the goddess of wisdom. You will see her picture in a long cloak, with a helmet on her head. She carries a shield and a spear and at her feet is coiled a serpent, an emblem of wisdom.

ADJECTIVES IN PANTOMIME

A number of adjectives are written upon slips of paper which are slipped into a bag and passed around, each player taking one. Such words as beautiful, horrid, kittenish, dirty, slow, quick are examples. Each player in turn must stand and act in dumb show the adjective written upon the slip which he or she draws.

The rest of the players must guess the word. The one who guesses correctly the largest number of adjectives gets the prize.

Excellent music was played by Mowry-Steer and their Silver Collegians. Arrangements were in charge of an energetic group of young people headed by Miss Jean Duffus and Mr. Douglas Hall, and including the Misses Margaret Denne, Edythe Cottrell, Lahring Parsons, Jane Macdonald, Messrs. Otto Laderach, Bob White, Terry Hall, Jerry Duffus, Karl Duffus, Horace Hayward, Jack Sullivan and Jack Garner. The color scheme was carried out in blue and white, with two-tone streamers across the front of the stage and pendant from the electric lights. Crossed skiis were used, and skier's silhouettes appeared in blue and white on the walls, on the black velvet draperies which surrounded the orchestra and on the false ceiling over the stage. Skiers were shown doing a Telemark turn, in the same striking blue and white silhouettes, while spotlights were placed in the corners of the big hall, and the club crest, in blue and white, appeared on the front of the stage. Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

When you hear parents complain that their high school children are not content to stay at home in the evening—that they do not enjoy simple home pleasures—do you wonder whether these parents have learned to "keep open house" for the young people?

* * * * * * *

I sometimes wonder.

* * * * * * *

It is quite true that a houseful of young people may leave muddy tracks on the rugs, may untidy the living room, may make the kitchen look as though a cyclone had struck it, but who would not accept these minor irritations in exchange for the worry of having one's children hunting their recreation elsewhere?

* * * * * * *

Hiking is a healthful pleasure as well as many others, and these outings become a regular spree to these young people when they are permitted to return home, take charge of the kitchen, prepare a supper of nourishing food and finally to carry it to the living room and eat it, picnic fashion, about a blazing fire.

* * * * * * *

If they have brought along with them their dancing shoes and when supper is finished, roll up the rugs, tune in on the radio and finish with a dance or two, the evening becomes a very great success.

* * * * * * *

It is quite easy to make these young people understand that they must put everything back in its place when they are through with their evening's enjoyment and the boys will be as willing to work as the girls.

* * * * * * *

When the outing is an impromptu affair, and no previous preparation nor refreshment has been made, an appetizing hot meal may be prepared quickly and easily from the canned foods in the pantry and hot soups are always appreciated.

CULBERTSON on CONTRACT

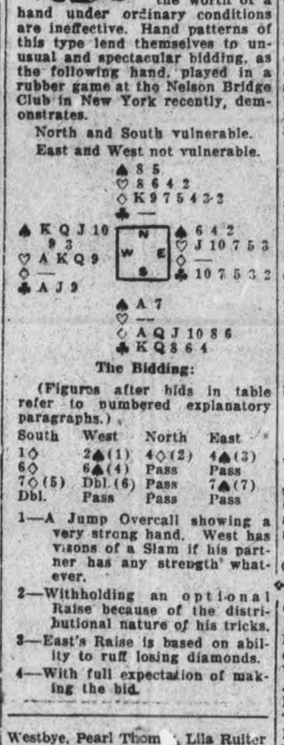
QUALITY AGAINST QUANTITY

There is a never ending battle in every Bridge game in which the strength of mass formation is tested against rank represented by honors. When hands are of unbalanced pattern, containing long and very strong suits, the value of honors is often minimized and sometimes reaches the vanishing point. In such cases, yardsticks valuable in measuring the worth of a hand under ordinary conditions are ineffective. Hand patterns of this type lend themselves to unusual and spectacular bidding, as the following hand, played in a rubber game at the Nelson Bridge Club in New York recently, demonstrates.

North and South vulnerable.

East and West not vulnerable.



The Bidding:

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1◇	2♠(1)	4◇(2)	4♠(3)
6◇	6♠(4)	Pass	Pass
7◇(5)	Dbl.(6)	Pass	7♠(7)
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—A Jump Overcall showing a very strong hand. West has visions of a Slam if his partner has any strength whatever.

2—Withholding an optional Raise because of the distributional nature of his tricks.

3—East's Raise is based on ability to ruff losing diamonds.

4—With full expectation of making the bid.

5—South refuses to be deprived of his Slam.

6—Holding two Aces in unbid suits, West feels sure of his ability to defeat his opponents' Slam.

7—East does not share his partner's confidence, as his Raise was based entirely upon the element of mass formation, not honors. He, therefore, bids seven spades for a sacrifice.

It was a field day for the private in the ranks, as against honor cards, both in the play and in the bidding. North opened a heart, South trumped and returned a club. The result was that West was defeated 5 tricks, a total of 1000 points, less 100 for the honors, a most unusual and apparently unsatisfactory result. However, when the hands were examined and reassembled in the post-mortem, it was seen that South would have made his Grand Slam in diamonds, thus scoring 1500 points for the Grand Slam, 100 points for honors, 100 for making the doubled contract, 280 for the doubled value of the tricks and 700 points for the rubber, a total of 2680 points.

It is in accord with the eternal fitness of things that East and West were rewarded by the Gods of Chance through overcoming the handicap which fate had placed upon them and eventually won a seven-point rubber, both honors and mass formation turning around to serve them after having held the cup of promise to their lips only to dash it down before it could be quaffed.

TODAY'S POINTER

Question: What is the point value of the rubber game?

Answer: 600 points. Care should be taken not to overbid too recklessly to save the rubber, as a loss of 1000 or 1400 points may be sustained.

THREATENED WITH KIDNAPPING

Willmott Lewis, Jr. (2), son of Sir Willmott Lewis, the Washington correspondent of the London Times, is principal in a new kidnap note received at the Willmott home. The note threatens his kidnapping unless $1,500 is paid. The announcement followed closely on the news that such a note had been received by Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, widow of the former Speaker, against her daughter, Paulina, shown in (1). Police guarded both homes and are working on the theory that one man is responsible.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

WHD SLEEP REMOVES FATIGUE.

One of the greatest needs of human beings at this stage of our civilization is rest

It is man's brain, man's nervous energy that has enabled him to accomplish so much; to be able to conquer land, air, and water.

Yet it is this same equipment—brains and nervous energy—that must get its rest if the whole organism, body and mind, is to do its best work.

The history of many long-lived famous men reveals that they secured sleep or rest when it was really needed.

Gladstone had the ability to doze off in the House of Commons for five, ten, or fifteen minutes when the business before the house did not need his personal or individual attention.

Chauncey De Pew made it a habit to be in bed at 11 o'clock every night, despite the fact that he was an after-dinner speaker on an average of four to five times a week. He insisted on being the first speaker on any evening program so that it would always be possible for him to get to bed at his regular hour.

Edison is often pointed out as a man who was able to get along with very little sleep, but he always had a couch in his work-room, and it was his custom to lie down at any hour of the day and rest so that his brain would be clear to resume work.

Why is sleep so helpful?

Because even the brain rests during sound sleep. It stops for the time being its regular work of directing all the processes of the body that are under the control of your will, and even the processes not under the control of your will will slow down to a considerable extent. This means that all the wastes manufactured by the processes of the body can be carried away by the blood stream, because, as very little waste is being manufactured while you are asleep, the blood can carry away the wastes manufactured during the day. If you can't sleep, are restless, keep moving about, you keep your processes so active that you manufacture so much waste that the blood can't carry away this waste and also the waste manufactured during the day. Hence you are tired after a restless night because your system hasn't got rid of wastes. It is the wastes in the blood that tire you

If you can't sleep, relax your body anyway, and take deep long breaths. You'll likely get off to sleep if you do this. The relaxation itself lessens the amount of waste being manufactured. It is next best to sleep itself.

LOST 10 TRIBES STILL EXISTENT SPEAKER CLAIMS

World Conditions Their Cause and Cure Subject of Interesting Address.

5 EMPIRES DISAPPEARED.

The British Commonwealth of Nations is the Israel of God, stated Rev. E. J. Springett, pastor of St. Patrick's Anglican Church, Winnipeg, and Dominion secretary of the British-Israel Federation of Canada, in addressing an audience last evening in All Saints Parish Hall on the subject, "World Conditions: Their Cause and Cure."

Rev. Mr. Springett's address was made under the auspices of the Peterborough branch of the British-Israel Federation, and he is delivering an address along similar lines this evening under the same auspices in the Canadian Legion Hall.

"Because the British are truly the Israel of God," he said, "they are endowed with tremendous responsibilities. They must not regard themselves as spoiled, favored people, but as endowed to be the servant people of Jehovah."

Jews Not Chosen People.

Denying positively that the Jews are the Chosen People, Rev. Mr. Springett declared, basing his opinion on his reading of the Bible, that the Jews will never, despite the Zionist movement, be in the Land of Palestine as a nation. The lost ten tribes of Israel were never lost, he said. Their identity and the knowledge of their history had gone into oblivion, but the tribes themselves were never lost and are still existent.

A closer reading of the Bible and the founding of political, economic, social, and national structure upon its teaching was the speaker's cure for present day ills.

Beginning, he emphasized that contrary to supposition, the British-Israel Federation was not a new sect or ism, and had no intention of setting up a new church, but that its aim was to arouse in the minds of Anglo-Saxon peoples a realization of their history and their heritage and so awaken them to their responsibilities. The British-Israel Federation was one of the greatest unifying forces in Christendom, he stated.

Traces Causes.

Proceeding to outline the outstanding phases of the world crisis, with the special object of learning the cause and not the effect which are being felt, he looked back 14 years to the end of the war and traced the tremendous changes to the present day. Five empires have disappeared, including the Russian, German, Austrian, Turkish, and Chinese. These have all become Republican in their form of government, but in truth they are more autocratical and tyrannical than before. Only the British Empire is left.

Great changes have also been wrought in the industrial, financial and economical structure of the world. These changes have reached almost the proportions of upheavals and the whole structure is on the verge of collapse.

"Things that we cherished and thought impregnable have proven failures and have slipped away," he declared, giving as an example Britain's step in going off the gold standard. "I don't imagine that Britain will go back on the gold standard, although that standard had been trusted for 2,500 years Yet it has proved itself absolutely useless to maintain the stability of the financial world."

Denied Men Work.

One of the great failures of our civilization, despite all its inventive genius, is that it denied man the right to sell his physical strength and the opportunity to do an honest day's work.

Rev. Mr. Springett then traced the religious situation. One form of religion, the Greek Orthodox Church, has been destroyed, and in its place has been set up a joyous atheism, a complete negation of all religion and God. The Mohammedan religion, which was state-organized, with the Sultan of Turkey as its Caliph, had been split in opposing forces, and was now proving a menace to civilization. The native religions in China, Buddhism and Confucianism, had been thrown overboard, and the young Chinese were now permeated with the atheistic teaching of the Soviet.

All Not Well.

All is not well in Christendom, he continued. Organized religion is not having the vital impact on the lives of the people that it formerly had and should have. The average man is very much outside the church to-day, he said, which is greatly affecting our moral and national life, and which demands a change.

He saw emerging two great systems upon the earth, the Anglo-Saxon system and opposing it the Continental system. These systems are slowly but gradually developing. The Anglo-Saxon system will eventually mean the unification of all Anglo-Saxon peoples, not merely the Confederation of the British Commonwealth of Nations. The other was given form with the late Premier Briand's plan for a United States of Europe. He traced some of the differences in the systems, mainly on faith and law.

Stability of World.

"Providence has submitted to the Anglo-Saxon the stability of the world," he declared, continuing that the Statute of Westminster which was passed last December, cutting asunder all the bonds that tied the British Commonwealth of Nations together, except the bonds of blood and love, was the beginning of the greatest experiment the world had ever seen.

Already other nations were considering making application to join the British Commonwealth of Nations, he declared, and Greece has already made such application. He stated that the British Commonwealth of Nations was an actual, literal manifestation and representation of Israel.

"If the British Commonwealth of Nations is not the Israel of God, then produce Israel," he challenged. "Produce that Israel's claim and mark of identity. I can produce every mark of identity that the British Commonwealth of Nations is Israel, and will to-morrow night.

"The remedy for the present ills is the whole application of the laws of God to all human activities. We have set up an organization, man-made in thought and activity, and it has failed; our hope is in applying the teaching of the Bible," he concluded.

J. J. Turner was chairman of the meeting in the absence of Roy E. Wemp, the president of the local branch. Rev. J. D. Paterson read the Scripeure, led in prayer, and introduced the speaker.

RAINBOW OUTDONE.

CHICAGO, Mar. 29.— The eyes are going to have "it" when milady saunters forth in the evening—if she adopts the optical make-up suggested by the mid-best beauty show.

The "windows of the soul" are in for much and varied coloration, of a kind not even ventured by Pocahontas.

Eye-lashes are made up to match the gown—green, frock, green tinted lashes. If one wants to carry the color scheme on—green finger nails and green toe nails peering out a la nude from sandal tips of gleaming through the new sheer sandal hosiery which is sans toe reinforcement.

Truly, the new ideas in optical make-up go the rainbow one better.

The very latest thing in eye-shadow sparkles with bits of metallic. It comes in bronze flecked with gold or the colors shining with gold or silver. When carefully applied it adds color and life to the eyes.

Wolves-Monarchs Qualify for Memorial Finals

SUDBURY BLANKS WHEELERS 3-0 TO CAPTURE EASTERN HONORS

GRUELLING CONTEST.

TORONTO, March 29 (C.P.)—A fighting band of hookeyists, the Sudbury Wolves, are to-day headed for Winnipeg in quest of the Memorial Cup and Dominion hockey championship laurels, while 11,000 wild, excited fans jammed Maple Leaf Gardens last night, Wolves trounced Montreal Winged Wheelers, 3 to 0, and emerged with the Eastern Canadian Junior title.

A one-all tie in Montreal last week enabled the young speedsters from Northern Ontario to capture the two-game round 4 to 1 and advance into the Memorial Cup final against Winnipeg Monarchs, Junior representatives of the West. The first of the two-of-three-games series is carded for the Western centre Wednesday night.

The same dash and fighting spirit which they displayed in downing Toronto Marlboros, O.H.A. champions, and Ottawa Shamrock, Eastern Ontario representatives, was on exhibit when Wolves marched to their clear-cut triumph. After the first period of last night's battle it appeared as though Sudbury would be finally halted in the march to a Dominion title, as Montreal completely dominated the play.

At the start of the second frame it was altogether a different story. From the face-off "Nakina" Smith, rangy centre ice speedster, raced down his mid-ice lane, faked a pass to his wingmate at the defence and rushed in for a score. Six minutes later, Larry Lafrance shot as he reached the defence. The puck struck Goalie Lennox on the chin and the flashy wingman raced in for the second score. The final goal which made certain of victory came from the stick of McGinnis, who fired a bullet-drive in the Montreal cage after sweeping in to pick up Blake's pass.

In the final period Sudbury appeared a mighty tier team, but they managed to hold their margin by their fighting spirit.

Marriage Of Golfers In June Called Off

LONDON, March 29 (C.P.)—The marriage of Joyce Wethered, noted British woman golfer, and Major C. H. Hutchinson, also a golf star, which had been planned for next June, will not take place, it was announced to-day.

Miss Wethered is 30; Major Hutchinson is 54. Their engagement was announced last November. No explanation accompanied the announcement.

JACKSON WINS SCORING HONORS

SEASON STATISTICS.

MONTREAL, Mar. 29—To Harvey Jackson, left wing player of the Toronto Maple Leafs and also left-winger on the mythical Canadian Press all-star team, went the scoring honors of the 1931-32 season of the National Hockey League.

Jackson scored 28 goals and gave 26 assists during the 48-game schedule to earn a total of 53 points, three more than his teammate and nearest rival, Joe Primeau, whose 13 goals, 337 assists, gave him 50 points. Final scoring and penalty statistics were issued last night from the office of the league President, Frank Calder.

Howie Morenz Third

Third place went to Howie Morenz, centre of Montreal Canadiens, who finished the season with a rush to displace Charlie Conacher of Leafs and Bill Cook of New York Rangers for the position. Morenz, who was comparatively well down the list a week before the schedule ended, amassed 12 points in the last week of the schedule and scored 24 goals, 25 assists during the year for 49 points.

Bill Cook and Charlie Conacher were but a point behind. Cook scored 34 goals, 14 assists, for 48 points, and Charlie Conacher's pointage was exactly the same. Cook and Conacher thus lead the entire league in actual goals scored.

Players of the Canadian division overshadowed the United States section. Bill Cook was the only member of the United States teams to score more than 40 points, whereas six of the Canadians managed to pass that total. They were: Jackson, Primeau, Morenz, Charlie Conacher, Dave Trottier and Hooley Smith of Maroons. Trottier secured 26 goals, 18 assists, for 44 points and Smith achieved the same total with 11 goals, 33 assists.

Second to Cook in the United States section came "Dit" Clapper of Boston, with 17 goals, 22 assists, 39 points, Dillon, the New York Ranger sensation, with third with 23-15—38, tied with Barry, Boston, with 21-17.

The highest scores for the New York Americans were Himes and McVeigh, who placed thirteenth and fourteenth, respectively, in the Canadian division. Himes had 7 goals, 21 assists, 28 points and McVeigh 12-15—27. Detroit's high man was Goodfellow, seventh in the United States division, with 14-16—30, and Chicago's best marksman, Gottselig, was immediately behind with 13-15—28.

Amerks Have Bad Men

New York teams easily captured the doubtful honor of having the "bad" men in their ranks. "Red" Dutton of the Americans headed the parade with 107 minutes in penalties, closely followed by 'Ching' Johnson of Rangers with 106.

REDS-TIGERS TIE IN PLAY-OFF TILT

Canadian - American League Leaders Hed to One Goal at Home.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Mar. 29. — A 1-to-1 tie resulted here last night in the first game of the preliminary play-off series between the Rhode Island Reds and the Bronx Tigers, the first and fourth place teams in the Canadian-American Hockey League.

The game was one of the best played here this season, with the bodychecking of a particularly vigorous nature. The Tigers put up a stern defense against a Providence attack which was doing most of the pressing.

"Gizzy" Hart scored the Providence goal after four minutes of the third period when he picked up a dropped puck from Gus Rivers.

Johnny Sheppard tallied the equalizer for New York four minutes later when he skated across the Providence goalmouth uncovered and took a high bouncing pass from Jean Chouinard.

Seven penalties were handed out, the Tigers getting six.

The teams play the second game here on Wednesday night. Total goals will decide the winner, which will play the winner of the New Haven-Boston series.

WIN TO-NIGHT WILL DECIDE STANLEY FINAL

Fifth Game, if Necessary, to be Postponed From Thursday.

CANUCKS MUST WIN.

NEW YORK, Mar. 29.—Officials of the Montreal Canadiens and New York Ranger hockey clubs have decided that if a fifth game is necessary to decide the National Hockey League championship it will be played at Madison Square Garden Sunday night, and not Thursday night, as originally scheduled.

Cecil Hart, manager of the world-champion Les Canadiens, explaining tonight the reason for postponing the game from Thursday to Sunday, providing Canadiens win tomorrow night, said it was considered in the best interest of the fans and the opposing teams.

Both Rangers and Canadiens, he stated, have suffered proportionately from the terrific pace set in the two games at Montreal and in the game here Sunday night, and if a fifth game is necessary neither team would have time to recuperate by Thursday if Tuesday night's game is as strenuous as its predecessors.

Besides, he pointed out, New York hockey enthusiasts prefer their hockey on Sunday nights.

Hart, commenting on the condition of his players, declared that, with the exception of Pete Lepine and Auriel Joliat, the team was in fine fettle, and "raring to go. We will give the Rangers a battle tomorrow night, regardless of the outcome."

He did not expect Joliat would be in shape to play, as his injured ankle is not responding to treatment very fast.

Penalties Costly to Wesleys in Second Game of Western Finals.

LOSE ON ROUND 3-2.

WINNIPEG, March 29.—Specialists in the revived craft of delivering a smashing bodycheck from any angle, Winnipeg Monarchs blasted their way to the Canadian junior hockey finals last night with a bristling 3 to 1 triumph over a lighter, fleeter Wesley team from Saskatoon. The victory margin enabled the burly Manitobans, Memorial Cup defenders, to win the two-game round by 3 to 2.

Wesleys Tally Early

Saskatoon went two goals up on the round within two minutes of the start, taking advantage of a penalty to Pinkie Davie, Monarch defenseman. Clint Smith, fast-skating little Wesley centre, broke away from his defense zone, with Clayton Crosby beside him. At the Winnipeg blue line Smith shoved the puck over to Crosby and the wingman skated over to Crosby and the wingman skated right in on Rice-Jones to score.

Crosby fell as he shot and slid into the goal along with the puck, but was not injured.

Wesleys put on more pressure even when Wavie came back on the Monarch rear guard. Al Welsh drifted in close on Rice-Jones, but shot into the net-minder's pads. Wesleys became short-handed when "Biff" Smith drew a penalty for a rough cheek and Davie sailed through the whole Saskatoon team only to shoot straight at Richardson.

Monarchs were on the offensive for the rest of the period, but confined their shooting to a long-range variety that gave Richardson little trouble. Lee Makarski and Shewan carried the brunt of the Monarch drive, but Clint Smith, leading the Wesley forwards, was quite as dangerous.

Penalties Costly to Wesleys

Two penalties in succession to Wesleys paved the way for Monarchs' equalizing goal. Saskatoon managed to stave off a desperate Winnipeg rally while Haight rested in the penalty box, but the champions succeeded in denting Richardson's armor a few seconds before Crosby, given two minutes for a trip, came back.

George Brown slammed the puck into the Wesley cage during a scramble in the goal-mouth. Saskatoon's defense checked hard but cleared weakly and the Wesley goal was in continual danger as Monarchs fought for the goal that would tie the round.

Makarski made a pretty play that resulted in the round-tying counter. Breaking up a Saskatoon play at centre, Makarski broke alone, splitting the Wesley defense before shooting. His drive was wide, but Creighton picked it up in the corner and passed it out to Makarski, who slipped it in from his unguarded position in front of the net.

Monarchs kept the crowd in an uproar for the balance of the period with a sustained push. The Yellowlees - Brown - Templeton front line outplayed the Wesley forward division by a wide margin. Brilliant individual skaters, the youths from the West retaliated with lone rushes and several were dangerous.

FAMOUS ENGLISH CRICKETEER WILL RETIRE FROM THE GAME

Ban on Foreign Jockeys Creates Considerable Alarm in Racing Circles.

HORSEMAN DIES

The announcement of the retirement from Test match cricket of H. W. Taylor will not have surprised those who follow the game in this country.

His reputation at one time was secured only to that of Jack Hobbs as the world's champion batsman, but it is a role difficult to live up to, as the great Surrey player has himself discovered.

It was during the visit of Mr. Leveson—Gower's team to South Africa in 1909-10 that Herbert Taylor first came into prominence. At Durban he and A. D. Nourse had a partnership of 149, and later he had a fine century in his first match as the South African captain.

He has played in over 40 Test matches, scored more than 3000 runs in them, and against England exceeded the century six times.

Against the Australians he had not the fortune to reach the three figures.

Students for Stamford

Chillon College (Switzerland) are to send a team in to take part in the Public Schools Athletic Championship at Stamford Bridge on April 1 and 2.

This will be the first time that a school from abroad has been admitted to the meeting, although in recent years several applications have been received from the continent.

Cyclists Open Season

The fifth speedway season opened yesterday with a meeting at Southampton. Coventry and Belle Vue will renew activities on Easter Monday, and Plymouth will reopen on Tuesday.

The first London track to recommence is West Ham, who open on Tuesday, April 5, and then Stamford Bridge follow on Saturday, April 9, Wimbledon on Monday, April 11, Sheffield on Wednesday, April 13, and Crystal Palace on Saturday, April 16.

As usual, Wembley are delayed by the demands of the F. A. Cup final, and the Empire Stadium enclosure will not reopen for speedway racing until Thursday, April 28.

Pick Speedsters

Wembley Speedway have completed the team which will defend the league championship and the National cup.

Apart from Reg Bounds, their principal recruit is Ginger Lees, one of the outstanding riders in the north, who was attached to Preston last year, while they have retained the services of Colin Watson, who will again captain the team. Jack Ormston, George Greenwood, Harry Whitfield, Lionel Van Praag, Wally Kilmister, Norman Evans and Charlie Shelton. In addition, Stan Catlett, the Australian, who rode for Wembley in 1929 and 1930, is again coming to England, while Colin Stewart may also return. Among these riders no fewer than eight have been "capped" for either England or Australia in the Test matches.

Famous Rider Passes

Count Bernheim, the amateur rider and racehorse owner, died recently in a Cheltenham nursing home as the result of injuries received when he was thrown from his horse, Summer Song, in the National Hunt Juvenile Steeplechase at Cheltenham last Wednesday.

Count Bernheim had no relatives in England He was a member of the French Military Mission with the British army in France during the war, and came to England nine years ago. His father was colonel of the Sixth Regiment de Chasseurs a Cheval and died three years ago. His mother is still living in France.

He was only a moderate horseman, but was so keen to ride in races under National Hunt rules that he was delighted when he could get a mount.

He once managed to get round a portion of the severe Liverpool course. That was when he rode De Combat in the Molyneux Steeplechase in 1926.

For the past five years he had been living at Cheltenham where he had two horses in training with A. Newey—Summer Song, on which he had his fatal fall, and Jurat, a hurdle racer.

The ban on foreign jockeys imposed by the British Jockey Club has caused alarm in Maisons-Lafitte and Chantilly, where 1,000 British trainers, jockeys and stable lads are employed.

Fears are expressed that action to ban foreign jockeys may be taken in France.

Test Cricketer Hurt

E. P. Nupen, the South African Test cricketer, broke his nose in a motoring accident near Johannesburg recently. His car skidded on a slippery road in avoiding another car, and came into collision with a tree.

Nupen was flung against the windscreen, which was shattered.

South Africa owed much to Nupen for the winning of the rubber against England last year. He took eleven wickets for 150 in the first Test which, as the other tests were drawn eventually decided the rubber.

LEAFS FAVORED TO BEAT HAWKS

Six Qualifying Clubs Resume Conflict in Major Series To-night.

INJURIES COSTLY.

TORONTO, Mar. 29. (CP)—The hockey spotlight will flash on teams of the National Hockey League to-night when the six qualifying clubs resume conflict in the league championship series and the Stanley cup playoffs.

Montreal's world champion Canadiens, although fighting against heavy odds, will seek to reverse the 1-0 setback suffered in the third game of their play-off series against Rangers at New York Sunday. Even though at home, Montreal Maroons are faced with a hard assignment when they enter the second game of their series with Detroit on even terms. Toronto's Maple Leafs enter their final game against Chicago one goal down and must overcome the lead to continue in the Stanley Cup playdowns.

Conceded better than an even chance of capturing the Stanley Cup, emblematic of the world's professional hockey championship, for the third successive year when they entered the playdowns, Canadiens have met with ill luck. A single defeat will now eliminate them from further contention while they are faced with the task of winning two straight games from Rangers to remain in the hunt for theh onors.

Injuries Costly

In the second game of the three of five series, Canadiens lost the services of Aurel Joliat, dynamic left-winger, through a foot injury. The third game played further havoc with the Flying Frenchmen when Pete Lepine, alternate centre, suffered a fractured leg in a collision with Bill Cook.

Jerry Lowery, one-time with Toronto Maple Leafs sort of showed up his former club mates in Chicago Sunday when he scored the only goal which gave Chicago a 1-0 triumph over Toronto. Even though one goal down Leafs will be favorites to capture to-night's tussle with Hawks and advance into the semi-final round against the survivor of the Montreal Maroon-Detroit Falcon series.

Sprague Cleghorn's Maroons appear to have the edge over Falcons in the other scheduled tilt. The Montrealers, who finished the regular schedule in excellent shape, are touted to be in championship form and the dope is out they are the team to beat for the coveted mug.

Falcons will have their say in the question, however, as the series will be decided by a sudden death game the first match ending in a 1-1 deadlock.

MAPLE LEAFS END STAY AT ATLANTA

Guy Cantrell Believes Jerry Abberbach Should Be Kept With Toronto Club.

ATLANTA, March 29. — Cold weather curtailed the Leafs' workout yesterday, and instead of toiling three hours they stayed on the field only two. The sun was warm enough, but a cold wind prevailed. It was so cold yesterday afternoon that not more than one hundred people saw the Phillies defeat the Crackers, 5 to 2.

The final practice in Atlanta for the Leafs will be held to-day, and then the team will move on to Nashville, where games are scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday. Guy Cantrell and Frank Barnes, it is expected, will pitch in Wednesday's game. While Cantrell is not yet ready for the opening of the league season, he claims he is much further advanced than he was at this time last Spring. He looks better than when he returned to the Leafs from Detroit.

Brennan Leaving

Hugh Brennan, young amateur catcher, who has been taking Spring training with the Leafs, will leave Atlanta for Toronto to-night. Earl Cook and Al Yarnell have decided to stay with the team a little longer. All three boys appear to have real futures in baseball before them, in the opinion of Frank Barnes, the Leafs' southpaw. Barnes is particularly sweet on the ability of Cook, St. George's pitcher.

And Guy Cantrell is of the opinion that Jerry Abberbach should be retained by the Toronto club this season. Cantrell said that Abberbach will prove a winner if kept. The Jewish boy is fast and his control is improving.

Close to sixty ball players are quartered in the Hotel Georgian Terrace. The Phillies number 36 and the Leafs 23. Five newspapermen are with the National League club.

4-TEAM GROUP IS MOOTED FOR THIS DISTRICT

Oshawa, Norwood Combines, Campbellford and Possibly Madoc May Play.

"PETE" KING RETURNS.

Prospects of a full-fledged box lacrosse league in the district this season are looming in the trail of departing hockey, according to Nelson King, who with Ira Dundas and Doug. Miller attended the annual meeting of the O.A.L.A. last Friday.

The local group could be selected from Oshawa, Peterborough, Norwood-Havelock Combines and Campbellford, with Madoc as another possibility. With one exception all these clubs are ready to go any time in so far as the rink conditions are concerned. Peterborough is the exception, and just to know what is their outlook for the season, Pete King and some of the other promoters of the game intend to interview the Brock Street rink management. They expect to receive co-operation from the rink people, and to find a willingness to put the rink into condition for the indoor game as early as possible.

Old Reliable Returns

The famous "Pete" will probably change his mind from his decision of last fall when he said he was going to hang up his lacrosse stick for keeps. The increased responsibility of the management of King's Hotel, following the death of his father, injected an important business note into his affairs, but when Spring comes round again and the gang starts "fanning" about the plans for the season they all get the old desire to get into the game again. Mr. King is that way just now, and it is understood that all of last years' team are again available. The Peterborough clan got a taste of the indoor game last year, playing half a dozen engagements in Campbellford and Norwood.

In regard to plans for the coming season nothing will be decided locally until it is known whether the rink will be in condition and for how long. The lacrosse crowd intends to issue a general invitation to the youngsters around town to take up the game. Pete King believes that boys like Jack Gardner and Norm Calladine, just to mention two of them, would quickly pick up lacrosse and like it. The abbreviated game, with the elimination of the midfield inaction, is in for a big season in Ontario and is spreading rapidly. Peterborough has the nucleus of a good team, and there may be other prospects picked up or developed before long.

Soccer Substitute Officially Adopted

P. and D. F. A. Holds Special Meeting and Adopts Three Substitutes in All Games.

After the regular business meeting of the Peterborough and District Football Association, last evening, they immediately held a special meeting to confirm the legislation upon the substitutes that shall be used during the season.

A requisition signed by no less than ten members made the ruling constituttional and they adopted a unanimous motion to the effect, reading thus: "That there will be three (3) substitutes used in all league games and cup ties during the season of 1932."

Many important discussions were revealed by the members who expressed themselves fluently for and against but they felt that they wouldn't like to be the only association that failed to give the proposition a fair trial.

At one time, the substitution of only one player held the uppermost thought until they discussed it from a player's point of view.

Awaiting Teams To Enter

Only three teams have made their official application to the association, viz: Caledonians, Port Hope and Canadian General Last year's champions have decided not to compete this season—Brinton Athletic. The Canadian Packing contemplate entering a team if they can collect the necessary finances. The secretary was instructed to write Deloro Football Club requesting them to inform the executive of their intention of participating in the league.

Six dozen forms will be obtained from the O.F.A. to be distributed amongst the clubs at the cost of twenty-five cents a form—which is the same as in previous years.

Applications will be received by the association from gentlemen desiring to become official referees during the season.

Any club can sign as many players as they desire as long as they get the player's signature signed in proper manner.

At the meeting scheduled for next Monday evening, a committee will be appointed to draw up rules that will deal exclusively with the substitute question.

CASUAL COMMENT

Cage activities are more or less in the limelight locally just now, as the leagues finish up. The girls' loop is through and the play-offs in progress, second games being billed for this Friday evening. To-night, the men's senior schedule winds up at the Y.M.C.A. with Examiner meeting Riley & Hickey's, followed by Auburns and Fashion-Craft. The titular series will likely start next week.

One of the most radical changes in any sport in years is taking place, with little being said about it We refer to lacrosse and the way the old-time game is being pushed right off the map by box lacrosse, with seven players to a side instead of twelve. This year the Mann Cup series will be fought for in the O.A.L.A. by box lacrosse teams, for the first time in the history of the game.

• • • • • • •

Well, while the old-timers will regret the passing of the twelve-man teams, the new type of sport has its advantages. For one thing it is faster and again it encourages more towns and villages to field a team, it being easier to get seven players than a dozen.

• • • • • • •

In many parts of the province last year, the runt game proved very popular and did a great deal toward reviving lacrosse. As it is the official gutted stick play this summer, it may pull a comeback similar to that of wrestling in the last two years. The fact that it requires smaller grounds is another asset.

• • • • • • •

We could get a fine seven-man outfit to represent Peterborough in the O.A.L.A. this summer, and no doubt will. But talk among the lacrossers around town seems to point to a regular city league if things work out properly. And, it is probable, there'll be a number of teams willing to form a league from Lakefield, Norwood, Havelock, Campbellford, and other places. Things will be buzzing around here in that line just about the time the old Spring Fever is at its worst.

Just about the time we had begun thinking our old friend Alex Kasaboski had quit the strenuous mat game for ever, up he pops again, this time in Brantford. The simon pure mittsers are going strong in Toronto this week with three amateur shows billed. The Eastern Ontario finals in the Queen City on the 11th and 12th of April is the reason for all the frenzied fistic action recently. In fact, we'll likely have a show here before then as a couple of the local scrappers want to get into that.

• • • • • • •

The three cards in Toronto, West Toronto A. C. tonight, Y.M.H.A. tomorrow and Premier A. C. Thursday, feature a number of pugs seen here this past winter. They include Red Munro, Mel Glionna, Cleric Jones, Paul Amato and others. Eric Carnegie, colored flash who may be here this spring, meets another good welter in the Premier show.

Quite a bunch collected in the new Pioneer Athletic Club gym last night when it opened and some of the boxers went through their paces. It's a fine, big place and when all fixed up this week should be a popular place for athletes. Serious training starts tomorrow night under the direction of Jerry Coughlin, and the place will be open every Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 7.30.

• • • • • • •

Rumblings are beginning to be heard locally along the various summer sports fronts and organization meetings will be called with the next week or so, with the leagues starting earliest getting the jump on rivals. There's a senior ball club meeting tonight and the O.B.A.A. annual gathering in Toronto Saturday. Softball, baseball, lacrosse, cricket, etc., bodies should be getting lined up here shortly as the first of April is just about upon us.

How dear to my heart are the amateur scrappers,
Who wallop each other with vehement slugs;
They differ so much from the stallers and slappers,
Who split their fat purses with gunmen and thugs.

I'm weary of massive professional fakers,
Of monstrous palookas whose feet weigh a ton;
I'm strong for the bakers and candlestick makers,
And plumbers and truckmen who battle for fun.

The amateur scrappers,
The ironbound scrappers,
The innocent scrappers,
Who battle for fun.

BISONS LOOM INTERNATIONAL TITLE HOLDERS

Herd Boasts of Strong Offensive and Defensive Strength for Play-off.

LONDON ALSO ON TOP.

Windsor and Detroit Rated to Finish Behind Two League Leaders.

TORONTO, March 29 (C.P.) — With the battle lines drawn along two fronts and a championship the main objective, the four leading teams of the International Hockey League to-day were awaiting only the siren which will launch the "big push" to-night.

The play-offs, to determine who shall wear the league crown, get under way simultaneously at Detroit and Fort Erie, Ont., with the Buffalo Bisons opposing the London Tecumsehs at Fort Erie and the Windsor Bulldogs invading the home camp of the Detroit Olympics. The series will be a home-and-home affair and they will be determined by the number of points acquired in the six games. The points will be allotted on the basis of three for a win and one point to each team deadlocked after one ten minute overtime period of a game.

Theoretically, Buffalo looms as the potential winner of the play-offs, as they have led the league from the beginning of the 1931-32 season, but any number of things may happen in a short series, and the other three clubs are both powerful and dangerous. The Bisons, with Captain Carl Voss and Lloyd Gross, the two leading scorers of the league, and Gamey Lederman, outstanding defense man, have both offense and defense power, but London boasts of a defense second to none. Stuart, the Tecs' goalie, has proved to be that hardest man in the league to beat this season, while Hicks and Holway have been a veritable stonewall behind the blue line.

The two other teams in the race, Windsor and Detroit, have been rated by the pre-series prognosticators to finish behind London and Buffalo, but neither is willing to concede any ground to their rivals. Windsor has two fast forward lines to make up for a slight weakness in the defence, while Detroit's power is equally distributed in both the offense and defense. In addition Detroit has developed considerable in the last half of the season and will enter the playoffs at top form.

The schedule for the series follows:—

Mar. 29—London at Buffalo; Windsor at Detroit.
Mar. 31—Detroit at London; Buffalo at Windsor.
April 2—Windsor at Buffalo.
April 3—London at Detroit.
April 5—Detroit at Windsor; Buffalo at London.
April 7—Detroit at Buffalo; Windsor at London.
April 9—London at Windsor.
April 10—Buffalo at Detroit.

Cleveland Bowler Favored For Title

Several Changes Are Made in Leaders of A.B.C. Tourney at Detroit.

DETROIT, Mar. 29. — (C.P.)— Only thirty-one teams are scheduled to-night in the American Bowling Congress tourney, now entering its final stages.

Decatur, Ill., Bradford, Pa., Toledo, O., and Mt. Clemens and Pontiac, Mich., teams will share the thirty-two alleys with Detroit lineups.

Yesterday's bombardment was one of the most sensational in A.B.C. history. Leaders changed on practically every squad.

Topping the assault on the Maples was a 731, registered by Otto Mitscheke, of Cleviand. In scoring games of 245, 255 and 231, he passed Alex Graham, New Philadelphia, O., by 11 pins. His score has been beaten only twice in national competition and tied once. He stands an excellent chance of winning the 1932 title.

An error, the No. 8 pin in the second frame of the last game, prevented Eddie Zajac and John Sublosky, Chicago, from upsetting Charley Daw and Frank Benkovic for the doubles lead. The Chicago combination totalled 1,350 on games of 467, 400 and 483. Sublosky shot 727 and Zajac 623.

Oshawa Fans Aroused Over O.H.A. Ruling

OSHAWA, Mar. 29. — Oshawa hockey fans are up in arms over the decision by the O.H.A. Subcommittee in the protest made by the local intermediates against the Doherty A.C. of Toronto in connection with the use of a player who had previously played with a team in the Toronto Hockey League group which sends a winner into the O.H.A. play-offs. By this ruling, it is pointed out, a Toronto team in the O.H.A. could wait until the T.H.L. series was completed and then bolster up its team by selecting players from any T.H.L. team which did not qualify for the play-offs.

The committee declared that this was perfectly legitimate and the opinion here is that it places outside teams at a great disadvantage in playing against O. H. A. teams from Toronto, which can select the players from other teams which have already been eliminated as possibilities for the O.H.A. honors. It is likely that a demand will be made for a new rule which will definitely prohibit such transfers of players in future seasons.

Major Hockey As Family Affair

Major league hockey is something of a family affair with six sets of brothers playing under the top of the big tent.

The Cook brothers, Bill and Fred, have been playing on the forward line of the New York Rangers since the team was organized in 1926. In addition to this pair, another member of the same family, "Bud," played with the Boston Bruins earlier in the season, but recently was sent back to the minors.

The Kilrea brothers also drawn down salaries every month from teams in the National League. "Hurricane" Hec cavorts at left wing for the Detroit Cougars, and Wally is a forward for the New York Americans. "Tiny" Thompson, goalkeeper for the Boston Bruins, is the brother of Paul Thompson, Chicago Black Hawks' wing man.

Art Ross, manager of the Bruins, has a pair of brothers under his wing. They are Joe and Frank Jerwa. Joe was obtained by the Bruins from the New York Rangers in a trade for "Dutch" Gainor and Frank comes from the defunct Pacific Coast League.

Lionel Conacher of the Maroons and Charlie of the Leafs are brothers as everyone knows.

The Montreal Canadiens boast of having two brothers on their team. They are the Mantha boys, George and Sylvio.

And then there are the Cleghorn brothers, both former players. Odie serves as a referee in the National League, after resigning as manager of the late Pittsburg Pirates. Sprague, who managed the Providence Reds in the minors, now bosses the Montreal Maroons.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

EVERYBODY IS HAPPY.

For lasting happiness you must
In other people put your trust.
—Old Mother Nature.

It didn't take Farmer Brown's Boy long to discover that Whitefoot the Wood Mouse had joined Mrs. Whitefoot in the new home under the old coat in a corner of the sugar house. He was anxious to see just where that new home was, for he couldn't imagine where that nest could have been placed, unless it was on the floor beneath the coat, and that didn't seem to him like a very safe place.

"Perhaps," thought he, "there is a little hole in the floor under there, and the nest is under the floor."

But true to his determination not to again frighten little Mrs. Whitefoot, he kept away from that old coat as long as he suspected that either Mrs. Whitefoot or Whitefoot was at home. He left the door of the sugar house open a crack at night so that those Mice could go and come as they pleased. At last he saw both dart out at the same time. This was his chance. He hurried over to the old coat and carefully lifted it enough to peep under. When he saw the rusty old syrup can lying on its side there, he knew instantly that this was the new home and chuckled.

"I had forgotten that that old can was here," he muttered. "Mrs. Whitefoot was clever to think of moving into this. Yes, sir, she was clever."

He carefully replaced the coat just as it was and by the time Mrs. Whitefoot returned was at the other end of the sugar house. He noticed that she was carrying some nesting material and a few minutes later saw Whitefoot take some more under the old coat.

"That can is so big that they need a bigger nest," thought he. "I'll give them a bit of help."

He got a big handful of cotton waste and pulling it apart scattered it on the floor near the old coat. A few minutes later Mrs. Whitefoot discovered it and it was plain to see that she was excited. She seized a mouthful and carried it back under the coat. Then out came Whitefoot and did the same thing. Then, how those two did work! Back and forth they scurried, carrying that cotton waste home, until at last every particle of it had disappeared.

And such happiness as there was in that old can! There were two nests there now: one for Mrs. Whitefoot and the babies and one for Whitefoot. It didn't take them long to discover that they had only to run a foot or two from the old coat to get all sorts of goodies spread there for them. You see, Farmer Brown's Boy was doing his best to make friends with these little people, and kept a supply of food for them.

Often in the evening he would sit close by while they ate, and it didn't take them long to understand that this great giant was a friend and as such not to be feared. So Whitefoot grew bold and actually took a bit of food from a hand held out to him. After that, in a surprisingly short time, he did not hesitate to climb up in the lap of Farmer Brown's Boy. Mrs. Whitefoot was not quite so bold, but at least even she forgot her fears, and allowed Farmer Brown's Boy to gently stroke her as she sat on his knee eating.

So there in the old sugar house in the Green Forest everybody was happy. Never had Whitefoot and Mrs. Whitefoot felt more safe. Never had they had a more comfortable home. Never had they had so many good things all at once to eat. And Farmer Brown's Boy was quite as happy. It was a wonderful feeling to know that these little people of the Green Forest trusted him and had no fear of him. So, evenings when there was no work to do he spent much time playing with these confiding little friends. Yes, there was much happiness in the old sugar house.

"ARIES"

If March 29th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a.m. to noon, from 3 p.m. to 4 p.m., and from 9:30 p.m. to 11 p.m. The danger periods are from 7 a.m. to 8:45 a.m., and from 6 p.m. to 7:40 p.m.

An unsettled feeling and a desire for change will be created by planetary conditions on March 29th. Any anxieties will prove to be a mere storm in a teacup. "Stick by your guns," and wait for further developments on any affairs of importance. Those with occult interests should further their study and investigations at this time.

Children born on this March 29th will learn very easily, which may prove to be their undoing through the easily acquired habit of leaving everything until the last moment. They should be allowed to drift for themselves as much as possible, as they will be by nature neither independent-spirited or self-reliant.

The story of your life, as pictured astrologically for a March 29th person, is full of human interest. You will live fully, and not always too wisely, but you are out to know what life has to offer to one who is not afraid to dip too deeply into the cup of life. You do not know the meaning of fear, and worry is not akin to one of your temperament. You are none too conventional, and feel that everyone is entitled to live their own lives in their own way and according to their own light.

You have both imagination and foresight. The former has been said to be the faculty which represents the future, and the latter the quality which possesses it. You are not afraid of hard work, but are looking for those things which give big returns. You are interested in people who can add something to your own mental, spiritual or material storehouse. You are not interested in, or sympathetic towards humanity in general.

You are not a saint of good humor when things go wrong, and are free to express your feelings of both pleasure and displeasure. You resent anyone else pricking your bubbles of vanity, although you enjoy laughing at other people. You are as independent in religion as in other matters of opinion.

BRITAIN TO HAVE SMALL SURPLUS IN NATIONAL ACCOUNTS FOR YEAR

Will Be One of Few Nations Able to Say She Has Paid Way in Last 12 Months.

KEY—INCOME TAX.

(By Thomas T. Champion, C.P. Staff Writer.)

LONDON, March 29.—It was established to-day as certain there would be a small surplus in the national accounts when they close on March 31, and Great Britain will thus be one of the few countries in the world able to say that it has paid its way in the past year. But it took a couple of emergency budgets and the best spirit on the part of the taxpayer and public servant.

The hero of the occasion is undoubtedly the income tax, which was not only paid up but paid up promptly. The taxpayer's grim sacrifice saved the whole situation. Since December 31 British income tax payers have parted with more than £200,000,000. The revised Treasury estimate of £272,000,000 has already been exceeded and total collections are likely to be nearer £290,000,000. Anyhow, it will be the biggest collection since the crisis of 1922-23, when the rate was also five shillings in the pound—25 per cent.

Death Duties Fall

There is also every indication the surtax payable by persons with incomes exceeding £2,000 will yield even more than the estimate of £73,000,000. A substantial fall, however, is expected from the estimate for death duties, one reason being the abnormally low rate of mortality among millionaires lately.

In brief, next Thursday's figures for the end of Britain's fiscal year will show the new taxes have been more productive than the Treasury anticipated, and the economies have been more effective than expected.

But all is not unalloyed satisfaction. The Daily Herald, organ of the Labor Opposition, puts the surplus at between £40,000,000 and £50,000,000 and says it will probably endanger the unity of the cabinet because demands are going to come from all sides for its disposal.

The common prediction the government will take sixpence off the income tax, making it 22½ per cent instead of 25 per cent, seems certain to be realized although it is expected the Chancellor of the Exchequer will continue to ask that three-quarters of the tax be paid at the beginning of the year following that for which it is payable, instead of restoring the old 50-50 basis between January and July.

Urge Old Rates.

A strong demand is arising for the restoration of the unemployment benefits to the old rates, and the teachers with an eagle eye on the budget basis want the reductions in their salaries taken off. At their conference now proceeding at Folkestone the teachers have been very vocal concerning the 10 per cent. cuts in their salaries effected last autumn. The president of the National Teachers' Union declares that while they will press their claims with determination and dignity, they feel the manner in which the cuts were made in September caused deep and justifiable resentment.

All Saints' Choir To Repeat Cantata

So many requests have been received by the Rector and Wardens to have the sacred cantata, "The Darkest Hour," given in All Saints' Church again, that they have decided with the co-operation of the choir to accede to this request.

Consequently next Sunday evening this beautiful work will be given again in its entirety with full choir and soloists. The piano accompaniments will be played by Mrs. Agnes Logan Green.

SELWYN.

Some friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rex Wilson in honor of Mr. Wilson's birthday last week.

Mr. Russel Elliott and Mr. H. Morrison, of Lakefield, are spending the holiday with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Elliott.

Miss Jean McIlmoyl paid a recent visit with Mr. and Mrs. W. Fawcett at Hall's Bridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Oliver have returned from Detroit and are spending some time in the vicinity.

The C.O.F. card party on Friday evening had a small attendance on account of the weather. First prizes were won by Mrs. B. Fitzgerald and Mr. M. Dean, while the consolation was won by Miss Viva Shearer.

Mrs. E. J. Sanderson, of Lakefield, spent a few days with her daughter, Mrs. W. Elliott.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Sanderson spent Thursday in Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. Purdy and daughter have moved from Lakefield to their farm in this neighborhood.

RARE CHEMICAL DISCOVERED PRODUCING SPEED IN MUSCLES

Chemists Foresee Cotton Grown and Harvested Like Hay or Wheat.

FOUR DAY SESSION.

(By Howard W. Blakeslee, A.P. Science Editor)

NEW ORLEANS, La., Mar. 29.—A rare chemical which gives speed to muscles and may be the essence of skill was described in a report to the American Chemical Society yesterday.

New uses of cotton, from cloth-covered highways to possibilities of converting the whole plant into cellulose, were featured at the opening general session of the four day meeting.

The chemical is phosphagen and is secreted by the body. It is a combination of phosporic acid and creatine, the latter a body protein product.

Phoshagen supplies to certain muscles the energy to contract. But it is something more than mere energy, for apparently some muscles have no phoshagen and it is found most abundantly in highly specialized, rapidly contracting muscles.

One Drawback

No effective method of administering this chemical is known, as the discoveries are in their beginnings. They were reported in a paper by R. Adams Dutcher, Ph.D., head of the Department of Agricultural Biochemistry of Pennsylvania State College, in a summary of recent advances in bilogical chemistry.

Phoshagen plays the part of an almost lightning-quick transformer between two substances long recognized in muscular activity, glycogen and lactic acid. Glycogen is the sugar "fuel" of muscles, an animal starch, poured into muscle from the blood sugar. When a muscle contracts some of this fuel disappears, and usually is replaced by an equivalent amount of lactic acid.

Most of the acid quickly disappears apparently by being reconverted into glycogen.

The new uses of cotton were presented by H. J. Skinner, President of Skinner and Sherman of Boston, Mass.

"Recently," he said, "much publicity has been given to experiments at the University of North Carolina, which if successful might revolutionize the cotton industry. Some time back a noted authority on forestry and lumbering asserted that he expected to see the time when cotton would be grown for its own cellulose content and not for its lint value, and it is upon this premise that the University of North Carolina experiments are based.

New Harvesting Ways

"The experiments propose to grow cotton like hay or wheat and harvest the whole plant with a mowing knife.

A new "lingering" anaesthetic," which continues to kill pain after an operation but has no habit-forming power, was reported to the American Chemical Society last night.

A powerful salt from castor oil which promises a new method of immunizing from diphtheria and tetanus also was reported.

The new anesthetic is local, and is claimed to outdo both cocaine and novocaine. It is hydrochloride of piperidinopropanediol diphenylurethane. For short it is called diothane. It was reported in a paper issued by the society from Dr. T. H. Rider, and E. W. Scott, of the William S. Merrell Company, Cincinnati.

LIVES IN ELECTRIC OVEN 332 DAYS AFTER CRASH

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 29 (C. P.). — Game Jack Doty, who lived in an electric oven at a temperature of 103 degrees for 332 days to upset predictions of doctors that he couldn't survive burns received in a motor car accident, has gone to the hospital to get some new skin.

He was injured early last May. His back was seared to the bone and his right leg parched. Physicians were almost sure he could not live, but placed him in the oven, heated by a battery of electric lights, as a last resort. Only his head and shoulders were free.

TARZAN AND THE GOLDEN LION. NO. 56

By Edgar Rice Burroughs
(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

LA came and stood beside Tarzan on the dais. "Glorious is the deed that you have done," she said with admiration and love in her voice, "but we are doomed. In the legends of my people are recounted the exploits of these Bolgani. Never yet has a victim escaped their horrible clutches." "There is a chance, La," replied the ape-man. "It seems to me that—" His words were cut short by a startled cry from the High Priestess. "See," cried La pointing toward the east, "even no wit is too late—they are returning!"

And Tarzan saw through the open doorway at the far end of the room a large band of approaching gorilla-men. Simultaneously they saw through the windows on the opposite wall a crowd of several hundred blacks running toward the windows. The other blacks upon the dais cried out excitedly: "They come. Our deliveries come! Now shall we be free. No longer shall the Bolgani torture us at our work or feed us to Numa." As the first of the Bolgani reached the throne-room the Gomangani poured in from the opposite windows.

The battle was on! Tarzan, calling Jad-bal-ja to follow him, descended the dais and took command of the Gomangani. During a lull, he smuggled through the combatants three trusty warriors. He ordered them to speed through the jungle and carry word to distant villages, telling what was happening in the palace and urging them to send armed help at once. Shortly after they left the Bolgani charged again. Tarzan leaped forward to assist in checking the rush. Pointing to the nearest Bolgani he shouted to the golden lion once more his terrible command: "Kill, Jad-bal-ja, Kill!"

The golden lion needed no second urging. Straight for the throats of the nearest, he sprang. His great jaws closed but once upon the neck of each gorilla-man. Before this terrible beast the Bolgani faltered, hesitated and then one among them threw his weapons upon the floor. Immediately the others did likewise. Tarzan called off the golden lion, ordering him back upon the throne. "One of you go" he said, turning to the Bolgani, "and tell your fellows demand their immediate surrender!" As the creature obeyed, La whispered: "Beware of treachery!"

SAYS FAMILIES NOT AN ASSET

Times Differ From Colonial Days—Wives Liability Professor States.

FAVORS BIRTH CONTROL.

BOSTON, Mar. 29.—Dr. David D Vaughan, professor of social ethics at Boston University, believes a family is no longer the same asset it was in colonial days.

In an address before the Methodist Episcopal Ministers' Association yesterday he termed the modern family a "liability," referring to wives as "parasites" and advocated birth control.

"In colonial times a wife and family were an asset to a man," he said. "Now they are a liability. In pioneer days a man's wife increased his social prestige; under present conditions she is a financial burden and often a parasite.

"Enemies of birth control are enemies of human progress and marital happiness, and neither spinisters nor bachelors have the right to criticise its use. Birth control is the logical outcome of life as we find it to-day."

Merchants Favor Half-Day Closing

Half-day closing of stores on Wednesdays throughout the months of June, July and August was last night the unanimous decision of members of Peterborough branch of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, at a meeting held at Hooper's Palm Tea Room and presided over by James Juby.

Discussion on the question was invited by the chairman at the conclusion of addresses given by George S. Hougham, executive secretary and Frank H. Boselly, merchandising service division, both of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada.

Alderman J. D. Fitzpatrick expressed himself as being in favour of the half-day closing. There had been opposition from certain quarters, he said, on the grounds that the merchants of the city lost business by observing a half holiday. He admitted that a "few coppers" were probably lost on tourist trade, but he asked, "would you not stand to lose more by keeping open when probably other stores might be closed."

No further discussion on the subject forthcoming, the question was put to standing vote and was carried in favor of half-day closing by an overwhelming majority.

Import Tax Rates Boosted By France

PARIS, March 29 —(AP)— The senate gave its approval today to revised import tax rates fixing the duty at six per cent on finished manufactured products, four per cent on half-finished products, and two per cent on raw materials and agricultural products.

Opponents of the measure asserted it would lead to reprisals by other nations but Pierre Flandin, the finance minister, said that was not a protective tariff measure but was designed simply to subject imported products to the same fiscal charges as native goods. France, he said, is more a victim of restrictive measures than other countries where there are heavy import taxes.

The chamber of deputies already had approved the measure. The present tax on imports is two per-

The Minister, Rev. Horace S Coleman of Bloomingdale, Ind. sent a farewell letter to Dr. Willis Walker, a friend, and told him he intended to take his life with those of Mrs. Coleman and Horace E., Jr., at a South Side garage.

MAN IS CAUGHT ESCAPING FROM ROOF OF STORE

Had Forty-one Keys of Assorted Varieties and Flashlight.

YOUTHS ARRESTED.

Norwood Man is Charged in Police Court With Assaulting His Mother.

Discovered sliding down the rain pipe from the roof of a downtown store early this morning by a police constable, a man was arrested and lodged in the cells. Found upon him were forty-one keys of assorted varieties and a flashlight.

He gave the name of Harold Cassan, but Chief Newhall said that he had falsely adopted this name "There is a local man named Harold Cassan, but this fellow doesn't look any more like him than I do," declared the Chief.

Charged as a vagrant in court to-day, the man had little to say and stared about the court room with a strange, haunted look upon his face. He was remanded for a week to allow police to send his finger prints to the Royal Canadian Police headquarters, Ottawa, and learn whether he has a record.

Just Touring.

"How much did you pay the conductor?" asked Magistrate Langley of two wandering youths, charged as vagrants, when said that they had ridden into the city yesterday on a passenger train from Port Hope.

"Why," was the grinning reply, "we just came in hobo-like on the tender. You see we're touring."

Neither desired to plead to the charge, so both were remanded until to-morrow to make up their minds.

Ernest Graham, Norwood youth, charged with assaulting his aged mother, would not plead elect to e charge was remanded for a day on his own bond. He said he had had ... with his mother before but had never attempted to strike her.

EXAMINER DANCE ON FRIDAY NIGHT

No Pains Spared to Make This Dance the Best of the Season.

YOKOM'S BAND TO PLAY.

Friday, this week, happens to be April Fool's Day, but don't let that mislead you. There'll be no fooling at this big Dance. Right down to work for that orchestra, early in the evening, and no let up until they have satisfied the hardiest dancers on the floor.

Once in a while, though, just by way of contrast, there'll be one of those dreamy piano solos by Mose Yokum. With the lights turned low and a huge colored spotlight playing on the crowd.

Seriously however, Friday night's dance is going to be just about the biggest and best which The Examiner has ever sponsored. No pains have been spared to make preparations complete in every detail. The band is good, the hall is good, the cause is good. How can the dance help but be good?

REINDEER HERD IS UNREPORTED

Group of 3,000 Head Believed Delayed in Arctic by Bad Weather.

DOMINION PROPERTY.

OTTAWA, March 29 (C.P.).—Due to unfavorable climatic conditions, the progress of more than 3,000 reindeer from Alaska to the Mackenzie district of the North-West Territories has been considerably impeded.

In May, 1929, the Dominion Government agreed to purchase from the Lomen Brothers Reindeer Company of Nome, Alaska, 3,000 selected reindeer. The Department of Interior officials of Ottawa have been informed from time to time during the past year of the progress of the herd, but during the last few months they have had no word.

The Government, however, feels no anxiety over the delay since it is considered highly probably nothing serious has happened to the herd. No loss would be sustained by the Government, in any event, as it did not agree to pay for the reindeer until delivered at the Mackenzie Delta.

Eskimo herders employed by Lomen Brothers are in charge of the animals, and when they reach Kittigazuit they will be taken over by three Lapland herders imported by the Canadian Government.

STONE VILLAGE IS DISCOVERED

Professor Claims Builders Were Excellent Masons—On Verde River.

THREE STORIES HIGH.

PHOENIX, Ariz., March 29 (C. P.). — A copyrighted article by the Arizona Republic announces the discovery of a stone village which Dr Byron Cummings, Dean of Archaeology at the University of Arizona, believes was a prehistoric trade centre.

Dr. Cummings said the pueblo was found on the Verde River.

He described it as "at least 300 feet long, 356 feet wide and for the most part, three storeys nigh."

The Republic, quoting Dr. Cummings, said: "We found two large pueblos and three smaller ones. The latter is the largest compact pueblo I know of in Arizona.

"We dug in tow rooms of the larger for 10 feet but failed to find the floor level.

"The builders were excellent stone masons. It offers indisputable evidence of an extinct prehistoric culture on the Verde which became a central meeting place for all cultures."

Air passenger and mail services will be established between the Orkney Islands and Inverness, Scotland, in May.

DOCTOR SUICIDES CANADIAN NURSE FOLLOWS SUIT

Girl Takes Same Poison as Physicians Pronounce Co-worker Dead.

ON SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH.

Death Complicates Inquiry Into Reason for Wealthy Instructor's Action.

BALTIMORE, Mar. 30—Shock, resulting from the death before her eyes of her employer and co-worker in scientific research was blamed today by police for the suicide of Miss Mona Rittenhouse, native of Dunnville, Ont., who died last night from a draught of the same poison which a few minutes before had killed Dr. Frederick B. Jennings, Jr.

Coroner John J. Morrissey returned verdicts of suicide in both deaths, but said that he could not find any evidence of a concerted plan on the part of the two to destroy themselves.

Mysterious Affair

By her death, the 28-year-old nurse placed serious obstacles in the path of the inquiry seeking to clear up the suicide of the wealthy volunteer instructor in pathology at Johns Hopkins Medical School.

Only she was with him when he took the poison, and she snatched the bottle containing it as soon as physicians she summoned pronounced him dead. Her act was so sudden that the doctors had no opportunity to learn of any statement Dr. Jennings might have made in relation to his act.

Despondency over ill health was believed by Dr. Morrissey to have led to Dr. Jenning's act.

Leaves Wife

Dr. Jennings was married, his wife living in Colorado Springs, Colo. Miss Rittenhouse was a native of Canada, but had applied for naturalization papers.

The nurse came here four months ago from New York, Hopkins officials said, to take employment in the Wilmer opthalmological institute, but had been aiding Dr. Jennings in research work and caring for him.

BRITISH PRESS QUESTIONS CANADIAN BUYING TACTICS

MANCHESTER, England, March 30 (C.P. Cable). — Commenting on a recent statement by H. H. Stevens, Canadian Minister of Trade and Commerce, the Manchester Daily Despatch said to-day:

"Here we have a frank admission that Canada sells $69,000,000 worth of goods to the Mother Country in excess of what she buys, yet she spends $90,500,000 in America beyond what America spends in Canada. Is it not sound business, to say nothing of Imperial patriotism, to divert at least $70,000,000 of that from the United States to Great Britain?"

France Bars Wood From United States

PARIS, March 30 (C.P.). — The official journal printed two decrees to-day, barring United States finished wood, such as oak flooring and similar products, from France until January 1, 1933, and common woods until July 1, 1932, because of exhausted import quotas.

COUPLE ROBBED, GIRL ABDUCTED ON LONELY ROAD

Police Find Young Woman at Home After Alarm is Raised.

STORIES DIFFER.

Escort Badly Beaten Up, Creates Sensation With Account of Affair.

PATERSON, N.J., Mar. 30. — A dramatic recital of the "kidnapping" of a young Paterson woman and the savage beating of her escort caused a short-lived sensation here early to-day.

State and local police organized a frantic search for Miss Molly Baker, 23, when John H. Jeffs, Philadelphia, staggered into police headquarters, bruised and bleeding, and told how two men with pistols had beaten and robbed the pair as they sat parked in an automobile a loenly lane, and then carried off the girl. They loaded her into their automobile, screaming and kicking, he said, and drove away.

Description of the young woman, furnished by Jeffs, was broadcast and automobiles were stopped and searched.

Safe At Home.

It was while the search was most feverish that police learned Miss Baker was safe at her home here.

'She, too, told of being "abducted" but her story differed from that of Jeffs.' Two robbers took $685 from Jeffs, she said, and her handbag. They also stole the keys. As Jeffs and Miss Baker devised plans for starting the automobile, she declared, two men drove up, forced them from the automobile, and severely beat her escort. She was unable to say whether they were the same men.

They then forced her to accompany them, she said, and later she was returned to her home unharmed.

Both Jeffs and Miss Baker were questioned further.

Crime Wave Sweeps Large Indian Cities

BOMBAY, March 30 (C.P.). — India's larger cities are experiencing a crime wave which the police attribute to a well-organized gang which works with swiftness and efficiency.

88 APPLICATIONS FOR CARETAKER ARE CONSIDERED

A. M. Cowling is Appointed Caretaker of New Rest Rooms.

TENDER WAS LOWEST.

Wellington Bradshaw is Reappointed Market Toll Clerk.

Eighty-eight applications for the position of caretaker of the new city restroom, soon to be opened, were considered last evening by the Property Committee of the City Council.

A. M Cowling received the appointment and will be instructed in his duties by Alderman Fred Tuggey, chairman of the committee. Cowling's tender was $325 a year and he was stated to be just the right type of man the city required for the job, his character being above reproach.

His tender was the lowest. One woman applied offering her services at one dollar a day. Others ranged from eight dollars a week to twenty-five. Many applications were from men living outside the city and one Norwood man applied.

It took the committee more than an hour to systematically consider the huge stack of applications.

Wellington Bradshaw secured the re-appointment as market toll clerk. He offered the city $1,200 for the job, an increase of $350 over the amount he paid for the position last year.

The only other application for the office was from Walter Fisher, his offer being $975.

Henceforth the city clock will be illuminated at the same hours that the street lights are on. Alderman Tuggey reported that the time clock controlling the clock lights was not working properly and it had been suggested that the clock lights be hooked up with the street lighting system so that both could be controlled at the same time. The committee agreed to this proposal.

FIRST READING IS GIVEN BILL AFTER CLOSURE

Four Divisions Take Place in House During Long Day.

PASSES COMMITTEE.

Commons Adjourns at 4.30 After Passing Relief Bill Through Committee.

OTTAWA, Mar. 30.—(CP)—Climaxing a hectic day of debate, the House of Commons this morning gave first reading to a government bill to extend until May 1 the terms of the unemployment relief act of last session. Tempers frayed and a general hubbub reigning, the House rose at 4.30 this morning after the longest day of sustained battling in some years.

The Bennett government secured a majority of 36 when the house adopted a resolution authorizing the presentation of the extending bill. The vote was 100 to 64 with the Liberals and the bulk of the United Farmer - Progressive - Labor group pitted against the Conservatives. A few minutes earlier, the ministry had a majority of 37 when the House voted 107 to 57 on a motion "that the question be now put."

Shortly after the house met in the afternoon, closure was applied to the debate on the resolution. By adopting 83 to 49, a motion made by Premier R. B. Bennett, the House forced a division by 2 a.m., and limited speeches during the day to twenty minutes. Notice of the closure motion was given by the Prime Minister on the eve of the Easter recess.

Fourth Vote of Day

A fourth vote took place during the sitting and once again the government secured a substantial majority, Hugh Guthrie, Minister of Justice, when the house was in committee stage considering the resolution authorizing the presentation of the bill, moved a change in terminology. By a standing vote, the House passed it 102 to 62.

The Government's fluctuating majorities were caused by the Gin-

RACE CONFERENCE.

NEW YORK, March 30 (C.P.). — Thomas J. Ford, president of the Irish World, a New York newspaper, to-day issued a call, through the paper, for an Irish race convention in New York "at a place and time to be determined at a preliminary conference."

The call asked election of delegates for the convention by all Irish-Republican organizations in the United States.

"We do not believe there will be any declaration of war on Ireland by England," the call said. "The oath of allegiance will go; the land annuities, which belong to Ireland, will be retained. England will bluff and bluster, but England will back down when she finds that Irish Republicans are determined to hold their own and when she learns that the Irish in America are giving every support possible to aid Ireland achieve full and complete independence."

A similar Irish race convention was held in New York in March, 1916, following the same sort of call from Ford in the Irish World.

Engineer Is Ordered To Repair Sidewalks

City Engineer Parsons was instructed last evening at a meeting of the Board of Works to make certain needed repairs to city sidewalks. It was declared that there were certain corners where the pavement had sunk, which caused them to be covered with water during rains and thaws.

The city streets which have been cut up during the winter traffic will not be repaired for another month, it was decided. The roads were said to be in a worse condition than for many seasons.

Tenders will be asked for the oil and cement required by the city during the year. The city engineer was also instructed to level off the Hilliard farm property from which the city had taken earth during the operations of levelling the new park on Water street.

Plea of Insanity To be Submitted By the Defence

Three Alienists Engaged By Government Will Submit Evidence in Greenshield's Murder Trial Now Being Heard in Cobourg Before Mr. Justice Raney.

GRAND JURY BRINGS IN A TRUE BILL
CROWN CONCLUDED ITS CASE AT NOON

Thirty-eight Petit Jurors Were Called Before Panel Could Be Completed—Provincial Constable Tells of Highway Accident to Prisoner Last June.

(By Staff Reporter)

COBOURG, Ont., March 30—Three alienists engaged by the government as specialists in mental diseases followed the evidence for the Crown this morning in the trial of Hugh Greenshields of Campbellford for the murder of his son William on Friday, November 13 last, and will probably be major witnesses in supporting the defence plea of insanity prepared by N. A. MacColl, of Campbellford, counsel for the accused.

These experts are Dr. T. B. McGhie, director of Ontario Hospital Services, Dr. J. A. Hannah, nevro pathologist, and Dr. W. C. Herriman, all of Toronto.

Thirty-eight petit jurors were called this morning before the trial jury was finally selected. C. A. Payne, K. C., of Belleville, is special crown prosecutor, assisted by Crown Attorney F. D. Boggs, K. C., of Cobourg.

Greenshields pleaded not guilty and for two hours, crown witnesses testified against Greenshields, and identified three-foot scantling with which he is alleged to have used to beat his son to death and injured another son.

Coming Down Stairs

Mrs. Tillie Woods of Campbellford testified that when she entered the Greenshields' house about 11 a.m. on the day of the tragedy, the father coming down the stairs said to him, "I don't know what made me do it, something came over me."

Greenshields was crying bitterly and seemed to be in a state of extreme nervous tension.

Mrs. Woods said the accused had always appeared to be a very kind father.

Mr. Payne: "Did he appear normal when he spoke to you that day?"

"I didn't think so; that was why I tried to quiet him."

In a voluntary statement to Provincial Constable W. J. Carey at Cobourg late in the afternoon, Greenshields said "Something seemed to come over me. I don't know what it was. I took a drink of iodine. I don't know whether it was before or after I hit the boys. I saw blood on them and went down and told Mrs. Rutherford."

Accident in June

Provincial Constable McBrien of Belleville recalled that on June 16, 1931, Greenshields was struck by an automobile on the Provincial Highway three miles west of Trenton and was unconscious nearly three days.

"Greenshields told me on June 18th that he knew nothing of the accident and could remember only the fact that he had been walking on the shoulder of the road. Two weeks later he was still very weak, and said his head bothered him with pains."

Dr. W. E. Wilkins, Cobourg, who was present when Greenshields made the statement to Constable Carey, said the accused seemed to be mentally clear at that time and capable of making a statement.

The Crown concluded its case at the noon recess.

A true bill was returned this morning by the grand jury in the trial of Hugh Greenshields of Campbellford for the murder of his young son on the morning of November 13 last. The Spring Assizes opened here yesterday with Mr. Justice Raney presiding.

Following His Lordship's address, the Grand Jury retired to hear the evidence of the Crown in this capital case as adduced by C. A. Payne, K.C., of Belleville, special prosecutor. With the prospect of this preliminary occupying most of the afternoon, the Court was shortly after adjourned until this morning awaiting the Grand Jury's decision as to whether Greenshields should be put on trial.

Mr. Justice Raney cautiously intimated that he expected the Grand Jury to bring in a true bill.

The only other case on the docket was an application for divorce by Mrs. Florence May Hall of Port Hope from Gilbert M. Hall, until recently, at least, an enforced sojourner at the Prison Farm, in Guelph. This action held the likelihood of engaging the court for part of the afternoon, but it encountered a knot of red tape in the examining of the first witness and was set over to the non-jury sittings in May.

The Grand Jury panel was as follows: John F. Jones, Hastings, foreman; Hilliard Jones, Campbellford; Henry Tinney, Cavan; Gordon Thompson, Percy; Manley Rosebush, Darlington; H. Denton, Cobourg; Ernest Joyce, Haldimand; W. A. Adams, Clarke; Fred Brimacombe, Clarke; D. Butters, Hamilton Township; T. Butters, Hamilton; J. F. Flood, Port Hope; Avery Johnston, Bowmanville.

N. A. MacColl, of Campbellford is defending Hugh Greenshields. Sixteen witnesses have been subpoenaed from Campbellford, nearly all of whom were heard in the preliminary trial and at the inquest. It was plainly intimated that the

KIDNAP PUZZLE REFUSES TO FIT

Clergyman Claims Negotiators Been Approached With Plans for Return of Baby.

RESIDENTS QUESTIONED.

HOPEWELL, N. J., Mar. 30. — The Norfolk and Hopewell angles of the Lindbergh kidnapping puzzle still failed to fit together today as the baby's captivity stretched on toward a full month.

In Norfolk one of the three negotiators trying to get Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., back from the kidnappers who stole him March 1 declared Col. Lindbergh had asked them to carry their efforts forward.

In Hopewell Col. Lindbergh was quoted as expressing the belief again that "no specific significance" attaches to the Norfolk activities.

It was the Rev. H. Dobson-Peacock, former Canadian minister and prominent Norfolk clergyman, who gave out the statement there. Returning yesterday from a trip to the famous airman's home here, he said he and Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage and John H. Curtis, boat builder, had been authorized to continue negotiations.

Satisfactory Visit

He said his visit made with the aid of a navy plane "was satisfactory." The negotiators have been approached by some one they believe to be acting for the kidnappers.

Department of Justice Agents began questioning residents in this vicinity. Among other developments was a visit by two Kansas City detectives who are in New Jersey seeking Martin Dispew in connection with the kidnapping of Mrs Nell Donnelly of Kansas City. They said they gave Schwarzkopf "pretty good" information on the Lindbergh case.

BISHOP OF JERUSALEM IS GIVEN HIGH PRAISE

(By Thomas T. Champion, C.P. Staff Writer.)

LONDON, March 30 (C.P. Cable) —The selection by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York of Rev George Francis Graham-Browne as Bishop in Jerusalem means the appointment of a remarkable man for one of the most interesting offices in the Anglican Church.

Rev. Dr. Graham-Brown is now principal of Wycliffe Hall, Oxford famous centre of evangelical training. Son of a missionary in China he served in the war as an officer of the Scots Borderers and was wounded in action. Subsequently taking holy orders, he was appointed principal of Wycliffe in 1925.

Youth Kills Seven Then Calls Police

OSLO, Norway, Mar. 30.— (A.P.)— A family tragedy, in which a young man of 21 killed his father, mother and five brothers and sisters with an axe and then set fire to their home was discovered at Verdal, near Trondheim to-day when the sheriff answered a mysterious telephone call.

A youthful voice had called the telephone exchange, saying: "Hello, operator! Get me the sheriff and the fire brigade." The sheriff was notified and rushed to the house immediately. Neighbors said the young man had shown signs of increasing nervousness during the last two days.

COMMITTEE WILL PROBE SCHOOL GRANT PAYMENTS

REGINA, March 30 (C.P.). — Appointment of a committee this year to examine into the whole question of payment of school grants was announced here last night by Premier J. T. M. Anderson during an address.

The Premier criticized actions of the Liberal Opposition in the Legislature and at public meetings stating the address of J. C. Gardiner, Opposition Leader, last week was permeated with a spirit of political bitterness and hatred seldom heard in Saskatchewan.

In connection with the wheat pool guarantees the Premier said that "this money eventually will be paid back to the Province and the interest will be paid by the wheat pool and the pool elevator company. As a matter of fact, the first payment of interest amounting to over $300,000 was provided by the pool a few days ago."

GASOLINE BLAST FATAL TO FOUR AS HOUSE BURNS

Tragedy Occurs When Girl Pours Gas in Stove to Start Fire.

SON BADLY BURNED.

Eldest Daughter Gives Life in Vain Effort to Save Sick Mother.

GOGAMA, Ont., Mar. 30. — (C.)—Four members of one family are dead to-day while another is seriously burned as a result of a gasoline explosion which ignited their dwelling late yesterday and trapped the occupants in the burning building.

Mrs. A. Labrie, 49, her three daughters, Bertha, 21, Clarina, 9, and Dorothy, 4, while Joseph, 18, who was working in the yard at the time of the explosion, was badly burned when he attempted to rescue his mother and sisters. A fourth sister, Evelyn, saved herself when she leaped from an upstair window.

Pours Gas in Fire.

The explosion occurred late yesterday when Bertha, the eldest [illegible] is said to have poured gasoline on the fire, mistaking it for coal oil. The frame dwelling was [illegible] burst into flames and despite heroic rescue efforts of Joseph and Bertha, the four perished in the flames.

Bertha sacrificed her life in an effort to save her mother. Dashing up the stairs to the upper storey where her mother was in bed the girl attempted to drag her to safety only to be caught by the raging flames.

DISCUSS SLASH IN OCEAN RATES

Two British and U. S. Lines Strongly Opposed in Reduction Suggestions.

BEHIND CLOSED DOORS.

BRUSSELS, Mar. 30. (AP)—Representatives of the principal passenger steamship lines met here behind closed door at noon to-day to discuss reduction of passenger rates across the Atlantic.

The agenda of the conference was closely guarded but it was known that certain lines were prepared to press for a considerable slash in fares with a view to increasing travel during the coming summer tourist season.

The alignment in favor of reduction was understood to include the two British and the United States lines while a reduction was opposed by the Canadian Pacific, the German, the Cunard, the French Danish and Swedish lines and the Italian group.

These latter, in opposition, contended a cut in rates would result only in losses of revenue without increasing the number of passengers carried.

Other questions of mutual interest were also up for discussion at the meeting. W. H. Roper, director of the North Atlantic conferences offices here said, however, that no great difficulties were expected to arise. It was considered possible that an official communique would be issued at the conclusion of the conference, announcing its decisions.

Five mayors, including a railway signalman, a depot manager, two freight handlers and a former cooper-shop plate maker, were honored guests at a dinner given recently at Derby, England, by a railway executive.

DEATH ENGINE HAD NO LIGHT

NO BLAME ATTACHED.

BELLEVILLE, March 30. — At Coroner Dr. R. W Tennent's inquest last night on Everett Mastin, Dorothy Darlington, Renotta Storr and Miles Cumming, all of Point Anne, the jury returned a verdict of death due to injuries received when passenger train Number 18 west-bound, struck their automobile also travelling west at the Gibson's Crossing. No blame was attached to the fireman or the engineer of the train.

The jury strongly recommended that either a watchman or gates be placed at Gibson's Crossing.

James R. Byers, the fireman, affirmed that the lights of the engine had been turned on when the dusk fell, but that at Kingsford, 16 miles east of Belleville the headlight had gone out. He was sure of this, as he could see it in front of the engine until it went out.

Engineer Knew.

He insisted that the engineer had known of this, and had mentioned to Byers that the light was out. According to Byers the train had not been stopped to repair the headlight, as they had not time. He informed the jury that it would have been too dangerous for him to climb out on the running-board to repair the lamp as it was icy and covered with sleet.

On the train entering Belleville, Byers stated he had detected an odor of coal oil, as he thought. He was of the opinion at the time that it was just one of the spare cans of coal oil carried in the cab which had been upset.

He next saw sparks fly from the rear of the engine, but although he looked he could see nothing at first. When he finally saw part of the car under the wheels he told the engineer and the train was immediately stopped.

British Teachers Demand Former Pay

LONDON, Mar. 30.— With conference and resolution the British school teachers is heatedly demanding to have the pay cuts restored. The economy budget last September imposed a ten per cent. salary cut on the school teachers, who was further hit by the reduced exemption for income tax.

Now, with a balanced budget virtually certain, the teachers, male and female, are up in arms for the old scale. One speaker at the conference of the National Association of Schoolmasters, told of one school where two fully qualified schoolmasters were paid less than the caretaker, of another where the schoolmaster and caretaker were each paid about £15 a week.

Heavy Snowfall Is Boon To Farmers

TORONTO, March 30 (C.P.) — Heavy snow which marked arrival of Spring in Southern Ontario proved a boon to farmers, according to the weekly crop report issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. The snow, which was general throughout the Province, provided a welcome blanket for fields of grain, and aided completion of logging operations in some sections.

Brant County reports an advance in the price of butter, while cream prices moved higher in Glengarry and Haldimand counties. Egg prices dropped in Haldimand, however the report says.

Seeding operations, begun some weeks ago in Essex County, were resumed March 17 and succeeding days, but halted again by heavy snow March 21, the report indicates.

WHEAT REGULATIONS FAIL.

ATHENS, March 30 (C.P.) — Negotiations under way for the purchase of Canadian and United States wheat, it was announced today, were without definite result. Negotiations with Argentina have broken down.

Canada has no commercial treaty with Greece so any wheat from there would be subject to a 10 per cent. import duty.

JAPANESE DRIVE CHINESE ARMY BACK TO LINES

Skirmishes Punctuate Lull in Peace Parleys Slated to Reopen Thursday.

BREACH WIDENS.

Reports Show 61 Civilians Killed, 216 Wounded in Settlement During Fighting.

(By Morris J. Harris A.P. Staff Correspondent.)

SHANGHAI, March 30. — A skirmish between Japanese and Chinese forces at Chiawangmiao took place to-day, according to Japanese military authorities, punctuating a lull in the peace parleys which are slated to be resumed again to-morrow.

The Japanese said the Chinese were driven to the south side of Soochow Creek, on the north side of which they were reported last week to have been digging trenches and erecting defences. The Japanese notified British authorities then that drastic measures might have to be taken to force the Chinese to observe the limits fixed in General Uyeda's ultimatum of last February.

The Japanese peace negotiators, meanwhile, charged the parleys were being delayed because the Chinese delegates lacked responsibility and authority to make decisions, and the Chinese countered with a charge that the Japanese were trying to break up the conference.

Chinese officials expressed strong resentment against the tactics of the Japanese, charging they were trying to throw responsibility for the deadlock on the Chinese.

Parley to Collapse.

The Chinese press featured reports that the peace conference was doomed to collapse. Other observers also expressed the belief that the breach between the negotiators was widening.

Five Japanese soldiers were wounded when two motor trucks on the way to the front lines struck submerged mines near Kating. The Japanese said the Chinese honeycombed a wide area in that section with explosives before they retreated.

The municipal police of Shanghai reported 61 civilians were killed and 216 wounded in the International Settlement during the period of hostilities. Their survey showed, they said, that 314 projectiles fell within the settlement during the fighting, damaging 262 buildings. Approximately 486,000 persons were deprived of the means of subsistence, they said, due to the shutting down of industries in the settlement during the fighting.

Bruening Promises Delegate For Parley

BERLIN, March 30 (A.P.) — Chancellor Heinrich Bruening advised Ramsay MacDonald, Prime Minister of Great Britain to-day that he would not go to London for the proposed four-power conference, but that he had delegated Under-Secretary Bernhard Von Buelow to take his place.

The decision of Premier Andre Tardieu of France to see Mr. MacDonald before the conference, and then return to Paris without awaiting its opening, caused both Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Dino Grandi of Italy to decide their presence at London was not necessary, a Foreign Office spokesman said.

FIRST READING IS GIVEN BILL

gerites switching their allegiances. In the main division of the day—on the Government resolution—all but three of the third party group joined with the Liberals in opposition.

With dawn breaking, the House adjourned until this afternoon, when the Government bill will be up for second reading.

Crowded galleries sat through the entire day and when adjournment came in the early hours of the morning nearly as many women as men lined the balconies.

Liberals laid down a concerted attack on the unemployment relief proposals during the day. Their arguments were crystallized by Ernest Lapointe, former Minister of Justice, who claimed the ministry, in seeking to extend the "blank cheque legislation" was divorcing Parliament of its rights and prerogatives. Under the terms of the relief measure, the Government could spend as much money as it chose, pass orders-in-council without limit, amend or suspend statutes—all while Parliament was in session.

Closes Debate

John Hackett, Cons., Stanstead, in closing the debate, said the constitutional opposition to the bill with "without substance and without sincerity." The Government, faced with extraordinary conditions, was seeking to alleviate suffering and distress in the best way possible, and the Liberals, in opposing the measure were "standing between those in want and the Government who is attempting to help them."

Feelings ran high toward the close of the long day. When division bells rang for the vote on the resolution, the House broke into singing. "Hail! Hail! The Gang's All Here"; "It's a Long, Long Trail" were intermixed with "Alouette" from the French-Canadians. Then the House moved into committee stage to consider details of the resolution and close harmony ceased. Points of order and appeals to the chairman flew thick and fast as tempers broke from the long sitting. Interruptions and cross-chamber barbs flew backward and forward.

Order was regained by R. B. Hanson, Cons., York-Sunbury, the acting chairman, retracing a step. Liberals contended he had been too hasty in passing without division the Guthrie motion changing the terminology of the resolution. The vote then was taken, resulting in the motion passing. The resolution was passed through committee, the bill introduced and read a first time and the House rose after the longest day's deliberations in some years.

Her Backache Relieved in a Very Short Time

Says Ontario Lady After Using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. W. Hineman Strongly Recommends Them to All Kidney Sufferers

Picton, Ont., March 30 (Special).—"Dodd's Kidney Pills regulated my Kidneys and relieved my backache in a short time," writes Mrs. W. Hineman, R.R. No. 9, this place. "They made me feel more like myself. I recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to anyone that wishes to get relief from backache."

Do you realize what an important part your Kidneys play in your bodily health and length of life? To be well the Kidneys must thoroughly cleanse the blood of all poisonous waste. Sluggish Kidneys permit waste impurities to remain in the blood, causing a slowing up of the system. One is apt to feel tired and drowsy — to have dull, aching back and annoying headaches and dizzy spells.

Assist the Kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills. They stimulate the Kidneys and assist in removing the poisons of bodily waste. Dodd's Kidney Pills are endorsed from coast to coast.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Sourness, Gas and Pain. How to Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestion aids and instead get from any druggist some Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful of powder or four tablets in water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

LIFE AND WORKS OF DVORAK IS TOLD

Forms Theme of Y.P.L. Program—"Fickle" Fortune" to be Staged April 7.

CAMPBELLFORD, March 30 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent). — The life and works of Dvorak, Bohemian musician and composer, formed the central theme of the program staged by the Young People's League of St. John's United Church, Campbellford, on Monday evening. A very large attendance was featured, the program being sponsored by the Social and Literary Committee under the convenorship of Elmer Jordan.

The life and works of this great composer was given by Miss Jordan, who very ably handled her subject and gave some splendid word pictures of this world-renowned master of harmony. Assisting with the portrayal, Miss Emma Meiklejohn rendered piano selections of Dvorak and Elmer Jordan sang several of the master compositions.

A very humorous feature of the evening was the reading of six stump speeches, which were debated upon and created a great deal of diversion. The speakers with their subjects were: Miss Dorothy Kingston, "Which are the worst gossips, men or women?"; Elva Mowatt, "The best month of the year"; Miss Muriel Kingston, "The significance of Good Friday, Easter Day and Easter Monday"; Everett Fairman, "The young people of to-day are better than the young people of twenty-five years ago"; Vern Abernethy, "How to make a raft," and Earl Fairman, "Do girls take advantage of Leap Year?"

The president, Earl Fairman, occupied the chair, the prayers being led by Mrs. R. C. Tait.

On Thursday, April 7, the League will sponsor a play which will be produced by the Roseneath Dramatic Society, entitled "Fickle Fortune." This is an up-to-date three-act play which received a great ovation when produced at Baltimore and other places. It is under the direction of Mrs. Albert Tucker.

GRAND JURY RETURNS BILL

defence will be an endeavor to show that Greenshields was insane on Friday morning, November 13, when he clubbed his two sons Billy, five, and Walter, ten, as they were sleeping in their bed some time after Mrs. Greenshields left home to go to work in the Weston Shoe Factory. The father then drank a quantity of iodine which had a sickening instead of a fatal effect.

About 11 a.m. the unnatural crime was discovered, and when Mrs. Greenshields was called home, the younger boy was beyond medical help, and Walter was so grievously injured about the head that his recovery was regarded as extremely doubtful by Dr. W. F. Loucks, the coroner.

At the inquest, it was recalled that Mr. Greenshields, who is an ex-service man, had been injured near Trenton last summer when struck by an automobile while on his way to begin work on a new job. A head wound as the result of that accident is believed to have affected his mind, and it was stated that prior to his alleged fatal aberration he was deeply despondent and melancholy.

In the months that have passed since that ill-omened November day, the older boy, Walter, has apparently fully regained his health. He was present with his mother in the Court Room yesterday, unnoticed as one of the central figures of the tragedy that rent his home except by the Campbellford friends who have unfailingly assisted the family in their continuing need of active sympathy.

The Address to the Jury.

In addressing the Grand Jury, Mr. Justice Raney said in part: "The jury system brings into the administration of justice the saving grace of common sense. There is always a great deal of it in the lawyers who plead the cases and in the judges who try cases, but perhaps their views of justice may be sometimes professional, and it is a good thing to have an infusion of the reasonable point of view of the average citizen into the administration of the law. That is the theory back of the jury session. Your main duty is formal. Already the case that is to come before you has been before an experienced magistrate, who has had the assistance of the Crown Attorney for these counties. They reached the conclusion that this man should be put on his trial. The Grand Jury is asked to review the evidence for the prosecution so as to ensure that no man shall be put on trial unless there is reasonable ground for doing so.

Some people think there is too much caution in this procedure, but I do not purpose discussing that with you to-day. The Grand Jury hears the evidence for the prosecution, and if you think the defence ought to be heard, then the jury confirms what the magistrate has already done. If you throw out the bill, you cannot do so capriciously, because you are bound by your oath. In this case a father killed his son. As I am informed, there is no denial by the defence. The defence will be that the father was insane in a degree I shall mention to you. The statute says that anyone is presumed to be sane at the time of committing an act until proof to the contrary is brought in."

His Lordship said the Grand Jury was not called upon to consider the question of insanity. If they brought in a true bill, a section of the Criminal Code provided that if the accused was found to be insane, the petit jury would be required to determine specifically whether the man was insane at the time he committed the offence. In that case the Court would order him to be sent to an asylum for the criminally insane for life or until he recovered his health.

The Cellar "Hostel."

His Lordship suggested that in their inspection of public buildings the Grand Jury should visit the cellar lock-up in the Town Hall.

"This building is a very imposing one to look at," he continued. "but it is too bad its interior does not coincide with the exterior. Perhaps that is a matter for the County Council.

"The place I saw to-day, I think, is called the lock-up for the people of Cobourg. "Go and look at it for yourselves. No later than Friday of last week the Mayor of Cobourg is reported to have said to a newspaper reporter, 'accommodation for hoboes should not be too attractive, or comfortable. We prefer that they pass on, and not spend the night here at all.

The word 'hoboes' is unfortunate. It does not describe many of the men who are walking the streets to-day. Where would these men 'pass on' to, if the towns do not provide them with resting-places? True, they might go to barns or farm homes and probably frighten the inmates.

Either it should be a proper place or there should be no place at all.

"The Chief of Police in this newspaper report says, 'Who dirties the place? It is often cleaned,' and he states that last year 3,185 men passed the night in this lock-up, and up to recently 1,093 men have slept there this year. Sometimes 20 men have slept there in one night, and the average has been about a dozen. The Chief says the place is not a prison. The men come and go until 11 p.m. and then are locked up until 6 a.m. If, as a Jury, you think this is not a proper place to lock human beings in, you should say so. If you think it approaches the designation of a public nuisance, I think you ought to say so."

His Lordship concluded his remarks with the suggestion that the Grand Jury might recommend to the municipal authorities suitable improvements before the next sittings of the Court.

"It is said there is no hurry now because winter is nearly over. This place I have mentioned should be put in proper condition for next winter. Probably we shall still have decent citizens forced to walk the streets."

In a recent month 1,507,503 bunches of bananas were shipped from Honduras.

A NEW TAX ON TRANSPORT TRUCKS.

The Minister of Highways has announced a new sur tax on common carrier trucks of fifty per cent. where these are operated on provincial highways and of twenty-five per cent. when running only on county roads.

This fresh levy has been put into effect by order-in-Council which is a little difficult to understand in view of the fact that the House has been in session and the increase could have been put through in the usual way.

It is expected to produce a yearly revenue of $150,000.

Public commercial trucks or common carriers do not comprise as large a portion of the total truck registration as a good many people think; in fact, according to recent figures, they constitute only four per cent. of the total, and the increase now announced is likely to be attacked on the ground that it will be an invidious discrimination against the small merchant and business man who of necessity must hire his transportation, and that it will favor the larger firms which have sufficient traffic to warrant them owning their own vehicles.

FLYING PROGRESSES.

According to figures just made public by the United States Department of Commerce, commercial aviation in that country has been making steady progress and the development has been on safe lines.

Over half a million passengers were carried last year by aircraft operated on United States schedule lines—the exact total, 522,345 passengers, represented an increase of 100,000 over the number carried during the previous year.

There was also a substantial increase in the number of miles flown, the total mileage being 47,-396,987, which was ten million miles more than in 1930.

That organized commercial flying has been made comparatively safe is shown by the fact that despite the more than half million passengers carried and the large number of miles flown, only seventeen passengers and seven pilots lost their lives.

Like the majority of automobile accidents, the majority of those fatal crack-ups were due to avoidable factors, so that the record of the aviation companies during 1931 must be regarded as convincing proof of the safety of commercial flying.

It seems reasonable to suppose that this form of transportation is but in its infancy, and that before long the record of 522,345 passengers carried and 47,-396,987 miles flown will be regarded as a trifling performance.

THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS.

The fact that yesterday was the fiftieth anniversary of the Knights of Columbus serves to call attention to the progress made by this fraternal organization since it was first launched half a century ago, and to the very fine record of social service work its members have achieved.

The organization was started on March 29, 1882, by Rev. Father Michael J. McGivney, curate of St. Mary's Church in New Haven, Conn., who felt that a great need existed for a fraternal society which men of the Roman Catholic faith might join.

In the fifty years that have elapsed the order has spread all over the North American Continent and now comprises a membership of 600,000.

Its work includes charitable, social, educational and religious activities, and the organization has become a power for good in every community in which it is located. Its services during the World War, through the medium of the Catholic army huts, are gratefully remembered, and the assistance its various ranches have given to worth-while community efforts and in the succoring of distress are generally appreciated.

It is worthy of note that the Knights of Columbus was the first of the large fraternals with headquarters in the United States to adopt completely a scientific form of insurance.

This began in 1901 when there were 32,000 insured members. To-day the amount of insurance in force is almost $300,000,000, and more than $35,000,000 has been paid by the order in death benefits to the beneficiaries of insured members.

SPLITTING HAIRS.

The Toronto Telegram quotes The Examiner's editorial contrasting the readiness of Mr. Ferguson to return to Canada to give evidence in regard to the Hayden charge with the unwillingness of the Ontario Government to face a thorough inquiry into Hydro transactions, and then adds:

"What seems to have escaped The Examiner's attention is the fact that Mr. Ferguson's determination to face examination was prompted by the fact that a charge had been made when Senator Haydon, in an alleged quoting of R. O. Sweezey, said that Mr. Ferguson had demanded $200,000 for the party funds before the Beauharnois contract would be signed. That charge Mr. Ferguson is ready to answer. Premier Henry will do doubt be equally ready to see that Hydro is required to answer any charge that may be made that the purchase of power from Beauharnois was influenced by the payment of money by Beauharnois. So far no such charge has been made."

Surely the Telegram is splitting hairs.

There may have been no definite charge in regard to the Beauharnois contract, but most certainly the cloud of suspicion that surrounds the whole transaction should be dissipated in the interest of the Hydro enterprise.

The situation is that John Aird, Jr., was paid $125,000 by R. O. Sweezey, president of Beauharnois, and that Aird has sworn that the money was paid him in connection with the signing of the Beauharnois contract by the Ontario Hydro Commission, while Sweezey, on the other hand, testified that this payment was for the campaign funds of the Ontario Government.

In either case there is surely ground for a rigid investigation, and The Examiner is convinced that were Mr. Ferguson still Premier of Ontario he would long since have sensed the anxiety of the public over this affair and would have taken steps to clear up the whole transaction.

ALBERTA COAL FOR MINING DISTRICTS.

(From Canadian Mining Journal)

There is a strong possibility that in the near future Alberta coal will be a very important factor in not only the domestic requirements of Northern Ontario which it is, as a matter of fact, at the present time, but in the industrial field as well. If Alberta succeeds in its efforts to have a $5.00 freight rate established on shipments of coal to Ontario points, those who have studied the situation predict that the domestic market in the Northern Ontario mining areas will become 100 per cent. Canadian, while, in addition to this, several hundred thousand tons of Alberta's bituminous coal will be used in the mining camps and pulp and paper manufacturing centres.

The freight rate on coal from Alberta to any part of Ontario is now $6.75 per ton. On this rate Alberta domestic coal is retailed in Ontario at prices ranging from $13.50 to $14.50 per ton. In the southern sections of the Province—Old Ontario—this retail price is from $1.00 to $2.00 below the best grade of anthracite, but is $2.00 to $2.50 per ton dearer than coke and pocohontas coal, two so-called substitute fuels which have been making tremendous inroads on the anthracite markets for some years past.

In Kirkland Lake, Timmins and other mining districts in the northern part of the Province, Alberta coal for domestic purposes has a better chance. It costs no more laid down at Haileybury and Timmins in the north than it does at Brockville, Woodstock or other points in the south. On the other hand, anthracite, coke and pocohontas coal costs considerably more laid down in Ontario's mining area than it does at points in Old Ontario. This is due to the extra rail haul on American coal. It is for this reason that Alberta domestic coal is finding a very good market even under present freight rates in the mining towns of the north.

There has never been any attempt made to market Alberta's bituminous coal in Ontario. The reason is quite apparent. As has been pointed out, the freight rate on coal of any kind from Alberta to Ontario is $6.75 per ton. American bituminous coal delivered to industrial centres of Ontario such as Toronto, Hamilton, Oshawa and scores of other cities can be laid down at a price equal to the freight rate alone on coal from Alberta. However, the same ratio in the increased price of coal for domestic purposes that prevails in regard to delivery of American domestic coals to points in Northern Ontario as compared to delivery at points in Old Ontario, prevails in respect of bituminous coal. In other words, imported bituminous coals cost the consumer in certain sections of Northern Ontario—those areas considerably distant from Great Lake ports—several dollars per ton more than it is costing the consumer in Toronto, Brantford and other Southern Ontario centres.

As a matter of fact, in the mining and pulp industries of Northern Ontario there are several hundred thousand tons of steam coal being used annually. This is imported from the United States. The price of this bituminous coal laid down at the mines and paper plants is now such that if the coal industry of Alberta is successful in its fight for a $5.00 freight rate, a very large market for the product of Alberta's bituminous coal mines will follow. This is a line of business that was not anticipated in the early days of the fight for a special freight rate on Alberta coal. Conditions have changed somewhat during the past year or two. The application of the dumping act as applied to American coals together with the duty on bituminous coal has now brought the prices of certain grades of the latter up to a point where possibilities of a very interesting nature, in so far as Alberta bituminous coals are concerned, present themselves.

A $5.00 freight rate on coal from Alberta appears to warrant the opinion that there can be immediately developed a market for at least one million tons a year for domestic coals in Ontario, including practically a 100 per cent. market in the Northern Ontario mining area; a market for from two hundred to three hundred thousand tons of bituminous coal to the mines and paper-making plants of Northern Ontario.

It is not surprising that Alberta is carrying on the fight for a $5.00 freight rate. If the rate is secured, it will be a real step towards a national fuel policy. It will mean the retaining in Canada of millions of dollars that otherwise would be going across the line to American labor; it will mean more steady employment to Canadian coal miners, railwaymen, and labor generally, with an increased purchasing power for these Canadians which will start the wheels of industry in many other lines humming.

It is understood the hearing of the Alberta coal freight rates case will be heard by the Dominion Railway Board within the next few months.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

If Uncle Sam's financial troubles continue to multiply there will be no need of a quota law to keep people out of the United States.

With the federal budget in the offing, Canadian taxpayers would be well advised to brace themselves for a shock.

Rudy Vallee has been asked to write a song to drive away depression. If he really wants to help he should be asked not to sing it himself.

If the American Congress could find an effective way of taxing racketeers its task of balancing the budget would be a sinecure.

114 BILLS GIVEN ROYAL ASSENT

Of 148 Introduced, 12 Were Withdrawn, 7 Killed, 14 Amalgamated, 1 Lapsed.

186 LAST YEAR.

TORONTO, March 30 (C.P.) — The third session of the 18th Legislative Assembly of Ontario formally ended its labors yesterday. Rt. Hon. Sir William Mulock, 88-year-old Chief Justice and Administrator of the Province, gave royal assent to 114 Bills which the Legislature had passed, and the formal prorogation followed immediately.

Beautifully-gowned women occupied the floor of the House as the final ceremony took place. The military escort which featured the opening was absent and the ceremony was brief. Escorted by Col. W. P. Mulock, his grandson, and Col. William Rhoades, his aide-de-camp, the administrator entered the chamber accompanied by Premier George S. Henry. He took the throne, vacated for the time being by the Speaker, Hon. T. A. Kidd of Kingston, and the list of bills awaiting royal assent were read to him.

114 Become Law.

In His Majesty's name the Right Honorable Administrator doth assent to these bills, said the Clerk of the House, and 114 measures became law.

Of the 148 bills introduced during the session just ended, 12 were withdrawn, 7 were killed in House or committee, 14 were amalgamated and one lapsed. The latter is a formal measure which declares the independence of Parliament, and advances no further than first reading.

Last year 186 bills were introduced, 40 more than this session. This year 64 private bills, 23 public bills and 59 Government bills were placed on the order paper during the session.

PLACE SURTAX UPON TRUCKS

Trucks Using Highways as Common Carriers to be Taxed Heavier.

ORDER-IN-COUNCIL.

TORONTO, March 29 (C.P.). — A further surtax on common carrier vehicles using King's Highway was announced by Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Minister of Highways, after approval was given to the tax by Order-in-Council. The tax is expected to net about $150,000, the licenses on the common carriers being renewable on April 1, when the tax comes into force.

In explaining the new tax, Hon. Mr. Macaulay stated it applies to transport companies that are carrying other goods, and does not apply to a company operating their own vehicles and carrying their own goods. Under the tax, they are charged a surtax of 50 per cent. of the amount of fee, which is based on a tonnage scale. For instance if a ten-ton truck pays a fee of $135, the surtax will be $67.50.

For common carriers using the county roads, the surtax is 25 per cent. of the fee.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE REVIEWS

TORONTO PRODUCE

Prices to country shippers for ungraded eggs were steady yesterday, with the declines of Monday, and, according to local wholesalers, there was a fair movement to the trade. It was the opinion of several dealers that storing would start soon, as prices were very favorable for the purpose. Brokers were content to quote unchanged levels yesterday, but reported trade quiet.

Country shippers were quoted 14c for extras, 12c for firsts, and 10c for seconds, delivered, ungraded, cases returned. Retailers were offered supplies at 21c for extras in cartons, 19c for extras loose, 17c for firsts loose, and 15c for seconds loose. Brokers offered extras at 16c, firsts at 14c, and seconds at 13c, graded, and in free, used cases.

Butter

Trade in butter was quiet, but not weak, and prices were about the same as on Monday. Local brokers offered regraded quality at 27c to 27½c and found it practically impossible to make sales. Tehere were small supplies of fresh butter offered also.

Cheese

Conditions on the cheese market were no different than on Monday. Prices were 11½c to 11¾c for new large, 11¾c to 12c for twins, and 12c to 12¼c for triplets. Prices to retailers were steady at 13c for new large, 13¼c for twins, 13½c for triplets, and 15½c for stiltons.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Mar. 30. — Butter and egg prices eased on the produce and dairy market here yesterday, while cheese and potato quotations remained unchanged.

No. 1 butter, in carlots or broken lots, declined a quarter to a half cent at 27 cents a pound, as demand continued quiet and indications of the seasonal pick-up in butter make were in evidence. To retailers solids at 28 cents and prints at 29 cents a pound were both firm. Receipts were 530 boxes.

Fresh graded Ontario eggs, in carlots or broken lots, lost a cent, extras becoming 18 cents, firsts 16 cents and seconds 15 cents a dozen. Small quantities of British Columbia eggs were a cent above the Ontarios. Quotations to retailers were steady and receipts totalled 3,866 cases.

Current cheese held unchanged at 10½c to 11c, as did summer make at 12c to 12½c a pound. Receipts were 29 boxes.

The potato market ruled firm, quotations of broken lots per 80-pound bag being 30c to 40c for Quebec Whites and 45c to 50c for Quebec and New Brunswick Green Mountains. Carlot prices were 10c a bag cheaper than the broken lot levels.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, March 30.—Definite reports of serious damage to Kansas, Oklahoma and Nebraska crops owing to widespread storms of dust carried grain markets strongly upward late yesterday.

Decrees by the Government of Greece, which were taken to be preliminary to a credit purchase of 7,000,000 bushels of United States Farm Board wheat, were a further impetus to price gains. Word that mill and elevator stocks of domestic wheat were much smaller than at this time last year, as well as the year previous, came too late to be an immediate market factor.

Wheat closed firm at the day's top level, ⅝ to 1¼c above yesterday's finish; corn, ⅝ to ¾c up; oats, ¼ to ⅝c advanced, and provisions varying from 5c decline to a rise of 2c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, March 30. — Firming on adverse crop reports from Kansas, wheat prices advanced in the closing minutes of the grain market here yesterday to close ⅞c to 1⅛c higher. Trading, mostly of a local character, was active throughout the session.

Finishing at 61⅛c. May future was at an even cent advance, July was 1c to ⅞c up at 63 cents, and October 1⅛c to 1c at 65⅛c.

The market earlier in the session had been erratic, but advices from Kansas reporting heavy soil drifting, coupled with a strong close at Liverpool, steadied prices. Conditions in Kansas are said to be the worst in years, with ditches being filled with drifting soil.

Export sales of wheat were comparatively light, actual amounts not being available.

No improvement in cash grains was in evidence as trading continued light and spreads again closing unchanged. Coarse grains also were indifferent, a small injury for rye being the only feature.

DISTRICT NURSE by Faith Baldwin

Presently she went into a 'phone booth and called her home. Nancy, if only Nancy would answer. Waiting, she looked at her wrist watch. No, she'd be asleep. Nancy, please answer, please.

"Ring them again, operator," she said sharply, "I know some one's at home."

Nancy's voice came to her, thick and petulant with drowsiness. Ellen asked, "Nancy, where's mother?"

"For crying out loud!" said Nancy. "What's happened? She went out for a walk I guess, with Mrs. Lenz. I heard 'em go. What's up?"

The drowsiness was clearing from her voice. She listened while Ellen talked, briefly, rapidly. No time to break things gently. Just keep it from her mother that was all.

Nancy said, in a dull voice, a voice that was flat and oddly bruised sounding, "I'll get dressed and go right over. I'll say, ch anything. Leave a note. Mrs. Lenz will stay with mother, or Mrs. Meader. Get home as soon as you can."

"No, I'll go to the hospital," Ellen told her, "at the noon hour. Meet me there, if you can."

She hung up and went about her work. Efficient, unsentimental, sympathetic, capable. She couldn't think, but her hands thought for her. She gave a bed bath. She washed hot faces and sticky hands. She telephoned doctors. She did her work because it had to be done.

At the noon hour she telephoned in her reports and went to the hospital. They knew her there. There was no difficulty—about anything. Nancy was there, had been there for some time. Ellen saw Pete in the barren waiting room. He had aged, she thought. He said, "She's all right. You can take her home to-morrow." He added, "You are going to take her home, aren't you?"

Ellen said, "What else? Haven't we been waiting—eight years? Pete, did she know you?"

"She knew me."

"What did she say?"

"Nothing. She turned her face to the wall," said Pete, "and cried."

After a long moment, he said "I ought to hate her."

"You?" asked Ellen. She looked at him gravely, the gray eyes sombre. "You?"

He remembered some of the things he'd done—after Coral had gone. He thought back, eight years, eight crowded years. He defended himself as a child might . . "Her fault."

"You believe that?" asked Ellen, scornfully.

She left him and went to the ward he had designated. The long ward with the white beds and the little tables, and the charge nurse at the desk. A good friend of hers, the stocky, sturdy Mannering. If Mannering didn't speak of it. She merely nodded and said, "She's all right, Adams. Don't worry."

So she did know something. Not that it mattered.

There was a white curtain about the bed. Nancy was sitting on the straight chair. She looked tired to death. Coral was asleep.

"She's been sleeping," said Nancy, "ever since I came, almost. She's been awfully sick, they told me. You know."

Ellen knew.

"I'll stay. Go out and get something to eat. I'll stay until my hour's up. Come back if you can. Can you stick it out? I'll tell mother to-night. Nancy did she know you?"

"Nancy's pretty mouth shook. She put her hands to the curly cap of dark hair. Her head hurt her: it wasn't just a headache.

"Of course she knew me," she told Ellen. She said, "Nancy? Grown up." She began to cry. Pete's been here a dozen times. She always cries when she sees him—she——"

"Run along," said Ellen, "and get hold of yourself somehow."

She sat down presently on the chair, waited, her strong finger on the pulse beating in the too thin wrist. A good pulse, rapid perhaps, but good in tone and quality. Presently Coral opened her eyes. Such very blue eyes. The lashes, broken short with mascara, were heavy. She said, "Nancy?" She said, "It isn't Nancy . . it's Ellen." She tried to sit up. Ellen eased her back on the pillow. "Take it easy, Coral," she said, her tone perfectly matter of fact.

"Does mother know . . ?" whispered Coral.

"No. . . You'll come home tomorrow. We'll say you've been ill, in the hospital. I'll tell her. You're not to worry."

"Tell Pete, please—stay away——" said Coral.

Nothing astonished her. She was going home. She was too weak and sickened to ask questions. She'd leave it to Ellen—to Ellen. Once, before she slept again she raised the incredible eyes—she said, and tried to smile, "What you made up for, Ellen?" and indicated the uniform. Then she slept.

Nancy came back and Ellen went out, to get her calls, to do the rest of her work. The afternoon was light enough. She was able to be back at the hospital, quite early. "What about mother?" she asked Nancy.

"I phoned Mrs. Meader to tell her that one of the girls was sick and had no one and I'd gone to the Y.W. to see what I could do." She was drooping with weariness.

"Go home and go to bed, until time to get to work," Ellen ordered her. "I'll see to all this."

They were talking in the corridor. Then Ellen went back to the ward.

"All right, Coral?"

"So much better, I——"

"Don't try to talk. Rest. You'll be taken care of here, to-night. To-morrow, we'll bring you home."

To-morrow, she thought, my vacation starts. A lucky break. It all fits in.

"Sleep, Coral."

She could sleep. She could eat a little, a very little. Pete, his young face set and old under his sandy hair, spoke with the charge nurse. "Go easy," said Pete. Half starved. A malnutrition case, if ever I saw one."

It had all been fixed up. The paragraph in the papers wouldn't amount to a hill of beans. People wouldn't even notice it. So many suicides anyway. Suicides, attempted or otherwise, weren't news, unless they concerned well-known people, brokers jumping out of windows, or men who took the leap from bridges and made their going a sensational one. A girl who took a room for the night and turned on the gas—that wasn't news, was it? Just a commonplace, an everyday commonplace.

INSTALMENT 13.

"She won't talk to me," Pete said to Ellen.

"Later," said Ellen. "We'll take her home to-morrow. You'll signher out, Pete?"

"Sure ——"

Hands in pockets, very hard-boiled. He'd given Coral's name. The stage name—Coral Carmen. The name he had hated. It had been bitter on his tongue.

To-morrow, they'd sign Cora Carmen out.

Ellen said, "You'll see she's looked after to-night?"

"Run along," he said. "I'll look after her."

Afterwards he wondered if it hadn't been a vow.

She said, "To-morrow I start my vacation. I'll come and get her. She—she hasn't talked much, but I think she's glad."

She went back alone to the bed and slipped into the tiny space. The curtains were still drawn. There were other women in the ward. Some, indescribable.

"You're going . . ?"

Coral clutched at her, with her hot thin hands. She said, "I—Oh, Ellen, I never meant you to find me. I came back, the way a dog crawls back, I suppose. I thought maybe I'd see you—and mother and father—and Nancy. From a distance. I didn't mean you to know. There was nothing on me, you see; I couldn't have been identified." She grasped a little for breath; she said, "I've always been a flop—I couldn't even kill myself—properly."

The bright tears ran down Ellen's uncontrolled face. Her eyes remained open—wide. She kept her voice steady. It was as if some one else wept. She said, "You're not to think about anything. You're coming home."

"I couldn't try it again. I haven't," said Coral bitterly, "the guts. I was afraid, Ellen, when I lay down on the bed. Afraid, I tell you. No, I couldn't do it again. Will they take me in at home?" she asked. And she added, "I haven't any fight left.

No. No fight left. Nothing left with which to fight.

Ellen said, "Go to sleep, Coral. I'll come for you to-morrow."

Then she went home.

Coral didn't know that their father had died. She'd have to know. I'll have to tell her, thought Ellen. Her mother must be told something. Yes, what she had agreed with Nancy was as good as anything else. Coral had come home. On the way home she had been taken ill. What . . .? Flu. Flu was as good as anything. High temperature, delirium. She'd been taken to the hospital, unable to tell them who she was. That was the story. It had to be.

She reached the apartment. Walking up the short flight of the stoop she had thought she couldn't, possibly, go a step further, her mother met her at the door.

"Nancy," said her mother indignantly, "has been gone most of the day. Some one sick, she said, a girl she knows. As if she didn't need her sleep. She'll be sick next. Mrs. Meader," her mother went on, "was kind enough to stay until Nancy came home. I declare I've been so worried."

Ellen sat down, tossing her hat on the table. She put her fingers through her hair. Her scalp hurt. She ached all over.

Her mother said, "Nancy's sleeping. . ."

"I'll get supper," said Ellen. She rose and dragged herself into the kitchen. Nancy, before she had gone to bed, had made gestures toward getting things together.

"That Mr. Bartlett called a few minutes ago," said Mrs. Adams. "I answered."

She sniffed audibly. Ellen came back from her puzzled and aching thoughts with a start. Frank! A different world. A person she hardly knew. Yet some one she loved. A warmth came over her, she moved about more lightly, she was freer, she could think more easily. For hours, she'd not thought of Frank. Now, thinking of him was, somehow, comfort. "He said," Mrs. Adams told her, "that he'd call again . . ."

He did so, when supper was on the table. Ellen spoke to him, briefly. No, impossible to see him to-night. She'd talk to him, say to-morrow. She hung up on his exclamation of disappointment cutting him short, "I have to run," she said. . . "Call me to-morrow then?" . . . Bye . . ."

Supper was over. The most difficult twenty minutes she had ever endured. She carried the dishes to the kitchen. She came back and sat down on the hassock at her mother's feet. She covered both small hands with her own. She was afraid. Yet joy, joy wouldn't kill. Joy would do almost anything; it would drive you temporarily insane, but it wouldn't kill.

Man Of Many Nations Unwanted By Any

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., March 30 (C.P.). — The Examiner says Harry Stevenson, 55, born under the German flag, but a veteran of the British, French, and American Armies, is threatened with deportation

The newspaper says authorities found when Stevenson applied for final citizenship papers he had no right to be in this country, but British, German, and French officials had informed immigration chiefs Stevenson was not wanted in those three countries.

The newspaper quoted Stevenson's attorney saying the man was born in Alsace-Lorraine to a Canadian father and a Norwegian mother, and educated in Switzerland. Subsequently he was a French war flyer and a British intelligence officer. After the war he joined the United States Army Air Force.

His case has been submitted to Washington.

CARRIER STOCK REGISTERS GAIN

Yesterday's Declines Continue in Several Issues on Toronto Exchange.

GENERAL TONE IRREGULAR.

TORONTO, March 30 (C.P.) — Price changes were irregular on Toronto Stock Exchange this morning. Yesterday's decline continued in several issues but in other recovery carried the price up above that at the close last night.

Bell Telephone, weak since the holiday, recovered nearly a point this morning, rising to 106½. C.P.R. was stronger at 16. Moore Corporation up ½ at 8. Smelters up 1 at 66, Nickel firmer at 8⅝, and Walkers old some better. On the other hand, Ford of Canada, one of the outstanding stabilizers on the market yesterday, eased ¼ point this morning, and Brazilian, Dominion Stores, the oils receded fractionally. Brazilian dipping below 12 at the opening and slipping off to 11⅝ in the second hour.

Mixed Trend Evident In Montreal Trading

MONTREAL, Mar. 30. (C.P.) — Stock prices moved sluggishly on the Montreal stock exchange this morning and at noon a mixed trend was in evidence. Leaders, however, were a little above yesterday's closing levels and the rest of the list was quiet and showed little change.

Canadian Pacific Railway advanced to 16 up ¼ from yesterday's close. Nickel was up ⅜ at 8⅜. Brazilian eased fractionally to 11⅝ down ¼. Leadership in the morning was invested in McColl-Frontenac with 400 shares changing hands at 9½, unchanged from the previous close.

Gurd lost ½ at 15 and Abitibi preferred advanced ¼ at 7¼. Lindsay eased ⅛ to 5 and Simmons Cigars was unchanged at 5. B.C. Power held unchanged at 24½.

SHOT AT PARTY IS FATAL.

MONTREAL.—Shot in the abdomen Sunday during a party to celebrate his own birthday, Andrew Pawlaws, 27, died here to-day. John Boyzcum, a member of the Montreal police force, was yesterday arraigned on a charge of attempted murder.

MUSIC PUBLISHER DIES.

NEW YORK.—Frederick B. Haviland, music publisher, who brought out "The Sidewalks of New York" among more than a score of other song successes of the past, died of pneumonia here yesterday. He was 64 years old.

STANDARD LIST IS IRREGULAR

Changes at Noon Show Losses and Gains About Evenly Matched.

NORANDA IN DEMAND.

TORONTO, March 30 (C.P.) — Lower-priced shares provided the bulk of activity on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange market in the forenoon to-day, the general list remaining quietly irregular. Changes at noon showed losses and gains about evenly divided, with the big part of the board unchanged.

Noranda was in renewed demand and moved up 40 to $17.70, while Nickel was slightly higher at $8.60. In the higher-priced gold group, Teck-Hughes and Lake Shore showed small advances at $4.65 and $29 respectively, but Dome fell 20 to $11.15. Eldorado was steady at $1.27.

Bidgood and Moffatt-Hall were the most active issues, but failed to move. Alexandria was still weak and off another cent to 4, and Macassa and Buffalo displayed small recessions. McLeod River recorded a fractional gain.

Acme Gas advanced a couple to 16 on favorable development in the oil industry across the border. Homestead slipped a little to 35. Other lower-priced oils were inactive.

SOCIAL STUDIES ARE NEGLECTED

Public Welfare Deputy Favors Adding Classes in Human Physiology.

"SICK LEAVE" SCORED.

TORONTO, March 30 (C.P.). — Absence of socialising influences from the curriculum of secondary schools was deplored by M. A. Sorsoliel, Deputy Minister of Public Welfare, in an address before the Supervising and Training Department of the Ontario Educational Association to-day.

Mr. Sorsoliel pleaded for an addition to secondary school subjects of social studies and he suggested first the addition of classes in human physiology to the study of biology. In such classes, he urged, adolescents could not be impressed with the dangers of promiscuity and would receive general sex education. He urged, too, a class in psychology where young men and women might study child reaction and thus learn something of the task of rearing and training children.

Addition of the study of sociology to the syllabus of secondary schools he maintained, would give youths a knowledge of the organization of society and impress them with their responsibilities. Finally Mr. Sorsoliel suggested occupational studies so that students might make an intelligent choice of their own occupation.

Scores Sick Leave

The present method of administrating "sick leave" among school teachers was scored by George W. Keith, Toronto, addressing the public school section. Under the existing regulations, he said, some teachers were given extended leaves while others were forced to suffer serious loss in salary through extended illness.

The Separate School trustees' section passed a resolution to-day in which it assured the provincial committee of its co-operation towards securing a larger share of corporation and public utilities taxation. The committee appealed to the trustees for support, but the resolutions committee explained the trustees could not see their way clear to taking corporate action. However, the committee was assured of the individual co-operation of the delegates.

Changes in the system under which rural people pay for secondary education were advocated by Dr. P. B. Proudfoot, speaking before the rural trustees' section. He said residents in some counties whose children could not reach secondary chools paid taxes for these schools.

J. E. Anderson, Perth, was elected president of the section.

Predict Amendment To Farm Relief Bill

OTTAWA, Mar. 30.—(C.P.)—An amendment to the government bill extending the Unemployment and Farm Relief Act until May 1, will probably be moved in the House of Commons on second reading of the measure. Just what it will cover has not been intimated, but presumably it will express the views of the Liberal Opposition, which put up such a fight on the resolution. Liberal members were in caucus for a short time early this afternoon.

Building permits in Kingston, Jamaica, are nearly equaly to those a year ago.

Lion Invades Dance, 700 Guests Leave; Fire Hose Goes in Action, Leo Leaves

CANNES, France, Mar. 30.—(AP)—British, Canadian and United States society folk kept their heads and helped to stem a panic at a restaurant here last night when a performing lion broke out of its cage.

Seven hundred guests began to stampede when the beast leaped clear upon the dancing floor. Clothing was torn, tables were upset and there were screams of fright.

The orchestra continued playing loudly for such of the guests as continued dancing. Meanwhile others of the patrons calmed their more frightened companions. A fire hose was turned on the lion and it was herded back to the cage.

Among those who assisted in restoring quiet were Lady Asquith, Count Salm, former husband of Millicent Rogers, Lord and Lady Fermoy, Mme. Paul Dubonnett, the former Jean Nash, Mrs. Elbert Soper, of Ottawa, Sir Geoffrey Archer, the big game hunter, and Lord Mountbatten.

Charge Farmer With Wife's Slaying

Charged with killing his wife wife with a razor, Bruce Robertson (1), college graduate, turned farmer, was taken into custody near Burford, Ont. Nurse Myrtle Tapley (5) watched Robertson drag his wife into the bedroom, and, thinking it was but a whimsical action, continued with her work while the crime was committed in the next room. She knew nothing of what had happened until the arrival of Dr. Oscar Powers, Burford, who came to attend Robertson, who was suffering with influenza. The Robertson children, shown from Left to Right in (2), are: Doreen, Thomas, Isobel and Arthur. Mrs. Robertson, the victim, is shown in (3) and the Robertson farmhouse on the fifth concession, Burford Township, in (4).

Market Closing On All Exchanges

WALL STREET

NEW YORK, March 30 (C.P.) — The Stock Market closed with a steady tone to-day, concluding a session in which leading shares generally made fractional fluctuations. Several electric power issues, including members of the bond and share group, were heavy, although their declines were ignored by rails and industrials. Beatrice Creamery, Goodyear Rubber and New York Tractions also met pressure, but U. S. Steel, American Telephone, American Can and International Telephone firmer moderately. Sales approximated 1,000,000 shares.

STANDARD EXCHANGE.

TORONTO, Mar. 30.— (C.P.) — Price changes were mixed on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange to-day. Volume was well up with that of the previous session, but price range was not so wide.

Noranda made a small gain, selling slightly above $17.30, its previous closing price. Miscellaneous penny stocks eased, including Alexandria, Bidgood and Moffatt Hall; McLeod made a small gain. In the more expensive section, Eldorado added a cent.

Golds were mixed, McIntyre featured the higher-priced golds, rising more than twenty-five cents. Hollinger added a nickel, but Dome lost about a quarter and Wright Hargreaves 4 cents. In the cheaper golds, Kirkland Lake and Sylvanite were higher, while Buffalo Ventures and Moss eased.

Oils were firm, but dull. Carnia sold at 15, up 4 cents, while Acme added more than a cent.

TORONTO EXCHANGE

TORONTO, March 30. —(CP)— Slow declines continued this afternoon on Toronto Stock Exchange, leaders finishing with fractional losses compared with last night.

C. P. R. Nickel, Brazilian, Pivotal issues which had shown advanced at one time or another during the morning, came down from their best. Bell Telephone at 106 still retained a small gain but C. P. R. went below 16 where it was unchanged and Nickel eased back to 8⅛, its previous closing.

Ford of Canada was soft all day and finished with a net loss of ⅝ at 14⅝. Dominion Stores and Loblaw each lost ¼ point, the former at 17½ and the latter at 10¼. Oils were irregular. B. A. Oil and Imperial were firm on end and International Pete and McColl Frontenac each down less than ½ point.

Walkers was firmer in the last hour, and old stock showing a small gain, though both the new common and preferred were down slightly below last night.

OBJECTIONS LAID BEFORE BENNETT

placed on our statute books an act prohibiting all exportation."

Expressed briefly, the objections are:

The cost would be enormous and the results problematical.

The proposed works would benefit neither Quebec, the Maritime Provinces nor British Columbia. The prairie provinces appear indifferent.

Why Sacrifice

Why should a sacrifice be made to benefit the middle western states in a country that practically closes its markets to Canada?

The deep waterways would entail ruinous competition to Canadian railways.

Enormous sums have been expended to provide outlets for western grain through Churchill and British Columbia ports. Is it the intention now to turn these shipments from such outlets?

National pride is opposed to the idea of United States financing the scheme. If it cannot be carried out by Canada alone, the project should not be considered further.

The turning over of 1,000,000 horsepower to Ontario as the result of expenditures by Canada as a whole in the scheme would be a "supreme injustice" Mr. Taschereau declared. "I have no hesitation in saying that the contribution by the whole of Canada and consequently, by Quebec and the other provinces, which are not interested, for the purpose of giving 1,000,000 horsepower to Ontario is a supreme injustice to us."

Former Boarder in Bowler Home Tells of Conversation With Deceased.

QUARRELED FOR YEARS.

TORONTO, Mar. 30.— (By the Canadian Press.)—A signed statement given to police by Michael J. Callahan, a former boarder at the Bowler home, has thrown new light on the murder yesterday at Belleville, of Mrs. Coral Bowler and the suicide of her husband, Samuel S. Bowler, according to a special despatch to the Toront Star to-day.

In his statement to police, the despatch said, Callahan said Mrs. Bowler had told him the night before the slaying that she intended leaving home the next day and would take the furniture with her.

"I have heard Sam Bowler say he was going to shoot his wife lots of times," Callahan informed the police. "I told her if she was going to leave him she had better bring a policeman along, for there was going to be trouble."

The double shooting was the climax of years of sharp quarreling, witnesses testified at the inquest yesterday.

A well-kept bathroom reflects to the credit of a homemaker.

* * * * * * *

A disorderly one is an indication of poor housekeeping. This room is one of the smallest in a house, yet it is one of the hardest to keep immaculate.

* * * * * * *

This holds true whether there are many such rooms in a home or a single one.

* * * * * * *

Of course it is easier to look after one's own things without the intrusion of others, but it is matter of degrees.

* * * * * * *

There is the tub, bowl and bathroom appliances to have pristine and spotless in any case, to say nothing of hand and face towels, bath towels and bath mats.

* * * * * * *

One of the simplest little methods of having a wash bowl in good condition for a next comer, or oneself, if the bath is private, is to have a face cloth hung by the bowl and to wipe out the bowl and marble about it when the user has finished her toilette.

* * * * * * *

A face cloth is a good sized cloth and it does not betray the fact that it is for such purpose, so it is recommended for this use. Be sure to have it different in color or pattern from the ones for personal use.

* * * * * * *

One homemaker has a little card pasted above the hook on which the wash cloth is hung. On it is written, "Please wipe out the bowl and marble and leave the place clean for the next comer.

* * * * * * *

Kerosene is an excellent cleaning fluid to wipe out a bathtub with occasionally. It takes off any rims effectually and rapidly. The one thing to remember is that it is an oil and if it is not thoroughly rinsed off, it will collect dust.

* * * * * * *

A cloth should be hung by the tub, for the same purpose as that mentioned in connection with the bowl. Each one who takes a bath should be expected to wash out the tub after a bath.

* * * * * * *

It takes but a moment to do this and the tub is kept immaculate by such care.

* * * * * * *

Towels are something of a problem as to use one makes it mussed, and yet one cannot keep changing them after each time the face or hands are dried.

* * * * * * *

These accessories should be changed daily, or the hand towels should be surely. Each time one is used, it should be folded and hung up carefully.

* * * * * * *

Also, if the hands are dried in the centre of the towel and not on the outer fold, it will not show creases and muss badly.

CULBERTSON on CONTRACT

by Ely Culbertson

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

PLANNING THE END PLAY

Where the decision is at all close, at least one-third of all contracts at Bridge are won or lost in the play of the last few tricks. The methods by which experts gain the tricks essential to the making of their contract sometimes appear to the uninitiated as sheer suicide, while in fact each play is accurately timed and fully considered. End play positions are extremely interesting and are reached when a chosen opponent is placed in the lead, so that on the twelfth trick he is compelled to lead away from a guarded honor otherwise uncatchable, to an honor combination in either the closed or Dummy Hand, or in both. To be able to make end plays one must carefully count the suit distribution as the play proceeds, otherwise you are quite likely to place the wrong adversary in the lead and thus eliminate the possibility of the play.

Take the hand below:

Neither side vulnerable.

South—Dealer.

	♠ A 8 7 3 ♡ Q J ◇ A 10 6 3 ♣ 4 3 2
♠ J 10 ♡ 10 9 6 5 3 ◇ K J 4 ♣ K 10 5	W N E S	♠ Q 9 6 4 2 ♡ A 4 ◇ 9 7 2 ♣ 9 7 6
	♠ K 5 ♡ K 8 7 2 ◇ Q 8 5 ♣ A Q J 8

The Bidding:

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1♣	Pass	2NT(1)	Pass
3NT(2)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—The jump to two notrump is based on the possession of nearly 2-½ honor-tricks.

2—South holds 3 honor-tricks and the bid for game, while close, is justified.

East had a variety of undesirable leads. The opening of the ♡ club did not appear to have a future and the warning lead of the top of the worthless diamond suit did not appear desirable because the suit was a minor and hence quite likely the basis of much of North and South's game contract at notrump. Taking into consideration all these things, East decided to open his fourth best spade and when the Dummy went down, North counted his certain and probable tricks. He was sure of 2 spade and 2 heart tricks. The club suit was worth from two to four depending upon the success of the finesse in the suit and its distribution in the adverse hands. If the suit was evenly distributed in all the hands and the club finesse won, then he could make 9 tricks with only a single trick in the diamond suit. If the club finesse failed — that is, if West held the club King and the suit broke evenly—then he must secure the game-going trick if at all, by scoring at least 2 tricks in the diamond suit. His honor holding in the diamond suit justified the hope of 2 tricks, but the danger was that either East's spades or the heart suit would be established before all these tricks could materialize. North could not establish 2 tricks in diamonds without conceding 1 trick in that suit to his opponents. There was, however, the end play which might develop the needed trick through forcing his opponents to play the hand for him. After winning the first lead of spades with the King, North led a small heart from the Dummy, planning to drive out the Ace, wherever it was, hoping that if it was held by East it would be the only entry for his spade suit, if that proved to be five cards in length. East won the first round of hearts. He made the mistake of now leading the spade deuce, disclosing to the Declarer that he had held five cards in that suit originally. North did not permit West to win this trick, as to do so might cost game. He had decided to play West for length in hearts and the diamond King. The club finesse was taken and lost. Realizing that the diamond lead would be worse than futile, West now led a heart. The play afforded South the key to the correct end play. The heart was won in the Dummy and the three good clubs cashed. East and West both discarded small diamonds on the last club. Now West was put in with Dummy's last heart to make 2 established tricks in that suit, upon which North discarded his losing spades and Dummy discarded a small diamond. After West had taken his hearts, he was compelled to lead the Knave of diamonds which was won in the Dummy with the Queen. The game-making trick went to Declarer's Ace.

TODAY'S POINTER

Question: If there should be a choice between penalizing opponents and premiums at own bid, which should be chosen?

Answer: A skillful player should choose the penalties, but an average (or worse) player would be wise to be content with making his own game and its premiums until his play improves, as it will when he learns to draw the correct bidding inferences.

CHEMISTS ON VERGE OF FINDING WAY TO PRESERVE FRESH JUICES

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

GOITRE FROM TOO RAPID REDUCING.

I write about overweight much more frequently than about underweight because of the dangers to health and life from carrying too much weight. Just what these dangers are, the majority of overweight individuals have already learned from experience or from their physician.

Sometimes, however, I just wonder if health-writers, including myself, talk so much about these dangers that many overweight individuals, who up to the present have really found no cause for worry about their weight, may not become alarmed and do one of two things: first, undertake some severe dieting system, such as the 18-day diet; second, take some thyroid extract.

With the 18-day diet or other very rapid reducing method, the entire system receives such a shock that very often only care and rest can bring the individual back to health. Many deaths have been traced to these rapid methods of reducing.

With the use of thyroid extract, what has happened in a number of cases is that the individual from being overweight and with processes of the body working at a normal or slow rate, becomes very thin, has a rapid heart, and is very nervous and restless. These symptoms remain some time even after the thyroid extract has been discontinued.

Fortunately, by rest and the treatment given for ordinary goitre symptoms, these patients usually regain their health.

Research physicians have discovered cases where all the symptoms of goitre appeared even without the use of thyroid extract, due entirely to cutting down on the amount of food eaten much too rapidly.

Here again rest and careful nursing are necessary to restore health.

The thought then is that as overweight is a condition that has come on gradually without any shock to, or illness of, the system, the reduction of this weight should be accomplished in the same manner; that is, by a gradual reduction in the amount of food eaten, particularly liquids and starches, thereby preventing any shock or illness.

Remember, then, that thyroid extract, and too rapid reducing, can both bring on symptoms of goitre.

SLIGHT FOOD CHANGES AFFECT THE BODY TREMENDOUSLY

My grand niece weighed less at eight months than at birth, due to "Infantile eczema." Was plastered with ointments and unbathed for seven months—entire household exhausted from lack of sleep. I added vegetable juice to each bottle feeding, nothing more. After two days she slept fourteen hours without waking. Ointments then discontinued, baths resumed. No rash; no itching in four years since. Why? Vegetable juice alkalinized her blood, killing the acid-caused eczema. Alkaline Roman Meal has kept her blood alkaline since.

Alkaline Roman Meal also saved my life when the great Osler told me twenty-four years ago I could not live four months. Now at 74 not two per cent. of men 30 have muscles, strength or endurance equal to mine. built up out of alkaline Roman Meal. Dr. Joslyn Announces Biggest Handicaps in Keeping Flavor Now Overcome.

SOCIETY IN SESSION.

(By Howard W. Blakeslee, A.P. Science Editor)

NEW ORLEANS, La., Mar. 30.—The possibility that Byrd's men on his next polar expedition can sit in their winter huts and drink juices as fresh as if from ripe fruit picked five minutes before, became almost real at the American Chemical Society yesterday.

Recent discoveries which put this long sought achievement close at hand were reported by M. A. Joslyn of the University of California.

His report concerned oranges, but the discoveries apply to other fruits and vegetables. He spoke at a symposium of a dozen papers of the progress of quick freezing methods toward eliminating the necessity for gathering plant foods green, or even of deterioration in the months between producer and the dinner table.

The first step with orange juice was freezing at zero This delivered six months later a perfectly preserved and healthy juice. But the flavor was poor, becoming progressively worse from two to six months.

Oxygen Eliminated

Much of this bad taste was traced to oxygen. Oxygen was then eliminated by freezing in vacuum, and also by packing the frozen juice in cans sealed with nitrogen under the cover, thus shutting out the oxygen.

The flavor then lasted better, but not perfectly. Next it was discovered that invisible amounts of metal dissolved from the containers caused chemical changes in the juice. Another taste destroyer was traced to acid from the orange peels. Lately it has been found that where an orange grows makes a difference in how best to freeze its juice. Maturity of the fruit and even the melting temperature just before drinking it also affect flavor.

Not all these obstacles seem conquered, and Dr. Joslyn did not guarantee no others will appear, but the biggest handicaps are over.

C. A. Magoon, of the U.S. Bureau of plant industry, said the old idea that freezing destroys the bacteria must be revised. He found them still alive and working after 10 hours at 252 degrees below freezing centigrade.

GREAT BRITAIN MODERN ISRAEL AUDIENCE TOLD

Rev. E. J. Springett, of Winnipeg, Addresses Audience in Legion Hall.

HISTORY REVIEWED.

That Great Britain is modern Israel was the contention of the Rev. E. J. Springett of Winnipeg, pastor of St. Patrick's Anglican Church of that city and Dominion secretary of the British-Israel Federation of Canada, speaking in the hall of the Canadian Legion last night to an interested audience of about two hundred people, at a meeting presided over by the president of the local branch of the Federation, Roy E. Wemp.

Reviewing briefly the history of the Israelites, from the time of Abraham of Ur of the Chaldees, whose obedience to the command of God was so instant and unquestioning that he was promised in reward the ownership of the whole of Mesopotamia from the Euphrates to the Nile, and that his seed should be blessed among the nations of the earth, the speaker went on to the covenant also made with Abraham's son, Jacob later called Israel, to whom the promises were repeated.

Then came the years of bondage in Egypt, the Exodus under Moses and Aaron and the establishment later at Mount Horeb, of a theocracy. Under Joshua, the people lived in separate tribes but were united once more under David. It was to Solomon that God made a specific promise: "I will appoint a place for My people Israel where I may plant them, where their enemies shall not afflict them any more and where they may dwell safely."

Then the son of Solomon, Rehoboam, came to the throne, and imposed such taxes upon the people that ten tribes revolted, forming the house of Judah that later went into Babylon, while the house of Israel was deported by the Assyrians and their place filled with Samaritans.

It was while under bondage to the Assyrians that the Israelites eventually escaped and wandered for centuries over Europe, fulfilling prophecy of olden times by establishing themselves in a wilderness, the Hebrew word for an "uninhabited land fit for pasturing flocks." And from the wilderness, where they "passed under the rod," also prophesied, they came by north and west to the islands which formed the Ultima Thule, the farthermost parts of the then known world. Isaiah speaks of the people living in those far-away lands, which, the Rev. Mr. Springett asserted, were in reality the place appointed for "My People Israel, where I may plant them."

Judah and Israel United

In their wanderings over Europe, the Israelites had been joined by many of the tribe of Judah, who mingled with them, fulfilling another prophecy: "Then shall the house of Judah walk to, and with, the house of Israel."

It was in 900 A.D. that Alfred the Great formulated laws that were based upon the Book of Deuteronomy. "And from 1066 down to this present time these islands have never been invaded, according to the prophecy 'They may dwell safely.'" The Spanish Armada broke before the winds of God that scattered them, Napoleon Bonaparte failed to conquer the British Isles, Van Tromp with his famous broom tied to the masthead bowed to defeat and the Germans fared likewise.

The speaker declared that 1800 A.D. saw the beginnings of Great Britain's enduring power, when the union of England and Scotland took place. He mentioned the fact that Israel was promised a sevenfold punishment for its transgressions, as was Judah. Totalling 2520 years in both instances, B.C. 721 was the start of the former's punishment and the end was 1799 or 1800 A.D., while in the latter instance, 604 B.C. saw the commencement of the punishment and 1917 the end, when the deliverance of Jerusalem took place and Allenby freed the city from the grasps of the Turks.

The reverend speaker derided the theory that the Jewish people, as a nation, would ever rule over Palestine, saying that only the descendants of the house of Israel, with the representatives of the house of Judah, could ever accomplish that.

Questions were answered at the close of the address, which was listened to with intense interest by the audience.

The opening prayer and hymn and Bible reading were followed by a brief address by the chairman, and a vocal solo given in sweet soprano voice by Victor Coleman, singing an appropriate selection for the Easter season, "The Palms."

PRESENT OPERA FRIDAY NIGHT AT THE GRAND

St. Paul's Choir and Men's Association to Present Light Opera.

PIRATES OF PENZANCE

When Gilbert and Sullivan quarelled over a red carpet, they cheated the world out of much fun and laughter. After they parted, forever, as it transpired later, there was no one who could match Sullivan's music with jolly jingles that just seemed to fit the melodies, and no one could write music to suit Gilbert's libretti.

However, they left behind them plenty of memorials in the way of musical comedies that tingle with humor and scintillate with that sort of dry wit that sets the funny bone twitching.

Not the least of these is "The Pirates of Penzance," in which the action is based to a great extent on defective hearing. Had Nurse Ruth heard "pilot" aright, not as "pirate," Frederic, the pirate apprentice, would never have been indentured to the band of buccaneers, and, had the pirate king heard "often" as it is and not as "orphan," much misunderstanding would have been avoided.

"The Pirates," as it is familiarly known, will be presented at the Grand Opera House of Friday evening, April 1st, under the auspices of the Men's Association and the choir of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church. Martin B. Chenhall, A.R.C.O., will conduct and Mrs. John Foster will direct the orchestra. Mrs. Joseph Armstrong will have charge of the ladies' costumes.

The cast includes Harold Coulson, as Richard, a Pirate chief, John Anderson, as Samuel, his lieutenant; Stanley Willis, as Frederic, a pirate apprentice, whose twenty-first birthday celebration opens the first act; George Coleman, Junior, as Major-General Stanley of the British Army; George East, as Edward, a Sergeant of Police, who, with his band of policemen, does much to add to the hilarity of the piece; Mrs. Grace Munro, as Mabel, General Stanley's youngest daughter; Emma Lou Chenhall, Mary Sedgewick and Lily B. Kay, as Kate, Edith and Isabel, General Stanley's daughters, and Jessie Pattison, as Ruth, a piratical maid of all work. It is Ruth who begs Frederick to marry her, when he tires of a buccaneering career and wishes to seek another occupation. She assures him that she is "a fine figure of a woman" and he consents. Shortly afterwards, however, he meets and falls in love with Mabel, one of General Stanley's daughters, and complications ensue that are handled in the best Gilbert and Sullivan manner.

It is a tuneful and hilarious affair that promises to be exceptionally fine entertainment.

Clothespins Hold Place In Fashions

NEW YORK, Mar. 30.—Clothes-lines and corks already had been snatched from the kitchen shelf to serve as decorative belts and buckles on swager spring costumes. Now the humble clothespin has gone high hat.

Several shops are featuring clothespins of simulated ivory and of other bright colored substances to be snapped on hat brims, or to hold in place folds of the new scarfs. Sometimes three of these in different colors are worn side by side. Clothespins are shaped exactly like their more utilitarian sisters but, naturally, are smaller.

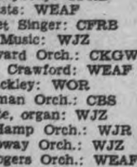
Lumbago, Kidney Trouble, Rheumatism



Hamilton, Ont.—Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets were recommended to me about three years ago when I was so troubled with lumbago that I often had to stay in bed for several days, too stiff to move. The first bottle of 'Anuric' gave me relief," said Mrs. Alice Gardner of 174 Gibson Ave. "I took the second bottle because I realized it was ridding me of rheumatic pains in finger joints as well as the backache. I would certainly recommend Dr. Pierce's Anuric to every person who is ailing with congested kidneys, rheumatism or backache for I am sure it will give relief."

Leafs-Maroons Advance in Stanley Cup Series

CONACHER LEADS ATTACK AS VAST CROWD CHEERS FLASHING LEAFS UNTO 6 TO 1 VICTORY

Day, Primeau, Finnigan, Gracie, Cotton Also Marksmen for Smythemen.

Coulter Counts For Hawks.

Leafs Qualify to Meet Maroons in Next Round—No Casualties.

With 13,030 wildly cheering fans urging them on, the Maple Leafs literally swept the Chicago Black Hawks out of the Stanley Cup competition at Maple Leaf Gardens last night, and qualified to meet Montreal Maroons in the next round of the world's professional hockey championship series.

Hawks Engulfed

The Black Hawks were engulfed under a deluge of six goals, the Leafs winning the game 6 to 1 to secure a four-goal margin on the round, the Hawks having won the first game of the series 1 to 0 in Chicago.

Wiping out the Hawks' advantage early in the first period when Captain ("Happy") Day beat the National League's best goalkeeper, "Chuck" Gardiner, with a fast shot from a difficult angle at the side of the net, the Leafs forsook the caution that marked their play of the first few minutes and turned on the speed.

Leaping to the attack in two and three man waves, they resorted to the wide-open style of hockey that has made them so popular and brought them so much success this season. In less than two minutes more Charlie Conacher swept in on the goal, drew Gardiner out, and stick-handled the puck into the empty cage.

Charlie Conacher

That tally put the Leafs in the driver's seat on the round, and they never relinquished it.

Fail to Stem Tide

Yielding gradually, but, nevertheless, yielding, the Hawks could not stem the tide of defeat that was sweeping them into retirement for this season. The Leafs, tasting success, were stimulated and inspired. Following up the two goals obtained in the first period, they kept up a steady pressure on the Chicago cage in the middle session, and three times more the puck whistled into the twine behind Gardiner, and the red light flashed its message of triumph to the Toronto team's supporters. Gracie, Conacher and Finnigan were on the scoring end of the plays that raised the Leafs' total to five when the second rest period was sounded. Only a miraculous reversal of form could deprive them of a victory then.

In the final period, the Hawks were the first to score, Coulter finally breezing the disc past Chabot's previously impenetrable armour with a fast, low shot that whizzed by the goalkeeper's shoe tops and caught the far corner of the net just inside the post. The Leafs were practically past all danger of losing the round at that stage and the Hawks' lone tally merely served to save them from a shut-out. It was the last feeble flutter of their expiring hopes.

Cotton Scores

The final goal of the game was scored by the Leafs less than two minutes from the end when the fans were making for the exits. Penalties to Thompson and March left the Hawks with only four men on the ice against the Leafs' six, and a three-man attack with Bailey and Darragh assisting, ended when Cotton lodged the puck in the cage as a parting salute to the happy throng.

ALEX CONNELL STARS.

Maroons Play Next Game Against Leafs on Thursday Night.

FORUM, Montreal, March 30. — The Montreal Maroons advanced to the second round of the National Hockey League play-off elimination series by blanking Detroit Falcons 2-0 in a close game here last night and winning the round by a score of 3-1. The teams tied at 1-1 in the first game of the series, played at Detroit last Sunday.

The Maroons will play their next game here on Thursday night against the Maple Leafs, winners of the second-place round.

The Maroons were held at bay by Alexander Connell last night. It was the smart work of the former Ottawa Senators' goaler that kept the score down. The Falcons put up a game battle, especially in the last period, when they sent every body up the ice, and made things mighty hot for Flat Walsh. Connell was in superb form, and was everywhere at once as he fended off hot shots from all angles. Weakened by penalties, the Falcons' defence was badly bent as the Maroons' sharpshooters jumped in and slammed hard drives at Connell almost at will.

Brilliant Goalkeeping.

Connell kept the puck carefully out of his net for almost two periods. Some of his saves were seemingly miraculous. He tossed as de the hardest drives that Babe Seibert, Nels Stewart, and Hooley Smith could send at him. Ironically it was a fluke shot that beat him and gave Maroons a goal margin and enabled them to sit back on the defensive to finish the game.

Each side was a man short when the Maroons first scored, with two minutes of the second period remaining. Jimmy Ward was circling trickily just inside the blue line, trying to shake off the Falcons' defence. Suddenly he flicked a high shot at the goal cage. It struck Connell on the shoulder and knocked him off balance. The puck plopped down under his armpit into the cage as Alexander fell.

The Detroiters started a powerful rally in the third, and the Maroons' defence had to be changed repeatedly to keep the lead. Walsh worked smartly to back them up, and several hard shots buzzed by the empty cage with Walsh on the ice and the defence out of position. He robbed Goodfellow, Aurie and Emms of certain goals.

In the last minute the Falcons had everybody up the ice trying to beat Walsh. Hooley Smith broke away and Baldy Northcott caught up to him and they swept in on Connell together. Alexander went down and Hooley passed to Northcott and took a return pass just outside the goal and slipped it home for the second goal.

OVERTIME FAILS TO GIVE WINNER

Lakefield Greyhounds and Young's Point Battle for Ninety Minutes.

SCORE ONE ALL

LAKEFIELD, March 30 (Examiner Correspondence). — The Gill Greyhounds and Young's Point Maroons played a hockey game on Monday evening in the Lakefield Rink on a sheet of rather soft ice, but the heavy going did not deter the teams from giving a strong exhibition, and when at the end of the game the score was 1 to 1 they clamored for overtime, and after thirty minutes overtime they were still a tie, both teams remained undefeated, although exhausted. If the ice holds, the tie may yet be played off. John McFadden Jr. was the referee. The line-up was as follows:—

Gill's Greyhounds.—B. Wannamaker, goal; H. Gill and G. Kidd, defence; A. Roseborough, centre; T. Gill, T. Bickell, wings; E. Roseborough, K. Beavis, L. Charlton, W. Morgan, subs.

Young's Point Maroons. — W. Hamblin; [illegible] Young and A. Brooks, defence; [illegible] Darling, centre; F. Carroll and H. Young, wings; G. Tedford, [illegible] Wilson, R. Wilson, C. Hockaday, M. Gorham, H. Runford, subs.

HABITANTS SUFFER THIRD DEFEAT BY PATRICKMEN

Heller Again Plays Brilliant Game for Winners at New York.

FINAL COUNT 5 TO 2.

NEW YORK, March 30—The National Hockey League title passed to the New York Rangers last night when they defeated the Montreal Canadiens 5-2 to score a three-to-one victory in games for the championship.

After a reign of one year as titleholders and two years as possessors of the Stanley Cup, Canadiens passed from the season's hockey picture fighting valiantly. Weakened by injuries, they unleashed a desperate rally in the second period last night that fell short of the mark, and a speedy, clever team went to the front and stayed there.

Three goals by the Rangers in the second period sent the champions reeling, but they came back to grab two before the frame ended, and then tossed caution over in the third in an effort to gain even terms. Rangers grasped the opportunities presented, and smacked in another pair to settle the argument.

Heller Again Stars

The hero's mantle again last night nestled on the shoulders of young Ott Heller, rookie Ranger defenseman. After his sensational goal of Sunday night that sent Canadiens down to 1-0 defeat, it was again Heller who grazed the skids for the slipping champions.

Two prettily executed dashes by the Kitchener boy broke a goalless twenty-eight minutes, and the veteran, Bill Cook, followed with a quick goal on a pass that began with Brother Bun, and had Frank Boucher in the relaying position.

Against the tremendous deficit, Canadiens failed to quit. Wildor Larochelle, on a pass from Leduc, counted late in the period, and then Leduc, on a sensational rink length dash, gave Canadiens their second and final tally.

Fresh, strong and always crowding the Red Shirts with persistent back-checking, Rangers went into the final period with a confidence that would not be denied.

They held off the struggling Frenchmen, checked them into submission and definitely settled the series on goals by Dillon and Keeling. They were free to race in almost unmolested after breaking away from the still fighting Canadiens, who sent all but Goalie George Hainsworth down the ice. Dillon counted on Murdoch's pass, and Keeling teamed with Somers for the final goal just before the game ended.

TECS BATTLE HARD TO DRAW

Last Period Rally Gives Buffalo 3-3 Tie at Fort Erie.

'DOGS WIN OVERTIME.

TORONTO, Mar. 30. — (CP) — Windsor Bulldogs, last year's champions, stand to the fore in the International Hockey League's round-robin championship series today. By downing Detroit Olympics 1-0 in a thrilling overtime battle last night, Bulldogs scored their initial victory of the series and are well in front of the other contending teams.

In the other match programmed Buffalo Bisons finished strong at Fort Erie to grab a 3-3 tie with London Tecumsehs. The tie game between the first and second place finishers in the league race gives each club a point while Bulldogs triumph earns them an award of three points.

While Detroit Olympics went down fighting to the last against their cross river rivals, 11,000 people left Olympia convinced they had witnessed a typical Bulldog-Olympic clash. Earl Robinson, blond-haired Windsor wingman, who topped the International League scorers last season contributed the only goal of the game after eight minutes of the overtime period had elapsed.

After the game it was discovered Johnny Clark, who turned in such a sensational display in Detroit's cage had played under the handicap of a serious illness. While his teammates were congratulating him on his many fine saves in the dressing room, Clark collapsed and was immediately rushed to the hospital.

It was discovered he was suffering from acute appendicitis and it is expected an operation will be performed early today.

Two goals down entering the third period, Buffalo Bisons showed the same fighting dash they displayed in topping the league in the scheduled race when they tied London 3-3. It was a one-man game as far as the Londoners were concerned as "Speedy" Groh, their flashy wingman counted the three tallies. Groh twice beat Goalie Taugher in the first period after he had split the defence while he garnered his third goal late in the middle session on a dash with Harold Hicks.

Southport's Director-Player

Not many clubs have on their books a director who still plays football. Southport have one in Colonel R. Gibson, D.S.C. who recently played at outside right for the reserve team against a local side.

In younger days Colonel Gibson played for Hesketh Park, of which club his son, Kenneth Gibson, is a playing member. All Southport's directors have played the game.

EX-STUDENTS HOLD REUNION

Ex-Pupils of Omemee High School Hold Banquet.

FOLLOWED BY DANCING

OMEMEE, Mar. 30.—(Examiner Correspondence.) — For the first time in the history of the Omemee High school the ex-students of the years 1920-32 held a reunion in Coronation Hall, Easter Monday evening. The re-union took the form of a banquet followed by a dance. The hall was beautifully decorated with the school colors, blue and gold. The tables had a very festive air with their lighted blue and gold candles, yellow daffodils and carnations.

The guests were welcomed by a reception committee consisting of three, Eileen Johnson, Mrs. McPhee and Mary Faulkner. At seven o'clock the guests filed downstairs and took their places at the tables. Mr. Pook, the present High School principal, acted in the capacity of chairman and led in the community singing, accompanied by Lily Race at the piano. Mr. Pook thanked the Women's Institute for the very splendid supper and the fine way in which it was served. After the banquet several toasts were proposed. The first was to the King, followed by the National Anthem. The next toast was to the Teachers and was proposed by Marion Rea, who paid tribute to the efforts of the High school teachers. This toast was responded to by Miss Murphy, a former High school teacher. Miss Murphy gave some sterling advise to those in the teaching profession.

The third toast was to the success of all High school students and was wittily proposed by Campbell Mackay. In reply the ex-students sang one of their old school songs, "We'll not forget the dear old High."

The last toast was the humorous one of the evening. This being leap year it was proposed to the gentlemen by Mabel Rowan. Miss Rowan said that she had looked up the meaning of the word "gentleman" and found it to be a man of good family, kind, courteous and unassuming. William Stephenson, Jr., replied in a vein no less humorous, stating that courtship was a time when a man ran after a woman till she caught him.

As the time was getting late several of the speakers were not called on, but a hearty clap was given each of them—Miss Meredith, Mr. Stalter, Mr. F. G. Sandy, Mr. T. C. Ivory and Norman Henderson.

Telegram From Norway.

During the evening a telegram was read from Mrs. Fearing (nee Betty Alderson), of Oslo, Norway, who at one time was a teacher here. The telegram contained greetings from Mrs. Fearing to her former pupils.

On the conclusion of the toasts and the tables were cleared and the dancing began. The music was furnished by Joseph Watson of Peterborough. Round dancing, a Paul Jones and novelty dances were enjoyed till half past one, lunch being served at midnight.

Much of the credit for the success of the banquet was due to the committee, with Eileen Johnson as convenor.

EXAMINER DANCE TO AID RELIEF

Dance Will be Staged in Canadian Legion Hall on Friday Night.

YOKOM'S BAND TO PLAY

There are many calls just now on the relief agencies of the city and funds available are not too plentiful. Many homes with large families are in need because the bread-winner cannot find employment. The long-continued lack of work and, in many cases, illness also, make for bad times in numbers of households.

To augment relief funds, The Examiner's Social Club and the Canadian Legion are sponsoring a community dance which will be held in the Legion Hall on the evening of Friday of this week, April 1st. Arrangements will be in charge of Fred Scates, who knows just how to make such an event a real success. Mose Yokom's band will play.

Come along and enjoy yourselves and contribute to a good cause at the same time.

GARDNER ASKS SUPPORT TO BALANCE BUDGET

WASHINGTON, Mar. 30.— (A. P.)—Simultaneous with the approval by the House of Representatives Ways and Means Committee of a substitute plan for the defeated sales tax, Speaker Garner told the House floor yesterday to appeal for support for the measure to balance the budget.

The new proposals, including a one cent boost in first class postage stamps, were estimated to give the bill a total of $1,293,000,000 of revenue. The prospective deficit of the Federal Treasury is $1,241,000,000.

The plan calls for reducing the surtax and corporation tax exemptions, repealing several administrative provisions of the present law, and taxing stock, bond and real estate [illegible] and numerous other special taxes.

DENMARK RELIES ON CYCLISTS TO TRIUMPH AT THE OLYMPICS

Danes Will Send Party of Thirty to Complete at Los Angeles.

SWIMMING THREAT

By MAXWELL STILES
(Special to The Examiner)

LOS ANGELES, March 30.—I am assured by Ryan A. Grut, vice-consul of Denmark in Los Angeles, that his country will send to Los Angeles a party of thirty. Of these, 26 will be athletes and only four officials. Many a nation can learn something from that. Four officials are sufficient for any country that is having difficulty raising funds to transport and maintain an Olympic team.

Denmark estimates that it will cost $1,000 per man. So Denmark has raised, or promised to have on hand when needed, $30,000.

Concentrated effort to win the championship in cycling ("bike" riding to most Americans who haven't seen one since the days of the horsecar) will feature Denmark's participation. Six of her athletes will be cyclists.

Non Outstanding Sprinter

Denmark placed second to Holland in cycling at the 1928 Olympic games in Amsterdam. With Holland planning to send only two or three cyclists to Pasadena's famous rose bowl, where all cycling events, except the road race, will be staged, it becomes apparent at once that the Danes should be the favored competitors.

Mr. Grut states that in addition to the six cyclists that are favored to win a team championship, the Danish team will consist of:

Four boxers, four Greco-Roman wrestlers, one weight lifter, five fencers, two of whom are to be women, three women swimmers (no men), and three track and field athletes. Denmark was not one of the first six nations in the 1928 athletics.

Denmark has no sprinter of note, the best being Jorgensen, who has a mark of 22.6 seconds for 200 metres.

Thomason with 15:27.4 looks none too good at 5,000 metres, while Axelsen with 32:50 in the 10,000 is well behind Paavo Nurmi's record of 30:06.2.

Real Javelin Contender.

Two of Denmark's three track athletes may be marathon runners, for in Bach and Jensen they are very fair prospects to place. Jensen has a mark of 2 hours 44 minutes 27 seconds, Bach of 2:54:54, made last year.

The javelin shows a real contender in N. Molles, who threw the spear 210 feet 7 inches last year. Nielsen reached 191 feet 3½ inches in 1930. Mortensen is the hammer throw reached 149 feet 3½ inches last year, about 12 feet less than that which is required to place.

Denmark's outstanding threat for an Olympic championship appears to be Elsa Anderson, who set a new world's record for the 500 metre fre estyle swim less than a month ago. Miss Anderson will swim the 100 metres, in which she has a mark of 1:145.5, and the 400 metre free style swim less than a win were if not for the presence of Melene Madison.

COLLIER GETS "GATE"

LOS ANGELES, Mar. 30. —The axe has fallen again in the Detroit Tiger training squad and this time Orlin Collier, recruit pitcher, secured from Evansville of the Three-I-League, is the victim. He is released to Beaumont of the Texas League on option.

Hart and Harrington of Providence Reds Second and Third Respectively.

PRATT HEADS BAD MEN.

BOSTON, March 30 (C.P.)—Lloyd Klein, Boston Cubs' left winger, led the Canadian-American Hockey League scorers during the past season, according to figures just released by President James Dooley.

Klain, who spent several weeks of the season with the Boston Bruins, topped "Gizzy" Hart of the Providence Reds by three points, a goal and two assists, and "Hago" Harrington, also of Providence, placed third.

The Cubs also provided the six-club circuit with its leading penalty carrier for Jack Pratt, husky defense man, had 66 minor and a major penalty called against him during the season.

BOSTON ENTERS FONTAINE SERIES

Cubs Defeat New Haven 5-2 in Second Game to Win Round 8-6.

BRUISING STRUGGLE.

BOSTON March 30.—The Boston Clubs last night entered the Canadian-American Hockey League play-offs for the Fontaine Cup by taking the second game of the series with the New Haven Eagles by a 5 to 2 margin.

This performance gave the Cubs a two-game total of 8 goals to 6 for the Eagles, who won the opening play-off game 4 to 3 at New Haven Sunday night. The victory entitled the Cubs to open the championship play against either the Providence Reds or Bronx Tigers here on Saturday.

The conflict was a bruising struggle between two aggressive teams, but the Cubs were strong enough to take advantage of every scoring break despite the sensational work of Maurie Roberts in the Eagles' net.

Eddie Burke Scores

The Cubs opened the scoring in the second session when Eddie Burke countered Joe Jerwa's assist. "Red" Conn put the Cubs two up early in the third period, but the Eagles rallied and tied the score on goals registered by George Patterson and Eddie Convey.

While the Eagles were trying to force matters, the Cubs managed to trap them and score three more tallies, from the sticks of Jerwa, Lloyd Klein, who led the Canadian-American scorers during the regular season, and Guy Poole, Pacific Coaster, who joined the club only a few weeks ago.

Battalino Advised To Take Short Rest

NEW YORK, Mar. 30. (CP)—It looks like Madison Square Garden will have to posptone the lightweight title bout it hoped to stage in May between Champion Tony Canzoneri and Christopher (Bat) Battalino, former featherweight title-holder.

Battalino, who took a severe beating from Billy Petrolle at the Garden last week, has been advised by the New York state athletic commission to take a vacation from the ring for "at least 60 days."

The commission evidently believes Battalino will need at least two months to get over the effects of the Petrolle match which he lost on a technical knockout in the 12th round.

CASUAL COMMENT

Old Man Winter may be out of the running now, and a warm sun will soon be turning out-door skating rinks into ball diamonds, but the great Canadian game of hockey is still very much in the spotlight, especially as it is the play-off season. Last night, the senior baseball club meeting had to be called off because a quorum was not present, the main reason being that the members wanted to listen to the Leafs' game over the radio.

• • • • • • •

Several others were out of town, so nothing could be done but put the session back for a week or so. But once the ball moguls get started again, things should hum. They have a real organization working since last fall, and with the co-operation the intermediates will field a strong C.O.B.L. team this summer.

• • • • • • •

We understand there are several newcomers in town who will try out for places, but they'll have to show plenty to get on the Peterborough team this year if the best of the local talent comes out. Once a satisfactory manager is appointed the players will be heard from.

• • • • • • •

Members if the City Baseball League executive are asked to attend a meeting at 7.30 to-night in Fosters', on Charlotte Street. A few important matters will be decided upon, including the decision on sending a loop representative to the O.B.A.A. annual meeting in Toronto this Saturday.

• • • • • • •

Basketball fans should drop down to the Y.M.C.A. this Friday evening to see the best girl cagers in the city in action. The second, and what may prove to be the final, games in the Ladies' City League takes place with St. Paul's Seniors and Blue Pete's Juniors in front with a win each. However, we figure Westclox and Choates can tie up the round by taking the next frays and forcing a third game.

• • • • • • •

The Canadian and American pro hockey play-offs go merrily on, drawing huge crowds and displaying great puck-chasing exhibitions. With Rangers capturing the league honors, only Maroons and Leafs have a chance against them for the Stanley Cup. Meantime, the arenas don't believe a word about this depression business, and why should they?

• • • • • • •

Of course, it's too bad for Boston and the Americans that they couldn't be worked into the play-offs some way just to sort of help prosperity along or something. Perhaps, now that three teams have been eliminated from the play-offs, the Bruins and Amerks could be matched up and kind of go through the whole complicated play-off system again. If such a thing occurred, we wouldn't be at all surprised to see some other team slip in somewhere and capture the Stanley Cup, maybe the Kansas City Pla-Mors, who knows

• • • • • • •

Still, it's the customers who pay and pay, and if they can stick with it, they're likely to get play-offs until the straw hat season. We haven't any real kick, but it does look funny to see eight teams battle through a long schedule and have six teams finish in the play-offs. Why, the other two could be eliminated much earlier and quite painlessly by cutting cards or something. But there's no money in that. As someone once remarked, Canadian hockey fans can take it, but they can't leave it alone.

• • • • • • •

Tentative plans are being made for another boxing match at the Legion Hall, this one to be staged by the Foster Athletic Club next Wednesday evening. Four boxers, two of whom were here before, from Belleville, will be seen against local boys. We don't know who George Semark, who was Ned Minicola's opponent last time will be paired off with, but Jack Gardner will probably fight Scotty Kline, the tricky pug who went on against Bill Hope. The dope will be out later.

Cup Final Venue Change

An extraordinary situation has arisen in connection with the Irish cup final, which is to be played on Easter Saturday, March 26.

The finalists are Linfield and Glentoran, and the Irish F.A. had arranged that the game should be played on the ground of the Distillery club at Grosvenor Park.

As they have only been in possession of the ground for a few years the Distillery directors have not been able to equip it as they consider adequately for a final, and they have notified the Irish F.A. to that effect.

KEYS IN NEED OF NEW HURLERS

Prospects for Strong Team Among Thirty-four Players in Training.

Three Veteran Pitchers.

READING, March 30—Although surrounded by an array of veterans and the biggest squad in the history of the club, Clarence Rowland, president-manager of the Reading Keys faces the familiar problem of pitching as he prepares his club for the International League pennant race.

Among the 34 players taken to the training camp at Evansville, Ind., Rowland is confident he has material for the strongest team that has represented Reading in recent years. The outfield especially is fortified, the infield prospects have improved, the old slugging power is there and the catching department is better than ever.

The pitching staff, however, will require added strength. Rowland is looking to the Chicago Cubs to include a reliable hurler or two among the players to be sent in payment for John Walsh and Jimmy Adair.

Three Veteran Hurlers

The hurling corps, as it now shapes up, will include three veterans — Clayton Van Alstyne, George Kirsch and Charlie Willis. Rowland has these men otherwise to pick from: Carroll Yerkes, formerly with the Athletics and Portland; Emory Zumbro, a promising recruit from the Southern Association; Jim Wiltsie, up from the Eastern League; Dewey Hinkle of the Three-I circuit and four graduates of the sand lots—Kenneth Andrews, Harry Lawson, Charles Beckman and Norman Hobbs.

Poole at First

Jim Poole, who led the league in total runs last year, will be back at first base and Jay Partridge at second. Chester Fowler, who came from Montreal by the way of Fort Worth, or Norman McMillan, erstwhile Chicago Cubs, will be at third base with Art Bramhall or Tony Krasovich at shortstp. Other infield candidates are: Howard Raines, Baltimore sandlot player and Clayton Madison, up from the New York-Pennsylvania circuit.

Dick Stahlman, husky receiver, obtained from Newark, and Doc Leggett, who worked in 133 games last year, will divide the catching assignment. In reserve are Pete Mondino, once with the Cleveland Americans, and Ernie Kreuger, a veteran who probably will see service on one of the coaching lines.

The Keys will return to Reading April 1 to complete their training at Lauer's Park. They will open the season at home, April 15, against Montreal.

Major Ball Gossip

BILOXI, Miss., Mar. 30.—Rookie Hurlers Bob Friedrich and Frank Ragland trotted out to practice today with renewed hopes the Washington Senators' uniform may be their permanent garb.

SHREVEPORT, La., Mar. 30.—The Ted Lyons who won 22 games for the Chicago White Sox in 1930, but flattened out last season, appears set for a real comeback. The shoulder injury which handicapped him last year has healed, and in his two appearances in competition he has allowed but three hits in seven innings.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Mar. 30.—Tom Oliver of the Red Sox, is building himself a reputation here as a flashy outfielder. Yesterday he continued his record of a daily sensational, running back catch.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Mar. 30.—Earl Averill, home run king of the Cleveland Indians, ran his training season batting average up yesterday by banging out three singles as the tribe defeated the Toledo Mud Hens 4-0.

Wheelers Confident Of Victory To-Night

MONTREAL, March 30 (C.P.) — With a stronger line-up than the one that took a 3—1 beating in Toronto Saturday night, Montreal's Winged Wheelers take the ice tonight against Toronto Nationals in the second and final game of the series for the Eastern Canada amateur championship. The winner of the series meets Fort William for the Allan Cup, emblematic of the Canadian championship.

The Nationals, who came to Montreal yesterday in company with the junior Wheelers are confident that with their two goal lead they will be able to carry off the series. The Wheelers, however, feel that with Charlie Delahey sufficiently recovered to be back in the game and the addition of two smart performers from the junior Wheelers, they will be able to overcome the lead and emerge with a majority of goals on the two games.

ACCUSED ANNOYED BY THIRD REMAND

Archie Barbeau Case is Remanded Until Next Wednesday.

"I don't want to pass the whole summer here" angrily muttered Archie Barbeau as he gathered up his belongings and hastily left the police court room this morning in the wake of his lawyer, J. A. O'Brien.

It was the third remand that has been granted the Crown in Barbeau's case and the continued delay did not seem to meet with the accused's approval. His bail of $500 was renewed. The case was fixed for trial next Wednesday.

Committed for Trial

Morley Thomas, 16-year-old truck driver of Port Hope, held responsible for the motor accident on Hattons curve, Port Hope highway on March 22, which resulted in serious injury to Norman Moncrief, North Monaghan truck farmer, was bailed for trial on the charge of criminal negligence. On the strength of brief testimony of Highway Patrol Officer Ted Hornick, Thomas, through his counsel, G. N. Gordon, K.C., consented to having the case sent before the higher court. It will be tried at the June sessions of the General Sessions of the Peace here.

Gets Second Chance

Having pleaded guilty to having struck his aged mother, Ernest Graham, Norwood youth, won the sympathies of the court to allow him a second chance. He was bonded to keep the peace on his own recognizance.

HERMAN WORST BASE RUNNER

Varies From World's Worst to Baseball's Best in Diamond Antics.

FREEST SWINGER IN LOOP.

Baseball experts rate Floyd Caves (Babe) Herman, traded by Brooklyn to Cincinnati, with the possible exception of Mr Shanty Hogan of the Giants, as the worst base runner in the game.

Yet, when he is in a hitting mood Herman is a priceless asset. He is the freest swinger in the big leagues. He hits any and all sorts of pitches. One day he'll miss a certain sort of ball by ten feet. Next days he'll knock that same pitch right out of the lot.

When he is in one of his slumps he can't hit a lick; he misses everything that comes his way in the field; in short, he's simply terrible.

He bats left-handed, throws left-handed and thinks from the wrong side mostly. He chews the largest oud of eatin' tobacco in baseball and holds a record for hitting a legitimate three bagger and have it result in a triple play. Babe is very proud of that distinction, naturally.

He has blue eyes, blond hair, thick lips and half-buck teeth. Also a wife and two children. All three are smart, keeping very quiet when daddy is in one of his pensive moods.

Is a real good man in a fight. Weighs 190 and stands six feet. Carries a wallop in either hand. Not stingy with them. Anybody can have either or both most any time during a game. Has been with more than a dozen clubs in his time and once played a season on the Canadian prairie kerosene circuit.

Is the sort of ballplayer the fans either hate, or love. He's good for a dozen laughs a game. And almost that many thrills.

VERGEZ SPRAINS ANKLE.

OAKLAND, Cal., March 30 — Some serious palpitations Manager John McGraw of the New York Giants has been experiencing for a day or two have completely disappeared.

McGraw had been doing some serious worrying ever since Johnny Vergez, star third-sacker, was carried off the field on Saturday after a slide into home plate. Now it's been learned Vergez suffered only a sprained ankle and not a very serious sprain at that.

Glasgow Rangers' Ambition

It is no secret that Glasgow Rangers hope to house a Scotland v. England international match before long and for that reason they had hoped to have the holding capacity of Ibrox Park fully tested at the cup-tie with Motherwell on Saturday.

By architects' measurements the ground can hold 136,000 spectators, and though the attendance of 88,000 on Saturday was a record, it was quite apparent that many thousands more could have been accommodated with comfort.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

WHITEFOOT BRINGS TERRIBLE NEWS

When all seems safest then watch out,
For enemies may be about.
—Whitefoot the Wood Mouse.

When all seems safest that may be the very time of greatest danger. This is because at such times people usually grow careless and forget to watch and their enemies know this and take advantage of it. Whitefoot the Wood Mouse and Mrs. Whitefoot never had felt safer than they did in Farmer Brown's old sugar house. To begin with they had a house which to them was a regular castle. It was, as you know, in an old syrup can lying on its side under an old coat. They had tried their teeth on its walls and knew that no one could break into it. The only way into it was by means of the little round doorway that only one as small as themselves could pass through. Then, too, it was in the sugar house and even Reddy Fox would not dare enter there. So, having found that Farmer Brown's Boy was their friend, they felt perfectly safe.

With always plenty of food provided for them there was no need of ever going outside that old sugar house. But Whitefoot often did go out when the door was left ajar in the evening. Mrs. Whitefoot had the four babies to care for, but Whitefoot had no cares and he liked to roam about. It was one evening while he was outside that he made a dreadful discovery. He was sitting at the entrance to a private hole of his under the roots of an old stump near the woodpile. Only his head was out and fortunately, very fortunately, he was perfectly still.

The moonlight fell full on the woodpile. He thought he saw something move over there. He fixed his eyes on that spot. For a moment or two he saw nothing unusual. Then he got a glimpse of something white that disappeared as suddenly as it had appeared. The next minute a slim, small person sat up on top of the woodpile, looked sharply in all directions and then disappeared between the sticks of wood. Whitefoot's heart seemed to stop for an instant. There was terror in his eyes as he held his breath and continued to watch. The slim, white visitor appeared again, this time on the ground. He moved quickly and his nose touched the ground now and then. He was making straight for the door of the sugar house. Just before he reached it the door opened and Farmer Brown's Boy stepped out. The white stranger vanished as if by magic. Farmer Brown's Boy walked over to the woodpile for an armful of wood.

Whitefoot sprang out of his hole and ran for that open door. And how he did run. Farmer Brown's Boy turned just in time to see him. "Hello!" he exclaimed. "Whitefoot is running as if Reddy Fox was at his heels. I wonder what has given him such a fright. I don't see anything around here to frighten him."

In through the open door raced Whitefoot and straight into the old syrup can. Mrs. Whitefoot came out of her nest. "What is the matter with you?" she demanded for Whitefoot was panting and trembling all over.

"I—I—I've got terrible news," he gasped.

"What is it?" demanded Mrs. Whitefoot anxiously.

"I've just seen Shadow the Weasel!" panted Whitefoot.

A look of dreadful fear came into the eyes of Mrs. Whitefoot. "Where?" she asked in a voice that shook.

"Out in the woodpile," replied Whitefoot, "and then just outside the door. I—I think he smelled my scent in the woodpile and followed it over to the door. Farmer Brown's Boy frightened him away, but he didn't go far, I am sure. And he will come back. There isn't a doubt about that. Oh dear, what shall we do? What can we do?"

"He won't dare come in the sugar house," ventured Mrs. Whitefoot, but Whitefoot knew that she didn't believe that.

"He would dare do anything. You know that as well as I do," replied Whitefoot.

Just then Farmer Brown's Boy entered and closed the door behind him. There were two little sighs of sheer relief.

What To-Day Means To You

"ARIES"

If March 30th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m., from 1:30 p.m. to 2:45 p.m., and from 11 p.m. to midnight. The danger periods are from 11:45 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 4 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Unprofitable influences shadow your life on this March 30th. Nuggets of love, gold, or labor, which you have previously showered with the expectation of profitable returns will prove to have been only dragon's teeth, and your harvest will be one of great disappointment, if not dishonesty. Those already wearing the matrimonial yoke will meet with disloyal temptations.

The child born on this March 30th will go forth with head up and chin out. If a boy, he should easily win his eleven, and carry scholastic honors as well. Roles of leadership await girl babies born on this date as well. Those of both sexes will be blessed with sunny dispositions and winning manners.

Born on March 30th, you live each day rather independent of thought of those which are to follow. You never face anything until it faces you, and this philosophy of life you particularly apply in regard to anything of a distasteful nature. You enjoy your "Fool's Paradises" to the utmost whilst they last and until their ruins lie heaped at your feet. Your convictions are as lasting as those of any opportunist and are quickly changed to suit a time and an occasion. You seldom get down to any plot or plan of life and probably adhere to few guiding principles.

You fall easily from one mood to another and without any startling causes. You may feel inspired to work like a Trojan and be alive to the serious things of life one day, but the next will be content to "butterfly in the sun." You have qualities which can make you both a master worker and a master loafer. You are a self-concentrated person without being a self-controlled one. Your successes in life are attributable to both your ability and temperament; your failures are probably due solely to temperament and none to inability.

Your ingratiating qualities, your dare-devil spirit, and your very indifference at times, win for you the most devoted and loyal of admirers and followers. Others seem glad to cater to your whims and fancies, although you would not do the same in return.

Lakefield Legion Stages Euchre Party

LAKEFIELD, March 30.—(Examiner Correspondence). — Thirty tables of progressive euchre were played at the card party held in the Town Hall on Monday evening under the auspices of the Lakefield post of the Canadian Legion. A capable committee was in charge and the affair was carried on without a single hitch and with the object of everyone having a good time, and that object was achieved in every sense. Prizes were won by Mr. W. W. Leonard, who played as a lady and captured the ladies' first prize, and Mr. John Delaney. Miss Margaret Tanner and Mr. Frank Edwards, Jr., won the consolation prizes and Miss Nora Webster won the prize for having sold the greatest number of tickets.

The hall was beautifully decorated with flags and bunting and never looked more attractive.

Following the serving of refreshments, a dance was held with excellent music provided by Morcrief's orchestra. The Legion officers are: President, A. B. Burrows; vice-president, D. E. M. Greer; secretary, J. R. Earnshaw; pension secretary, K. A. Mackenzie; executive committee, C. C. Stenner, W. H. Adamson, Ellis Simpson, C. R. Armstrong; sergeant-at-arms, T. Cunningham.

Five companies have announced schedules for the season and several others are preparing plans for cruises. Hon. Percy C. Black, Minister of Highways, last night stated that his department of information had been advised of more than forty cruises to Nova Scotia, and others were expected to be announced later.

DUSKY PRINCESS CLAIMS ISLANDS

Asserts Title to 16 Dots in Sulu Sea Never Settled by Britain or U. S.

NEAR NORTH BORNEO.

MANILA, Mar. 30.—(A.P.)—Claim to sixteen small islands in the Sea of Sulu near British North Borneo has been fyled with the British and United States' Governments, it was revealed to-day, by the ...incess Dayang, sister of the Sultan of Sulu.

The Princess asserts title to the islands in question was not settled by the Stimson Treaty affecting Turtle Island and others nearby, signed several years ago, and that, therefore, ownership rests with her. The Sultan himself signed away any claims he may have had in the Bates Treaty with the United States in 1899.

The Princess' claim was fyled last December. It is being investigated by the legal staff of the Governor General of the Philippines. There is no indication, however, that the claim is taken seriously in official circles, as the Stimson Treaty was carefully drawn to settle the ownership of the maze of islets dotting the Sulu Sea.

WHITE GUARDS LAYING PLOTS

Moscow Papers Claim Conspiracies Involve Scheme to Slay Stalin.

RAPS FRENCH ATTITUDE.

MOSCOW, Mar. 30. (AP)—Moscow newspapers gave prominent place to-day to a dispatch from Paris to the Tass News Agency quoting the Communist newspaper L'Humanite as saying that far-flung activities by Russian "White Guards" were underway throughout Europe, including plots against the life of Joseph Stalin and other anti-Soviet conspiracies outside the Russian order.

Among the latter, the dispatches said, was a proposal to assassinate Maxim Gorki, noted Rusian author, in Italy and Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet foreign commissar, in Germany.

L'Humanite was quoted as saying Russian emigres were now developing intensive anti-Soviet activity "under the protection of France and 'vassal states'." It sought to show that the recent attempt on the life of the consular of the German Embassy here was in furtherance of "White Guard" manoeuvres.

Waits For Gang

Uninvited guests to the residence of Colonel John W. Warden, D.S.O., O.B.E., governor of the Essex county jail, Ontario, will discover Queenie on the welcoming committee. Queenie is an exceptionally fine specimen of the Alsatian Shepherd breed of police dog. In the afternoons she may be seen stretching and getting the air in the enclosure behind the governor's home and the rear entrance of the bastille. After dark she is alert and Queenie doesn't fool, either. She gets her suspect as one can well appreciate by a glance at the ABOVE picture, where she is seen with governor.

CONTINUE FIGHT TO SAVE CASSIDY

Doomed Man's Counsel Enters New Evidence in Prisoners' Statements.

HANGING APRIL 8.

MONTREAL, Mar. 30.— Austin Cassidy, of Ottawa, twice sentenced to be hanged for the murder of Bert Marshall, prominent athlete, also of Ottawa, will make another attempt to save himself from the gallows to-day when appeal is argued. The application for leave to appeal came before a single judge on Saturday and was directed to be heard by a full court.

Marshall was shot in Hull, Que., a year and a half ago, following a dispute over a trivial automobile accident. Cassidy was convicted, but obtained a second trial when the decision appealed. On a second trial a few months ago he was again convicted. He was sentenced to be hanged April 8.

Evidence Attacked.

In making his application Saturday, J. P. Noonan, of Hull, Cassidy's counsel, attacked the accuracy of part of the Crown's evidence. John Chernetsky, who was in the cells in Hull jail at the same time as Cassidy, had testified for the Crown at the trial as to a conversation between them. Mr. Noonan contended such a conversation was impossible because they were always on different floors of the jail.

Although the ordinary period during which an appeal might be launched had expired, it was decided the appeal should be heard on the basis of the new evidence contained in affidavits of prisoners in the jail as to the possibility of the conversation taking place. Chernetsky was in Cassidy's company at the time the shooting occurred.

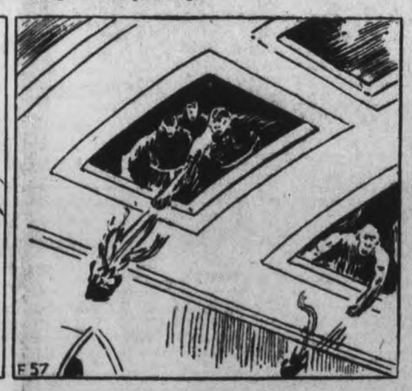
TARZAN AND THE GOLDEN LION. NO. 57 By Edgar Rice Burroughs
(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

An hour passed with no word from the Bolgani and no resumption of hostilities. Then came to the main entrance of the throne room that gorilla-man whom Tarzan had dispatched with his demand for the Bolgani's surrender. "We will never surrender," was their answer. As the ape-man, half-reclining upon the dais, flung one arm about Jad-balja, he could hear outside movements among the Bolgani. What were they up to? The ape-man and LA waited impatiently for the black reinforcements. Would they never come?

"They are hatching some evil plan," excitedly exclaimed the old man. "Watch out for a surprise soon." "Calm yourself," replied Tarzan, easily, "remember, they are not supermen—only beasts." "Beasts they may be," the old man answered, "but they are beasts with the brains of men. Long have I lived among them; their cunning and cruelty are diabolical." A long silence ensued, which began to unnerve the Gomangani. To the failure of their fellows to come to their aid was added fear of what the Bolgani were planning.



The silence was more terrifying than an actual assault. It became too much for LA. Restlessly she went, disdaining caution, to a part of the room where she could see the terrace and gardens. She beheld, massed outside, scores of gorilla-men. Going quickly to the opposite side of the throne room, she drew the hangings before one of the entrances. That, too, had its guard of Bolgani. They stood there motionless, making no effort to seize or harm her. Plainly, Tarzan was completely hedged in by enemies.

Tarzan, himself, had also noted how the Bolgani had blocked every avenue of escape. "Soon they will strike," remarked the old man, "our doom is near." "Perhaps you are right," replied Tarzan, "but at least we shall give them a good fight." "What is that?" exclaimed LA. At a sudden noise they gazed at the ceiling. There, traps were being lifted from a dozen openings revealing the scowling faces of several score of gorilla-men. And as if in answer to La's question the Bolgani began hurling burning bundles of oil-soaked rags into the throne room.

LOCAL COUPLE 50 YEARS WED

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lee Observe Golden Wedding Anniversary.

MARRIED IN ENGLAND.

In celebration of their golden wedding anniversary Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lee to-day entertained a large number of friends and relatives at the home of their son-in-law L. O. Pearce, 435 Rogers street.

Charles Lee was born at Clovelly, Devonshire, England, seventy-five years ago, while his wife formerly Annie Hambly, is a native of Hartland, also in Devonshire. She is three years her husband's senior. The couple were married at Morwens ow, England on March 30, 1882 and a little over a week later set out together to face life in a new country—Canada.

For five years they resided at Whitby, after which they lived at Port Hope for some years before coming to this city in October, 1926. Mr. Lee retired from business about two years ago. It is stated that he and his wife are still enjoying good health.

While at Port Hope Mr. Lee was employed by the Canadian Radiator Company, and also with the Nicholson Tile Works Company, after a period with an engineering firm at Lachine, Quebec.

They have one daughter, Mrs. L. O. Pearce and four grandchildren. A son, George Edward Lee, died in September, 1919.

It is interesting to note that it is eighteen years ago, almost to the date, that the late parents of Mr. Pearce celebrated their diamond wedding anniversary.

ASSAILANTS NOT KNOWN.

Two women were "mauled" by four men early Monday morning on the Port Hope highway a few miles out from the city, Highway Patrol Officer A. E. Hornick to-day told The Examiner.

The attack upon the women was reported to Officer Hornick on Monday by Jack Williams, night man at the Corner service station, ...3 Charlotte street. While admitting that he was highly incensed at the action of the men, Officer Hornick stated that he was powerless now to bring about their arrest since no description of them had been furnish d him.

The two women were left alone in a motor car with a baby, while the driver of the car, the husband of one of the women, came into Peterborough to secure gas. The car had run out of gas while the party was proceeding toward their home here, between 1 and 2 o'clock Monday morning.

When the husband returned with the gas, the two women were crying frantically and were half hysterical. They said that while the husband had been absent, a car had stopped near them. Four men got out of this car, entered their car and "mauled" them severely for several minutes.

Endeavoring to shield themselves from any publicity in the affair, the women would not give their names. Williams, the man who had supplied the gas, reported it to Officer Hornick.

Batchelor Mystery Is Still Unsolved

LINDSAY, March 30 (Examiner Correspondence).—The mystery in connection with the disappearance of County Constable Arthur Batchelor, of Haliburton, is still unsolved. A resident of the northern village stated to-day that the search would be continued as soon as the snow disappeared and the ice broke up on the lakes.

In connection with Sir Henry Drayton's request to the Dominion Government for a list of the home brew manufacturers in the Province, it is interesting to note that some twelve hundred residents in Victoria County are making their own brew under Federal permission. It is also stated that there are fully two hundred "brewers" whose names have not been listed.

Rumors have been persistent during the past few days to the effect that the local distillery would resume operations at an early date. These rumors could not be verified, however. During the past week an Excise officer has been transferred from Prescott to Lindsay, whose duties will centre principally at the distillery. Representatives of the distillery interests which acquired the plant were in town recently checking up on the liquor in stock, etc., but no announcement was made at that time regarding the future of the plant.

Dr. T. A. Kirkconnell, who became associated with the staff of the Collegiate Institute after his retirement as Principal, has signified his intention of retiring.

WARSAW CHURCHES

WARSAW, Mar. 30 (Examiner Correspondence)—A sparse congregation was out to hear a splendid Easter sermon by Rev. Mr. Sutherland in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning. The minister took his text from I. Cor. xv., verse 20: "Now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept." He gave the story of the life of St. Paul, stressing the meaning of the resurrection and then dwelt on the reality of Christ's resurrection.

There were new flower stands, with flowers which were donated to the church for Easter decorations.

A good congregation gathered in the United Church on Sunday evening. Rev. J. W. Wilkinson also had for his text, Paul's words "Now is Christ risen from the dead."

H. Batten sang "Open the Gates of the Temple." Rev. J. G. O'Connor-Fenton officiated at a ten o'clock holy communion service on Sunday morning. The pretty little church was almost filled. Besides the flowers provided by the ladies of the church, Mrs. A. G. Choate had sent several Easter lillies.

An Easter evening service was announced, but owing to the condition of the roads between Norwood and Warsaw Mr. Fenton could not come.

Pastor Walker in the Baptist Church in the afternoon also chose the text from I. Cor. xv., verse 20, and preached an Easter sermon stressing the need of the living Christ. There was special Easter music.

On Sunday evening, April third, a pageant "The Challenge of the Cross will be given by the Star Sunday School class at the special W. M.S. Sunday evening service. Special music is being prepared by the choir in connection with the pageant.

APSLEY UNITED CHURCH

APSLEY, Mar. 30 (Examiner Correspondence)—The Easter service at the Apsley United Church was held at 7 p.m. The church was beautifully decorated with Easter lilies, crosses and mottoes. Mr. Hazelwood, the pastor sang a solo, "The Heart that was broken for me." The choir sang "Low in the Grave He Lay." Ray Brown taking the solo part.

The subject of the sermon was "If Christ be dead," pointing out, what life would be like if Christ had not risen from the grave, and closed by showing how the disciples responded when they learned that Christ was alive, we of to-day to take the lesson, that having felt the power of the resurrection, we ought to work to establish Christ's kingdom on earth, with the same zeal as the disciples had when they knew that Christ had conquered over sin and this grave.

Special credit should be given to this choir for their splendid selections, both on Easter Sunday and Good Friday night.

WHY THE SPINE?

The Adult Spinal Column consists of twenty-four freely movable vertebrae together with the sacrum and coccyx. Large nerve trunks emit through openings between these vertebrae. The vital nerve force within the body is carried by these nerves from the brain to the various organs, muscle and tissue cells.

Due to the stress and strain of life these vertebrae are subject to slight derangement which causes pressure upon nerves, interrupting the normal transmission of nerve energy between brain and tissues. This promotes weakness, improper function and disease in the parts supplied by the impinged nerves.

Our objective is to locate and correct these spinal nerve pressures and restore a normal flow of nerve force to weakened tissues.

OLD THRILLER IN EARNEST

GREENSBURG, Pa. — The old melodramic thriller with two men battling on a precipice brink was re-enacted here in dead earnest. John Vacko and Melle Blanish, high school boys, fought with their fists, atop a 35-foot slate dump, police were told. Vasko toppled over to his death.

BOSTON.—The New York Rangers will play the second game of the series for the Stanley Cup at the Boston Garden, April 7, it was announced to-day. Their opponent will be the survivor after the Montreal Maroons and the Toronto Maple Leafs fight it out. Shoots Rival, Girl; Given Life Sentence

ST. IGNACE, Mich., March 31.—A sentence of life imprisonment in solitary confinement in the Michigan branch prison at Marquette was passed to-day on Leonard Minor, 25-year-old Chippewa County youth who shot and killed his chum and a girl companion.

Minor was charged with shooting Harold Martindale, 25, and Miss Lennie Seay, 14, as they sat at an organ in a farm home near Rexford in Mackinac County last Sunday night. Rivalry with Martindale over the girl's affections led to the shooting, officials said.

March's Last Day Spoils Old Adage

TORONTO, March 31 (C.P.). Like a docile little lamb, March bade farewell for another year to-day. Disproving the old adage that "March comes in like a lion and goes out like a lamb," the month came in and went in peaceful style.

"That old saying has no scientific basis whatsoever," said the weatherman to-day. "The coming in and going out of March has nothing at all to do with the weather."

Back on March 1, the consensus of weather reports for all parts of the Dominion were fair with not much change in temperature. History repeated itself to-day with practically the same prediction, although the weatherman did promise rain for many sections of the country.

MAN IS FOUND LYING IN DITCH

Thomas McFadden is Thrown Off His Bicycle on Port Hope Highway.

FAINTING SPELL.

Badly shaken up and bruised about the head as a result of a fall from his bicycle, Thomas M. McFadden, 82, of 299 Pearl Avenue, was last evening discovered lying in the south ditch on the Port Hope Highway, in the vicinity of the Webber farm.

The old gentleman's plight was discovered by James Fryer, traveller for Blakeley & Company of Toronto, who was motoring into the city.

George J. Sherry, Clerk of the County Court, who came upon the scene a few moments later, telephoned for assistance, and the old gentleman, after having sufficiently recovered, was conveyed home by car.

It is stated that Mr. McFadden had been to visit his son-in-law George Hunter, who lives on the Highway, and was returning to his home, when he was apparently overcome by a fainting spell.

Provincial Constable David Silvester and Traffic Officer E. Hornick, who were called, rendered valuable assistance.

HENRY PLANNING TO EXTEND SCHOOL FOR DEAF AND DUMB

Addition to Present Building Will Be Erected to Segregate Younger Children.

ROOM SCARCE AT PRESENT.

TORONTO, March 31 (C.P.) — Plans for the extension of the Ontario School for the Deaf and Dumb at Belleville are progressing and will be completed soon, Premier George S. Henry told the elementary department of the Ontario Educational Association in convention here.

It is the intention of the Department of Education to erect an addition to the present building to segregate younger children, he said. In this way, it is expected the deaf pupils will learn the lip reading method before they learn the sign method.

Numerous children throughout the province had been unable to attend the school owing to lack of accommodation, the Premier declared.

Man's ability to learn reaches its maximum at the age of 25 years, Prof. J. A. Long of Toronto, told members of the supervising and training section. After 25 years, the learning ability decreased at so slow a rate that man lost less than one per cent of learning ability per year.

RED WORKERS ABOUT TO GET RAISES IN PAY

Maximum Monthly Income Likely to be Trebled for Party Members.

SCHEME BY STALIN.

Time Lost by Officials Seeking Food to Meet Wage Budget Infuences Action.

By Stanley P. Richardson, A. P. Staff Correspondent

MOSCOW, Mar. 31.—Members of the Communist Party, including the highest government officials, as well as factory workers who heretofore have been limited to the most meagre salaries, may soon cash in on substantial raises in pay.

The political bureau, it was learned today is considering trebling the maximum monthly income allowed party members from 300 to 900 rubes (about $150 to $450.)

The raises are planned in accordance with the policy outlined by Joseph Stalin nine months ago when he decided on the abolition of the system of "equal wages for all." Factory workers heretofore have been limited to the smallest salaries in order to set an example for the rest of the proletariat.

Three Factors

Three factors were said to be inspiring the action. The first is the enormous loss of time and energy by party members holding important posts due to the necessity for seeking out places where they may buy the necessaries of life at prices commensurate with their incomes. The second is that many, especially those with large families, have sought extra work at writing or at lecturing in order to augment their income. The third is that many capable officials have refused to accept posts of responsibility because they received the same pay as subordinates they would receive as chiefs, without the responsibility.

Only the highest officials, such as commissars, probably vice-commissars, and heads of important government trusts would receive the 900 ruble maximum, but lesser officials would be advanced proportionately above their present pay.

Since the revolution members of the party have been strictly limited to the smallest incomes and the plainest lives in accordance with Lenin's watchword for the pure Communist state: "From each according to his ability, and to each according to his needs."

NEW HYDRO BUILDING

TORONTO.—The Toronto Hydro Commission to-day gave instructions for the calling of tenders for construction of a new $1,000,000 building on Carlton street.

POONA, India, March 31. (C.P. Cable).—"Sorry, but they must be British," declared General Sir George Jeffreys, new General Officer Commanding the Indian Southern Command, on his first shopping expedition in Poona to-day upon arrival from England.

The General wanted new shaving tackle and went without it when he found he could not obtain shaving requisites made in Britain. British officers generally were expected to follow his example.

PARENTS TO DIE MAY 16 FOR MURDER OF BABY SON

CORTLAND, N.Y., Mar. 31.—R. J. Simpson and his wife, Mary Field, to-day were convicted of murder, first degree, as a result of the death of her 14 months old boy, whose body was found in a lake near their home last September.

A verdict of "not guilty by reason of insanity" had been asked by counsel for each of the defendants. The Simpsons were ordered taken to Sing Sing prison to die the week of May 16. Throughout the trial the defense emphasized that the mental ages of the man and wife were under that of a child of 12.

The child's body, when found in the lake was mutilated. Bloodstains, however, were not found either at the home of the parents in Homer, or near the lake.

These four secretaries were appointed temporarily for three months, pending some reorganization.

PROGRESS IS BEING MADE DECORATING COURT ROOM

Division Court which opens tomorrow, presided over by His Honor Judge E. C. S. Huycke, is to be held in the small court room, the larger room being still in the hands of the painters and decorators.

The Property Committee of the County Council which met at the Court House yesterday afternoon under the chairmanship of Reeve C. S. Tanner of Lakefield, expressed great satisfaction at the progress of the work at the Court House.

The scaffolding has been dismantled, now that redecoration of the walls and ceiling is complete. The walls are covered in an artistic wallpaper with a granite-marble effect. Other improvements which it is confidently expected will overcome acoutstical defects in the room, also include the hanging of mulberry colored velour drapes over the window frames and the closing of the gallery at the east end of the room. The flags—the Canadian Red Ensign and the Union Jack which adorn the Judge's dais, are at present being dry cleaned.

13-Foot Banner Made For Lyons

The Canadian Flag Manufacturing Company, Brock Street, of which Mrs. Harold Dunford is at the head, has just completed an unusually attractive thirteen-foot banner for the Port Hope Lion's Club. This streamer, which is in the club's colors, purple and gold, with the Lion's emblem in the centre, will be kept on display at Lion Club luncheons in Port Hope, along with the club's charter, which is to be draped with Canadian and American flags, also made by the Canadian Flag Manufacturing Company. The local firm is busy these days, an order having been received from the Federal Government for the manufacture of a number of nine-foot Union Jacks, work upon which is now under way.

GOV'T CONTROL, NOT OWNERSHIP URGED IN RADIO

Manufacturers' Association Believes Efficiency Can Be Had Under Present System.

ORGANIZED IN 2 YEARS.

McFarlane Sees at Least $7 License Fee if System Publicly Owned.

OTTAWA, Mar. 31.— (C. P.) — Continuation of private ownership of radio "with goverament control but not government ownership" was urged before the House of Commons Committee on Radio today by J. C. McFarlane, speaking for the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. Good programmes, and efficiency and economy were the objects to be achieved, he said, and he believed these could be attained as well unde. the system by which the business was developed.

All privately owned radio systems in Canada were owned and operated by Canadian personnel, Mr. McFarlane said.

Prior to hearing witnesses, R. K. Saith, (C. Cumberland), informed the committee that Nova Scotia desired to be represented by counsel and would present a brief on April 6 or 7. On the motion of E. J. Garland, (U.F.A. Bow River), it was agreed to name a sub-committee to deal with questions of this kind, and that sub-committee will meet to-day.

The Radio committee, which is under the chairmanship of Dr. Raymond Morand, sat for the first time since the Easter recess.

Expert Witnesses.

Mr. McFarlane was introduced by J. E. Walsh, and it was stated that the Canadian Manufacturers' Association would bring expert witnesses to present evidence in connection with the Association's brief. These included a radio manufacturering executive, a broadcast announcer and an advertising expert.

The brief was similar to that presented before the Air Commission in 1929, Mr. McFarlane said.

A mailed questionnaire to ascertain the feelings of listeners as to the popularity of United States' programmes, conducted by a Toronto advertising firm, had revealed that those who were interested enough to reply were overwhelmingly in favor of the United States' programs as against purely Canadian entertainment, the witness said.

Privately-owned stations, under favorable circumstances, could place broadcasting on a satisfactory basis and give Canada complete coverage within two years, Mr. McFarlane said.

Found Not Guilty Of Murdering Son By Cobourg Jury

Hugh Greenshields, Charged With Murdering His Five Year Old Son Last November, is Found to Have Been Insane at Time When He Committed the Deed.

ORDER ISSUED KEEPING GREENSHIELDS IN JAIL AWAITING PLEASURE OF LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR

(By Staff Reporter)

COBOURG, Mar. 31.—"We the jury find that the accused Hugh Greenshields is not guilty on the grounds that he was insane at the time of the offence."

Such was the verdict delivered to Mr. Justic Raney this afternoon by John Byam of Millbrook, foreman of the jury and which concluded another chapter in the tragedy which caused a father to beat his two children with such force, that he killed William, aged five, and the other seriously injured on the morning of November 13 last.

His Lordship's comment upon the verdict was brief. "I don't see how you could have found any other verdict", he remarked.

Speaking to Charles A. Payne, K. C., Belleville, special Crown Prosecutor, Mr. Justice Raney said, "I will issue an order that Greenshields be kept in jail at Cobourg until the pleasure of the Lieutenant Governor is known. I thought of sending him to Whitby at once, but it might result in complications. I suggest to you that you ask Colonel Boggs to expedite his removal as the jail is not a proper place for him. He ought not to be kept there."

The defence closed its case at noon.

Dr. W. Herriman, superintendent of the Ontario Hospital for the insane at Toronto, stated from his examination of accused and the circumstances surrounding the tragedy, he believed Greenshields had been the victim of traumatic insanity with an epileptic evident. The fact that accused, according to evidence at the trial, had suffered from appendicitis, influenza, and concussion of the brain in closely linked consequence would be very likely to produce an abnormal mental condition, Dr. Herriman declared.

In such an epileptic attack, the actions during the tragedy would be automatic in reality, although inwardly they might appear deliberate, he believed.

Yesterday's long chapter of evidence, most of it repeated from the inquest and preliminary hearing, closed on Mr. Justice Raney's suggestion to N. A. MacColl of Campbellford, defense counsel, to consult with Dr. Wm. C. Herriman, government alienist, and decide according to the prescription of the criminal code "whether or not you consider the accused is mentally capable of conducting his defense."

When Court opened this morning Mr. McColl announced that the defence was not pleading that the prisoner was not capable of going on with his trial. This meant that the prisoner's case would go before the jury. If the report had been negative this morning, Greenshields, it is understood, would have been committed to an asylum indefinitely, or rather until such time that it could be shown to the authorities that the prisoner had recovered his sanity.

Two of the three government specialists in neuropathology who were assigned to this case because the sorely stricken Greenshields family had not the means to engage other experts, and who were actually called as defense witnesses, Dr. J. A. Hannah and Dr. T. B. McGie, director of Ontario Hospital Services, expressed the opinion that Greenshields understood the progress of the trial, and that he was being tried for the murder of his son.

A Woman's Courage.

The most heart-touching episode of Wednesday's evidence was the story told by Mrs. Greenshields of the struggle of her husband and herself against a relentless adversity that frustrated their efforts to gain a footing and competence on a western farm, which they had to relinquish to the Soldier Settlement Board after seven years of profitless work that wore down the wife's health. After other questing about for Chance's favor and opportunity the Greenshields settled on a farm near Trenton, where the husband in spite of the wounds and scars of his war service, earned an

BURGLAR ENTERS HABOCO STORE

Office is Ransacked But Only Tobacco and Biscuits Taken.

HAD LIGHT LUNCH.

The city's lengthening record of complete freedom from crime was shattered last night when the head office and main store of the Haboco chain of grocery stores was burglarized.

Although the burglar thoroughly ransacked the office and store at 168 Charlotte it is thought that he secured only some tobacco and cigarettes for his labors. Crumbs found on the counter this morning indicate that the thief enjoyed a light lunch of biscuits during a rest in his search for money.

The burglar gained entry through the door leading from Charlotte street to the stairway to the office above the store, it is believed. Using a jimmy, he forced the lock from the office door and the door into the bakery. Both office and bakery were ransacked.

Sawed Panel From Door

Going down the back stairs to the rear entrance of the store, the burglar sawed a panel from the door, reached in and pulled out the bolt, which held it fastened. The cash register was locked and resisted his efforts to open it, so he broke it open with the jimmy. One hundred coppers were in the cash register, which he took but later deposited in two milk bottles at the top of the stairs near the bakery door.

It is thought that the tobacco and buscuits completed the full amount of his spoils.

He left the jimmy which he had used in forcing the doors, on a packing case in the store. It was handed over to Detective-Sergeant William Meagher during his investigation to-day and will be fingerprinted carefully.

MAN IS INJURED ON HIGHWAY

Bethany Man Suffers Severe Injuries Near Springville.

TAKEN TO HOSPITAL.

Richard Harry Johnston, 29, garage mechanic of Bethany, sustained a possible fracture of the skull, a broken nose and a fractured jawbone in an early morning accident in the vicinity of Harry Clark's gateway on Highway 28 at Springville. The injured man was admitted to Nicholls Hospital shortly after 3 o'clock this morning in a semi-conscious condition. Dr. G. R. Scott is in attendance.

It is stated that Johnston was driving south on the highway, and when near Clark's gateway, just below Springville, his automobile veered off into the east ditch, striking a culvert with such force that the car was overturned and badly damaged. Traffic Officer E. A. Hornick investigated and ordered the man's removal to hospital.

At 10.25 last evening it was definitely established, Johnston had been in accident at the corner of Hunter and George streets. While driving north on George street he had suddenly turned left into Hunter street, hitting a car going south and driven by Edward Long, R.R. 7, Peterborough. Long said that the driver of the car had not stopped, but the car license was M Z 421, which was that of Johnston's car.

LAND ON CEMENT WALK.

SYDNEY, N.S., Mar. 31.—(C.P.) —Leaping 25 feet to a concrete sidewalk, two men escaped death this morning during a fire that wiped out two business establishments with a loss of $60,000.

The men were trapped in their sleeping quarters as the flames swept through Snells bakery, Pitt street, and the adjoining Sandau Bottling Works.

James McDougall jumped from the window without hesitation and landed fairly on his feet without being hurt.

The telephone rang just as Chester Snell was about to jump and the sound momentarily distracted his attention. He leaped sidewise and fell sprawling on the sidewalk. He is now in city hospital suffering from injuries that may prove serious.

FOUR BOYS HAVE NARROW ESCAPE

Ice Gives Away in Jackson Park Dam Throwing Boys Into Water.

RESCUED BY CARETAKER.

Marooned on a drifting ice floe at the mercy of a swirling current...narrow escape from possible drowning in the chill waters...a timely rescue...dry clothing and a ride home in a taxi.

No! These are not some of the sub-titles from the latest movie serial thriller—just some of the incidents in the holiday excursion of a quartete of local schoolboys. The hero of the piece was R. L. Orde, caretaker of Jackson Park.

According to Mr. Orde the four boys who gave their names as Albert Prince, 309 McDonnel street; Billie and Eddie Reid, 485 McDonnel street and Peter Williams, 315 Murray street, were playing on the ice at the Kiwanis pool in Jackson Park yesterday. Without warning the ice on which the boys were standing detached itself from the main body and floated over the small dam. The boys, all under eleven years of age, were thrown into the water.

Assisting them from the uncomfortable predicament, Mr. Orde took the youthful quartette to his home in the Park and divested them of their wet clothing.

While their "togs" were drying out, the boys lay huddled up in wrappers kindly supplied by their benefactor, and absorbing the kindly heat from a radiator.

JAPS DETERMINE FOUR DISTRICTS MUST BE HELD

Both Sides Near Agreement on Time Limit for Troop Withdrawals.

PARLEY BRIGHTENS.

Chinese Refuse to Concede Woosung and Kiangwan Districts.

(By Morris J. Harris, A.P. Staff Correspondent)

SHANGHAI, March 31.—Definite progress toward a settlement of the major issue of withdrawal of Japanese troops from the Shanghai area was made to-day at the reopening of the Sino-Japanese peace parleys.

As a result a breakdown of the conference, anticipated by some observers during the two-day adjournment, was averted and the delegates resumed their discussions in a more conciliatory mood than since the parleys began.

A spokesman for the conference said both sides were gradually approaching an understanding on the question of a time limit for the troop withdrawals, and that mutual concessions were being made. The conference adjourned again to meet Saturday at 10 a.m.

Important Advances

The military sub-committee which is meeting at the same time as the main conference also made important advances, it was stated, when the Chinese members showed a willingness to meet the Japanese half way in settling the limits of the Japanese retirement.

Under their most recent concessions, the Japanese have agreed to withdraw into four separated districts, as follows:

1.—The Woosung zone, including the railway yards and docks.

2.—Hongkew Park, including a small sector of Chapei extending a mile east of the Woosung Railway.

3.—The Yangtzepoo district, including the present Japanese headquarters at the Kungdah cotton mill and the adjacent area, extending a mile outside the Settlement boundaries.

4.—The vicinity of the Kiangwan race course, east of the village of Kiangwan.

The Chinese, on the other hand, have refused to concede the Woosung district, although they have agreed to permit the Japanese to use a strip of territory between Woosung railway yards and the northwest edge of the settlement. They also have objected to the Japanese using the Kiangwan district and any portion of Chapei west of the railway.

Japanese Limit

The Japanese declared they were unwilling to make any further concessions because it would be impossible to quarter their 50,000 troops and 5,000 horses in a smaller area. They announced, however, for the first time, that they would be willing to set a time limit for their withdrawal into any zone agreed upon, but that the final withdrawal from the Shanghai zone must depend on circumstances.

The negotiators agreed this morning that the Chinese forces would remain in their present positions.

Bladder Weakness Wrecking Health of Thousands

A big percentage—some claim two out of three—of men and women of mature years are troubled with Bladder and Urinary Weakness, causing Backaches, Headaches, Nervousness, frequent night risings and burning irritations throughout the day. These conditions not only make life miserable, but they sap vitality, undermine health and frequently lead to most painful operations.

In an effort to swiftly relieve and comfort even the most obstinate and distressing of these conditions, a well known physician offers the value of "Uratabs," a treatment he has successfully used for over 40 years. Dr. Southworth's "Uratabs" come in plain sealed packages containing 10 days' treatment—and all who need such a medicine are invited to try it at once without slightest risk of cost unless pleased with results. Any good druggist will supply you on a binding guarantee of satisfaction or money back on first box purchased.

HOPES RAISED IN KIDNAP CASE

Admiral Burrage Confident Trio Are Dealing With Baby's Abductors.

SECRET PARLEYS.

NORFOLK, Va., Mar. 30. — The veil of secrecy has not lifted today from negotiations for the return of the kidnapped Lindbergh baby but the three intermediaries were on record as believing they were in touch with the child's abductors.

Speaking for himself and his two associates, Rear Admiral Guy N. Burrage told a conference of newspapermen last night that "I wouldn't have gone into the case, and I wouldn't be in now unless I was satisfied that we were dealing with the abductors of the Lindbergh baby."

This statement was made at the close of a conference during which the Admiral attempted to answer 15 questions previously prepared and submitted to him by the reporters.

To three of the questions each dealing with the identification of the child for whose return negotiations are in progress, Admiral Burrage said only, "I am sure Col. Lindbergh will recognise his son when he sees him."

Stories Differ

To another question which pointed out that Hopewell, and Norfolk stories do not dovetail in the emphasis placed upon the value of the clue being investigated by the three intermediaries and asked an explanation of apparently conflicting statements made by Dean H. Dobson-Peacock, former Canadian rector, one of the intermediaries and Col. Schwarzkopf superintendent of state police, Admiral Burrage said "easily understood, as Col. Schwarzkopf is in constant touch with Col. Lindbergh."

He was silent as to another plane trip made by John Hughes Curtis, another of the negotiators, Saturday and Sunday to an unnannounced destination.

"Questioned at his home last night Mr. Curtis said that the plane in which he left Norfolk later landed at Philadelphia but declined to say whether he was in the plane at the time.

He would not answer a question as to whether he later conferred with Col. Lindbergh at or near Hopewell.

TROOPS GATHER AT VLADIVOSTOK

Tokyo War Office States Soviets Making Munitions, Concentrating Guns.

CITIZENS GAS-DRILLING.

TOKYO, Mar. 31. (A.P.) — The War Office published to-day an official report from Harbin which told of concentration of 30,000 Soviet Russian troops at Vladivostok and said the number has been increased steadily since last January by arrival of reinforcements from Europe.

Since the end of January, the report said, Soviet authorities have been confiscating the property of inhabitants of the Siberian Maritime provinces whom they suspected of "White" tendencies. About 20,000 of these suspected "Whites" have been deported to Central Siberia, it said.

Heavy motorized artillery passes through the streets of Vladivostok every day, it added, and the fortifications of the Russian Island at the harbor have been strengthened by at least a dozen new heavy guns. The former arsenal on the Russian Island is also working to capacity, the report said.

Citizens of Vladivostock have been compelled to participate in anti-gas drills and a new Soviet airdrome has been established on Bossiet Bay, near the Korean border, it concluded.

New Zealand Hoping To Benefit By Parley

WELLINGTON, N.Z., March 31.—(C.P. Cable).—Hopes of increased reciprocal tariff concessions from Great Britain and the remainder of the Empire resulting from the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa are entertained by New Zealand, declared Prime Minister G. W. Forbes to-day in the House of Representatives.

The Prime Minister added the Government was not yet prepared to make public the policy its representatives would follow at Ottawa, but he suggested New Zealand might negotiate for tariff concessions in addition to those granted by Great Britain in her new trade bill.

Mr. Justice Goddard, who is an authority on banking laws, will be one of the youngest judges on the bench. He is 54 years of age.

Lad Loses His Life Jumping Off Train

NORTH BAY, Mar. 31, (CP).—Leo Shanks, 16, was instantly killed at Cache Bay Tuesday night when he attempted to alight from the west bound local train after riding between the vestibule of the first class coach and the sleeper, from Sturgeon Falls, a distance of about two miles. In company with a lad named Lachance, he was stealing a ride back home when the accident occurred. As they neared the station, the other boy jumped clear off the train, but Shanks missed his footing and fell between the cars. The wheels ran over his head, crushing the skull. An inquest will be held.

BLANK CHEQUE BILL IS GIVEN SECOND READING

Liberal Amendment is Voted Down in House by 100 to 64.

PROGRESSIVES SPLIT.

Ralston Makes Charges of Partisanship in Nova Scotia Relief Work.

OTTAWA, March 31 (C.P.). — Battling through to the end of the road, Liberals offered an amendment to the Government's Unemployment Relief Bill during a tranquil sitting of the House of Commons yesterday. It was voted down 100 to 64, a Government majority of 36. Shortly afterwards, the Bill received second reading, but in the short session yesterday was not carried through committee stage. It will be discussed further to-day.

Charges of political partisanship in distribution of relief work in Nova Scotia, levelled by J. L. Ralston, former Minister of National Defence, cause a mild flare-up during the day. Local patronage committees, it was charged, selected men for relief work, sometimes passing up worthy applicants in favor of men with bank accounts and private enterprise.

Willing to Probe.

Hugh A. Stewart, Minister of Public Works, said investigation would be made by the Dominion if the Nova Scotia member would place names and facts in writing On mere "hearsay" investigation could not be made.

The Liberal amendment, moved by Ian Mackenzie, Vancouver Centre, would have had the effect of killing the Relief Bill and placing the House on record as favoring a Supply Bill as the proper medium of providing unemployment expenditures. Liberals were joined by all but three of the Independents, Laborites, United Farmers, and Progressives in support. Conservatives opposed it to a man.

In the Upper House, further consideration was given to Senator J. P. B. Casgrain's motion calling for a parliamentary study of all the treaties with the United States before completion of an agreement for the St. Lawrence Development.

TARIFF WIPES OUT NEED OF MARKETING BOARD

LONDON, March 31 (C.P. Cable) —With the adoption by Great Britain of a general tariff coupled with Imperial preferences, the raison d'etre of the Empire Marketing Board as at present constituted and financed disappears, said the report to-day of the Select Committee on estimates. "The general question of the future joint economic machinery of the Empire will doubtless receive careful consideration at the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa," said the report.

Any future Imperial economic organization would presumably limit itself to schemes of Imperial concern as opposed to purely national schemes, and its expenditure would be met by contributions on an equitable basis from all parts of the Empire, the report forecast.

BRITAIN'S SUCCESS LEADS U.S. INTO BUDGET BALANCING FLURRY

Test Expected When Soldiers' Bonus Bill for $2,000,000 is Presented.

SPLIT ON SALES TAX.

By Ken Clark, C. P. Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Mar 31.—Suddenly seized with a desire to balance the budget the United States House of Representatives is expected today to continue to put levies on various articles.

Almost as London despatches announced Great Britain will end its fiscal year today with a small surplus in its treasury, the representatives chided by President Hoover and pleaded with by John Nance Garner, Democratic Speaker, suddenly evinced what amounted to a fury for balancing the budget. There is no doubt that much of the patriotic fervor evident in the house is perfectly sincere, but there is also no doubt a good deal of it is occasioned by the terrific lambasting given the representatives by the press and their own constituents for not passing the proposed sales tax.

Garner's Appeal

Washington correspondents accustomed to treat the doings of their House of Representatives with considerable awe at least in these writings spoke with becoming reverence on Wednesday of the pursuasive and eloquent oration made by Mr. Garner from the floor of the House. Mr. Garner's speech, more detached writers observe, was a fairly good speech and apparently of some result, but they cannot refrain from remarking the campmeeting windup when with arms outstretched the white-haired Texan solemnly made the appeal, "every member who wants to balance the budget please rise." All rose, despite some tittering in the press gallery.

The test of the effectiveness of the general appeal to balance the budget—something requiring taxation to collect $1,233,000,000 — will come when proponents of the soldiers' bonus present their bill for giving the veterans of the Great War straight out $2,000,000,000. If the House passes the bonus bill, and in spite of Mr. Hoover's denunciation everybody expects it will, the action will mean that the frenzied passing of excise taxes was accomplished because the legislators were frightened and not because they wanted to balance the budget.

Prefers Kingston; Wish is Granted

SUDBURY, Mar. 31.—(C.P.) Percy Greenwood, who escaped from the Industrial Farm at Burwash Monday, felt an irresistable urge to see his fiancee. He returned to Sudbury and was promptly arrested early yesterday. A little later he pleaded guilty to escaping from custody and was sentenced to two years in Portsmouth Penitentiary.

But before retiring from the court room, Percy expressed his opinion of Burwash. "I never want to go back to Burwash again. I want to go to Kingston where I can learn a trade. All you can learn at Burwash is how to use an axe and saw."

Girl Badly Burned Pouring Oil On Fire

HAVELOCK, Mar. 31. (Examiner Correspondence).—Mildred Forbes, the twelve-year-old daughter of Mr and Mrs. Edward Forbes of Round Lake, was rather badly burned about the face and arms, on Wednesday morning at eight o'clock, when she attempted to light the fire in the kitchen stove at her home. Although warned by her father not to use coal oil, the little girl disregarded the warning and poured a large quantity of oil on the wood in the stove. When a match was applied the resulting explosion ignited her clothing, and though it was extinguished it was not until after she had received painful burns. She was brought to Havelock by her father where she was attended by one of the local doctors.

CHICAGO.—There are only two classes of children in the United States these days who are mannerly —children of the very poor and children of the very rich.

This was the observation of silver-haired Mrs. Mary "Ma" Lyons, known to several generations of the travelling public, who to-day, at the age of 70, is retiring after 36 years with a railroad company as nursery matron.

CHURCH SEEKS TO MAKE MARRIAGE VOWS STICK

CHICAGO. — The Episcopal Church has begun new efforts to make marriage vows "stick."

Members contemplating matrimony will henceforth receive instructions on the responsibilities of married life.

New rules were distributed among the churches of the Chicago diocese yesterday with a statement from the Rev. Harold Holt, rector of Grace Church, Oak Park, in which he said 90 per cent. of all divorces were obtained on "silly" grounds.

CALL GOVERNMENT SPECIALISTS AS WITNESSES FOR THE DEFENSE

excellent reputation for industry and character until he was attacked with appendicitis followed by a severe infection of influenza, and as a further blow as if by some malign fate Greenshields was struck by a motor truck suffering head injuries, which have impaired his nervous system of which the brain is a major organ.

The generous and sustained assistance of Campbellford people to this family could be presently understood in listening to the narrative of this Scottish girl of thirty-five (Greenshields is thirty-seven) and glimpsing her courage that has been tried and shaken but is still unbowed by a succession of cruel buffets, asking for any work, as her minister proudly related of her, "only that it be honest."

A bright and cheerful woman who has retained a touch of youth in spite of her troubles, Mrs. Greenshields presented a brave figure of the high heart that might be an example in resoluteness and faith and indomitable spirit, accentuated because its very femininity, in this period of bankrupt selfishness when so many people seem quick to magnify their recent worries into grim and overwhelming misfortune.

Charles A. Payne, K.C., of Belleville, is special Crown Prosecutor for the Assizes in which there is only one criminal case listed.

George E. Bailey.

George E. Bailey, photographer of Campbellford, was the first witness called by Mr. Payne. He identified photographs of the interior of Mrs. Rutherford's house, one of them being the bedroom occupied by the Grenshields boys, which he had taken on the day of the tragedy.

Mrs. Rutherford.

Mrs. Isabel Rutherford, whose home on King street, Campbellford, was shared by the Greenshields family last November, explained the arrangements of their occupancy.

"Mr. Greenshields came into my part of the house about 11 o'clock and told me he had killed his two boys and asked me to send for the police," she continued.

Mr. Payne terminated his examination with that evidence.

To Mr. MacColl, witness said she had heard no sounds in the Greenshields part of the house that morning. They had been tenants two months, and "got along well together."

"Did you notice anything strange about the father before the tragedy?"

"Yes. For a day or two before I noticed him peeking around the verandah and he had a wild expression on his face."

Mrs. Tillie Woods.

Mrs. Tillie Woods told Mr. Payne she lived opposite the Greenshields house.

"I went across when I heard of the affair. I saw no one when I first went in. Then I saw Mr. Greenshields as he was coming down the stairs. I took him by the arm and helped him to a chair. He was holding his hands to his head and seemed to be weakening."

"I stood talking to Mrs. Walter Rutherford, Mr. Beggs and Gordon Dunham. Then I went upstairs. In the boys' room I saw Walter was living, but the other boy was cold and we thought he was dead. Willie was on his side facing the wall. Walter, the older boy, was on the front of the bed."

Witness said that Walter's head was swollen over one eye and was marked with blood. On the floor she saw a cloth which seemed to have been used to wipe up blood.

Mr. Payne—Did you hear the father say anything?

"As he came down the stairs he said, 'I don't know what made me do it. Something came over me'."

His Lordship—To whom was that said.

"There were four of us, Mrs. Walter Rutherford, Gordon Dunham, George Beggs and myself."

Mrs. Woods said she was in the kitchen when Dr. W. F. Loucks found a stick, presumably used by Greenshields. It was between two and three feet long, less than two inches square, and one end had been whittled into a handle. She also identified a small bottle with an iodine label which she had seen in Mrs. Greenshields' hands.

Cross-examined by Mr. MacColl witness said the two boys had apparently not been up that morning.

"Why do you say you tried to help Mr. Greenshields?"

"He seemed very weak and was crying bitterly."

"He had just committed a murder, weren't you afraid of him?"

"No, I didn't think of being afraid of him."

Mrs. Woods said the accused had always seemed to be a very kind father.

Mr. Payne—Did he appear normal when he spoke to you?

"I didn't think so. That was why I tried to calm him."

Found Bloodstained Stick.

Dr. W. F. Loucks, next witness, told of having found the stick produced in court. It was on some wood beside a stove.

"Were there any marks of blood on it?"

"Yes, a few drops of fresh blood near the end opposite the handle. I asked Greenshields if that was the stick he used, and he said it was or he thought it was."

"He answered you intelligently?"

"Apparently he did."

Mr. MacColl—How long was Billy dead when you got there after eleven o'clock?

"I'd say about two hours."

Dr. Loucks said the boy's death was caused by a depressed fracture of the skull. Walter also had a fractured skull, but he was sent to the hospital and the fracture was removed. The boy seemed to be quite normal again.

Constable W. J. Carey.

Provincial Constable W. J. Carey of Cobourg recalled his call to Campbellford on November 13, arriving at 2.20 p.m. He saw Greenshields in the town lock-up.

"On the way back to Cobourg jail he asked me once if both boys were dead. When I first saw him in the lock-up he seemed to be very worried and was sitting with his head in his hands."

Mr. Payne—Did you take a statement from him at Cobourg?

"Yes."

"Did you warn him?"

"Yes. I also called in Dr. Wilkins. He had a conversation with Greenshields, and after that I took the voluntarily statement from accused."

A material part of the statement by Greenshields was: "Something seemed to come over me. I don't know what it was. I took a drink of iodine. I don't know whether it was before or after I hit the boys. I saw blood on them and went down and told Mrs. Rutherford."

Constable McBrien.

Provincial Constable McBrien of Belleville reached Campbellford shortly after 12 noon.

"I saw both boys upstairs. The dead boy had been removed to the larger room. With Constable Atkinson I took Hugh Greenshields to the lockup. He was a very nervous, near to a breakdown. I did not take any statement from him there, but I was present when he made the statement to Officer Carey at Cobourg.

Mr. McBrien told of Greenshields' serious injury last June, his unconsciousness for nearly three days, and his weakness and mental dullness two weeks later when he complained of persistent pains in his head.

Mrs. Greenshields' Story.

Mrs. Sarah Greenshields, wife of the accused, was the first witness examined by Mr. MacColl in opening the defense. She said she had known her husband when he was a boy in Scotland. Coming out to Canada in 1920 they were married in Winnipeg. They lived on a farm in Manitoba, under the Soldier Settlement scheme, seven years.

"We had a lot of hardship and not much success. My health was failing me from working in the fields and I felt I couldn't stand it any longer. We had nothing when we left the farm. My husband was going to try to make better. We had hopes when we left the farm in 1928. The settlement board sold us out. Hughie worked for a few months in a Brandon livery. A bachelor gentleman asked him to go and work for him. He had a sister on the place and he said I wouldn't have hard work. We stayed with him seven months and went back to Scotland in the fall of 1928. My health was broken, and that was why we went home. He didn't get any work until the following May, and we came back to Canada in 1929. We settled in Trenton with Mr. Hendricks and were with him two years until the accident last June.

My husband was working in a fruit orchard. He was always a very fine daddy to the children. In February he had an operation for appendicitis, and when he left the hospital we were all sick with the flu. He took the flu himself and was very sick. After that he was weak, and took seizures of trembling and perspiring. He didn't seem able to stop himself from shaking. We had the doctor several times."

After the accident on June 16 last, Greenshields was unconscious nearly three days from wounds on the temple and at the base of the skull. For ten days he lay half stupid. When visitors came in he would say he couldn't see them, but he heard them and talked to them, but afterwards couldn't recall them.

"He has never worked from that day to this," Mrs. Greneshields said. "After we moved up to Seymour he wanted to sleep day and night. He had dizziness and said it came all over him and made him feel queer. When he would get up after long sleeps I would tell him he ought to feel better, but he was still weak and seemed to be exhausted."

The family moved to Seymour township in July and then went to Campbellford in September.

Lived in Harmony.

Witness said she never had any trouble with her husband. Their relations were always "all right."

Recalling the evening prior to the accident, Mrs. Greenshields said she bathed the two boys as usual and put them to bed about 8 o'clock. Her husband helped her. On Tuesday night she had found a bottle of iodine in her husband's pocket when looking for a candy for Billy. It was still wropped in paper.

"He told me it would be handy for use for scratches or cuts. We always had it in the house. I said to him it was funny he kept it in his pocket.

"Why didn't you lay it out," I asked him.

He said he forgot it.

I said, "You're not getting hopeless? We'll be provided for and I'll get lots of work." He said he wasn't.

Saw Husband Trembling.

"I went to work on Friday morning at 7 o'clock. I got my own breakfast and took Hughie up a cup of tea. I did that every morning. Before I went out, I took up his watch. He raised his pillow for me to put the watch under it. I saw that he was all trembling like, the seizures at other times. He had hardly slept any during the night. He hadn't been sleeping for several months."

Mrs. Greenshields said that three Campbellford doctors had treated her husband for a nervous condition.

Mr. MacColl—What time did you get home from work on Friday

"About eleven o'clock. I said, 'Hughie, what have you done?' He said, 'I don't know. Something came over me.' He couldn't talk very well for crying."

Mrs. Greenshields was overcome with tears when Mr. MacColl questioned her about the club. She said her husband had cut shavings from it.

Was a Good Worker.

Frank Hendricks, Murray Township farmer, recalled that Greenshields worked for him from May, 1929, until the accident in June last year.

"He was a perfect gentleman, a good worker, and a first-class man in every way," witness testified. "I noticed that he was kind in every way to his children. The family occupied a house on my farm."

Mr Hendricks said Greenshields appeared to have been considerably weakened by his illness of influenza. After the accident on the highway he seemed to be less sociable, a condition witness thought was due to poor health.

Smith Hendricks, father of the previous witness, said Greenshields and his wife were "great churchgoers."

"He was a fine worker. For a man who was shot in the war, it seemed a shame to see him working so hard, and we used to tell him he ought to take it easier."

Proud of His Boys.

James P. Archer, Campbellford, said he first knew Hugh Greenshields about August 1st last, and learned of the accident near Trenton.

"I gave him a job of light work around my house. I talked to him on several other occasions. The little lad Billy was with him, and the father seemed very proud of him."

At the time of the inquest Mr. Archer said he noticed a big change in Greenshields. He seemed to be melancholy and weak.

Minister's Tribute.

Rev. J. C. Robinson, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Campbellford, called on the family in a pastoral visit on July 29 last at their home in Seymour several miles from the town.

"They were at supper and they all rose up when I went in," witness said. "It was one of the most respectful greetings I ever received. He told me then and on other occasions that he suffered from pains in the head and could hardly raise his arms to a level with his head. I suggested to them that they move into the town where I believed work could be got. That was about September 10. Mrs. Greenshields said she would do anything that was honest to keep the family together until her husband was better."

Witness told of incidents when the accused tried to work.

"The last time I spoke to him was about ten days before the tragedy. I asked him how he was, and he told me he was getting weaker and the pains in his head were worse.

I told my session of sixteen men on one occasion that I was never prouder to receive a certificate of membership than that of this Scottish family with their religious fervor. In various conversations they never expressed any sense of sting against the man who owned the truck that struck Greenshields.

Governor Of The Jail

George L. McLaughlin, governor of the counties jail, said the accused appeared to be mentally confused, "mixed up" when placed in confinement on November 13. Throughout the winter he answered only with "yes" or "no" and seemed averse to conversation.

Roy Hutchinson, jailer, gave similar evidence, and added that for the most part the prisoner seemed dazed excepting occasional days of brightness. He complained of headaches and they would be followed by the dazed condition. His appetite was light.

Jail Surgeon

Dr. Thomas Lapp, jail surgeon, said he examined Greenshields repeatedly. He always complained of pains in the head which he said resulted from his accidentt.

"I gave him nervine tablets and tonics to help him sleep and to improve his appetite. I think it did help him somewhat"

Dr. Lapp told of various experiments to test the soundness of the prisoner's nervous system, and expressed the opinion that there was some lesion in Greenshield's brain, probably caused by the accident last June.

Tests of the reflex action of the eyes; the knee tendon test showing no response when the left leg was struck below the knee cap; the Romberg test in which the patient stands with his feet as close together as possible and shuts his eyes; if abnormal the man begins to waver or sway; this happened repeatedly with Greenshields, indicating a defect in the brain; the ankle-clonus test on the Achilles tendon of the foot, was another experiment made by the doctor. On them he based his opinion that the left side of Greenshields' nervous system was affected, suggesting a cause in the opposite side of the brain.

Replying to Mr. Payne, witness said that the whittling of the handle of the club indicated premeditation, and the wiping up of blood on the floor might be a sign of reallization of the act of slaying in this case.

Evidence of Specialist

Dr. A. T. Hannah, neuro-pathologist for the Ontario mental hospital services, said that neuro-pathology was the study of diseases of the nervous system, including the brain. He examined Greenshields on January 25 and March 29.

"I found a scar above the left ear and another on the back of the head", Mr. Hannah said. "The left pupil was more dilated than the pupil of the right eye; there was also a slower reflex action in the right eye."

Other signs indicated interference with the mechanism of vision, caused chiefly by some interruption of the nerve leading from the optic chiasma. This might show an injur, in the brain, and might be due to some irritation by infection or injury in the nerve fibres. The condition would involve the brain. Other physical tests indicated some interference with the conduction of sensation from the brain, in this case to the right leg. Dr. Hannah said that this finding taken with the eye tests fixed the condition in the brain, and the lesion would be on the right side of the brain.

Witness referred to psychiatric, emotional and intelligence tests and reviewing the evidence said that the palsied seizures or "shaking" might indicate an epileptoid condition in which the person may suddenly lose consciousness of what he is doing and may commit an overt action of which he will have no memory.

Mr. MacColl—When Mrs. Greenshields noticed the "shaking" of her husband on the morning of November 13 might that be followed by a period of acute insanity?

Dr. Hannah—The incident (of the killing) might occur in that period when he would do things and not have the memory of the act afterward.

"You think the mental condition you observed in the accused when you saw him in the jail may have relation to the head injury caused by the auto-truck?"

"I'd go further back to February and say perhaps it follows from the illness of flu. Sometimes an organism from the disease affects the brain, and the accident could have the tendency to increase or precipitate any condition from the disease subsequent to the accident.

Mr. Payne—There is no question about his suffering from a nervous condition??

Dr Hannah—No.

"Did he know the nature and quality of his act when he committed it?"

Dr. Hannah—I cannot say. My opinion is that he realized what he was doing.

Mr. Payne—Did he realize it was wrong.

Dr. Hannah—No.

Mr. Payne—Assume he whittled the club and use it; does that indicate premeditation?

Dr. Hannah—It might.

Mr. Payne—And afterwards put it back on a woodpile; that would show some cunning, wouldn't it?

Dr. Hannah—Not necessarily. It might.

Mr. Justice Raney—Assume there was premeditation in preparing the stick before attacking the boy, what do you say as to your theory that he didn't know the character of what he was doing?

Dr. Hannah—It depends on the setting in which you assume he committed the act. If he thought everyone was against him and one person in particular, he might make the stick for that purpose, but I can still say that he did not realize the nature and quality of the act, but he would realize what he was doing.

To Mr. MacColl, witness said he believed Greenshields realized that he was in court and on trial for the killing of his son.

Other witnesses were Dr. W. E. Wilkins of Cobourg who was present when Greenshields made a statement to Officer Carey; Frank Rogers and Henry Twigg of Campbellford.

"I thought he was capable of making a statement and was clear mentally."

HAVELOCK, Ma.. 31.—(Examiner Correspondence.)—At a largely attended meeting of those interested in the protection of fish and game in this district, held in the Recreation Club rooms on Friday evening last, an association to be known as Havelock and Belmont Fish and Game Protective Association was formed, with the following officers elected:

Honorary President, T. P. Lancaster; President, Dr. Jos. Holdcroft; 1st Vice-President, George Hubbell; 2nd Vice-Pres., L. A. Gould; Sec'y-Treas., C. Allan; Executive Committee, Messrs. Wm. Copp, Fred Fry, John Seeney, Harrison Wing, Bruce Curtis.

The Association heartily approved the efforts of the local member, T.P. Lancaster, to have the entire six west concessions of Methuen and a large block in Burleigh abutting thereon, the western boundaries of which are roughly Eel's Creek to the north shore of Stoney Lake, converted into a game sanctuary consisting of some five hundred thousand acres. This would give the game a chance, and make the district more attractive to the tourists and sportsmen of the province.

The membership fee was set at one dollar, and the secretary was instructed to procure membership cards, so that the support of the citizens generally could be obtained thereby.

HERBERT TRENEER SPEAKS AT MADOC

Work of National Institute for Blind Explained at Meeting.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MADOC, March 31. — The March meeting of the Madoc Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Arthur Parks on Thursday afternoon, March 24, with an attendance of 56. A report of the dance on the evening of St. Patrick's Day was given, showing all bills paid, and net proceeds of $28 for the relief fund. Regarding relief problems matters were left in the hands of the chairman of Relief and Executive Committee. A letter of thanks from Mrs. Ed Phillips was read.

Mrs. Nicol of Roseneath, a welcome visitor, spoke briefly regarding her appreciation of an Institute welcome, and work, which is much the same in most districts, and gave some items of interest regarding work at Roseneath, of which Institute she is president.

Herbert Treneer of Oshawa, the blind representative of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, spoke regarding their work. There are 6300 blind people registered with them, but probably the number of the blind would reach about nine thousand persons. This organization has checked up on thirty thousand school children; sight saving classes are maintained, and lectures are given at the Normal school to help qualify these teachers to assist children under their care. Regarding the organ recital he explained his methods and asked the Women's Institute to sponsor an organ recital under his management, proceeds to go to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. Mr. Treneer then delighted all by his rendering of "Holy City," which he followed by an instrumental solo, "The Gondoliers," afterwards playing "Valse Chromatic" for the girls on their arrival.

On motion of Mrs. James Whytock and Mrs. George Hill, it was decided that the Institute sponsor an organ recital under Mr. Treneer's management, the date to be about Friday, May 6th, arrangements to be made later.

The Junior Institute, "Busy Bees," then took charge of the program, with Miss Marion Hamm as chairman. Phyllis Stokloser gave very prettily a "Toast" to the ladies and Jean Whytock followed with a carefully prepared paper on "Current Events of the Month." A piano duet by Marion Hamm and Betty Nicol was enjoyed, after which Audrey Ellis gave an entertaining talk on "Good Health Rules," followed by adapted Nursery Rhymes by several of the members, and the very comprehensive Health Creed recited in unison; then while grouped together the girls gave two jolly choruses with Mrs. Whytock as accompanist, giving "The Capital Ship," very lustily, and following with "Little Sir Echo," very nicely sung. Jean Nickle gave a lively piano solo, "Witches' Flight," which all enjoyed. A vocal duet followed, "Sleepy Town Express," by Jean Phillips and Jean Whytock. Lorraine Avery gave a paper on "What our Junior Institute stands for," and a piano duet by Audrey Ellis and Helen Whytock, was followed by a reading by Lorne Roberts "Fairies of Erin."

A hearty vote af appreciation was tendered to the girls for their splendid program, by Mrs. G. T. Whytock, on behalf of the seniors. The National Anthem and a social half hour followed, bringing to a close a very pleasant gathering.

THE PROGRESSIVE POSITION.

The significance of the manner in which the Progressive members of the House of Commons cast their votes in the various divisions attendant on the passage of the first reading of the Government's unemployment and farm relief measure should not escape attention.

Practically all the Progressives voted with the Government for the application of closure, but when the resolution itself was voted on the majority of the Progressive votes went to the Opposition.

In other words, while these independent members were not in favor of the extension of the blank cheque plan, they realized the futility of carrying opposition to the measure to the point of constituting a blockade, and they voted accordingly.

Their position will appeal to the country as better politics and better business than the strategy followed by the official Opposition, which was not satisfied with placing its disagreement with Mr. Bennett's proposal on record and letting it go at that, but has chosen to continue the argument until it has become thread-bare and until the Opposition is made to appear in the role of obstructionists holding up the federal relief program.

Constitutional points do not loom up as of vital importance in the face of present-day conditions, and nothing therefore has been gained by prolonging this controversy until it became necessary to apply closure.

The Progressive appreciation of the situation would seem to be decidedly more accurate than that of the Opposition strategy board.

NO BLAME TO ANYBODY.

Many of the findings made by coroners' juries, especially in regard to automobile fatalities, justify the opinion that that historic form of investigating sudden deaths has outlived its usefulness and does not justify the expense involved.

When a jury returns a verdict attaching no blame to anybody in a case where four people were killed when their car was struck by a railway train and in which the evidence showed that the headlight of the locomotive was out when the train sped over the fatal crossing at a speed of more than a mile a minute, the decision is an insult to the intelligence of the public.

According to the testimony of several witnesses, the headlight had been out for at least sixteen miles, but because the train was a few minutes late no attempt had been made to fix it, and as a result of the failure of this light, which all motorists know is the chief warning of an approaching train at night, four people are dead.

The evidence was apparently not disputed; the facts are clear that this passenger train went tearing through the darkness without a warning headlight for sixteen miles at a speed estimated at 65 miles an hour.

In the face of that situation, there will be considerable amazement over the fact that the jury which investigated the quadruple killing near Belleville could find no reason for censure.

HAS DONE HARM TO LABOR.

There is little doubt of the fact that the Ontario Labor party has injured its prestige because of the unreasonable attitude it displayed at its annual convention last week.

"Both the dole demand and the call for an income super-tax stand indicted," remarks the Border Cities Star, "from the point of view of practical politics on a common ground. Each is so utterly impossible, so unreasonable and so unthinking in its range as to be doomed to certain rejection. Labor has done itself only harm, and perhaps retarded its chances of a contributory insurance system, by allowing the heat of debate to carry it into commitments of this type."

With that view the majority of people will be in thorough agreement.

The Government's attitude has already been made clear by Premier Bennett in his reply to a similar request for a dole system made by a deputation of unemployed which waited upon him recently.

So far as his administration is concerned there will be no dole, and The Examiner is satisfied that public opinion in general will endorse that attitude.

A well-planned and actively sound form of contributory unemployment insurance is one thing and a half-baked scheme that would put the whole burden upon industry and upon the state is another and quite different thing, and Labor has made a grievous mistake in allowing its socialistic left wing swing the whole organization into an impossible situation.

MR. FERGUSON'S CHANCE.

With the return to Canada of Mr. Ferguson, there seems to be a general hope that the High Commissioner will be able to do something to clear up the mess in regard to the Beauharnois project, particularly as it is associated with the Ontario Hydro enterprise.

What the former Premier may say when he appears before the Senate committee is regarded of secondary importance compared with the probability that he may be able to bring about an announcement from the Ontario Government that the scope of the Hydro inquiry is to be widened.

It is believed that Mr. Ferguson, with his usual ability to accurately weigh public opinion, will recognize the danger to Hydro and to the Henry Government in the present situation, and that he will call upon his successor to take the only step that will save the day—that is, the ordering of a thorough investigation.

The Brockville Recorder and Times hits the target squarely when it points out that if Hydro no longer commands the whole-hearted support of the people of the Province it is primarily due to the ugly reports and rumors concerning its administration, supported in part by evidence adduced before parliamentary investigations at Ottawa.

And it is equally right in its conclusion that the only way in which the ile may be given to these reports and confidence restored in Hydro as a great undertaking owned by the municipalities of the Province is by the references to the Royal Commission being widened to embrace all matters brought into question.

Mr. Ferguson has a chance to do Ontario a real service.

STARS AND IDOLS PASS ALONG.

We read the other day about the death and funeral of May A. Bell Marks, and then a few days before we noticed where James J. Corbett was a pretty sick man at his home in New York, and the chances were that he would not get much better.

So it is that we take a short time off from the pursuit of the things of to-day to remark that the stars and idols of other days are coming to or approaching the end of their course. Yes, and Guy Brothers Minstrels have long since disappeared. Tempus fugit, and how fugity it does seem to be.

People of this day and generation probably know nothing of May A. Bell Marks, but all over the country they used to know about her. The year could not run its course without the bills being displayed saying that Marks Brothers were coming for a week's engagement at the town hall. A different show each and every night. The villain in those days could be cut in two on the first night of the week, or on the second night he could be handled roughly by the hero, but he was always able to keep on making his appearance. The whole company used to board at the hotel almost across the road from the town hall, and in their coming and going the people got to know them at sight. It added just a little touch of glamor from the great world outside. May A. Bell Marks was the leading lady of that age. She appeared—in person—and so did all the others. That, of course, was long before the days of moving pictures. Probably the metropolitan centres had actresses equally good, but they never came our way then. May A. Bell Marks had the field all to herself. It is said that she knew the lines in at least fifty different presentations.

We used to deliver bills from the town printing office then and see that Mr. Marks himself got three or four copies of the paper with the notice in it about Marks Brothers show. These alight services brought tickets for the performance. Yes, indeed, it was a great week when Marks Brothers came to town.

* * * *

Then James J. Corbett was well known. We learned of him in the barber shop because his picture was there, and right next to it was one of John L. Sullivan, and we are almost certain that Bob Fitzsimmons was on that wall, too. It may have been that a picture of Nancy Hanks or J. I. C., stepping along at full speed was in between; of that we are not quite certain.

Then the Police Gazette used to be in that barber shop, too. Some person used to get it from a chap who sold papers on the train which ran through town. It was not considered choice reading matter at all, but it was there in the barber shop and it always had pictures of prize fighters and ladies from the stage.

Then, as we recall it, there was a man working in the foundry in town and he had a brother who had seen Jim Corbett and he wrote a letter home about it. That letter, too, made its way to the barber shop, and when the Saturday shave was in progress Jim Corbett would be the chief topic of conversation. Had not the brother of a native son seen him and written home about him? That seemed to give an intimate touch that was sadly lacking in connection with many of the great things which were taking place in the world outside

We never saw Jim Corbett or Bob Fitzsimmons or John L. Sullivan, but in common with other boys around town, we knew all about them. When either Sullivan or Fitzsimmons hit them, why they stayed hit for quite a while, but they didn't hit Corbett because he was too fast on his feet. They were all giants in those days, and now two are dead and Corbett is so weak that he cannot be about.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

It looks as if the hockey championships may yet be decided before the baseball season gets under way.

The Liberal opposition is fighting the Government's blank cheque measure to the last ditch. The country at large, however, refuses to get excited over the battle.

Most people will agree with the opinion expressed by a contemporary that Canadian Irishmen will be engaged much more usefully in helping as best they can with difficulties in Canada instead of interfering in the dispute between De Valera and the British Government.

Fires continue to claim many lives in Ontario. And most of these conflagrations are the result of sheer carelessness.

The Federal Parliament sat until 4.30 o'clock yesterday morning. If that sort of thing keeps up the members will be circulating a round robin calling for extra pay for overtime.

A moratorium in regard to political partisanship would be of material assistance in these troublesome times.

ARE CANADIAN CATHOLICS LOYAL?

To Editor of The Examiner:

Peterborough has recently been host to the "Black Knights of Ireland." The brethren were courteously welcomed and considerable space and prominence was given to the report of their deliberations. No fault can be found with this, for it is the function of a newspaper to give the news. In the present instance, however, there was very little news. The report might have been copied from that of any one of their former conventions. There was one little variation that was worth noting. The Order is strong for the sanctity of marriage, and suggests that its celebration should be handed over to the State. How suggestive is this of the cry, "We will have no king but Caesar." What a wonderful fountain of sanctifying grace is the State here in Ontario, either at Ottawa or Toronto! In fact, with its divorce courts, it seems more intent upon dissolving marriage than upon sanctifying it. This and much else we might let pass with a smile. But there was one statement that should not go unchallenged. Catholics were accused of disloyalty to the Union Jack. Kindly grant me, Mr. Editor, a little space to answer that accusation.

The Union Jack was unfurled in this country in 1759. Four years later the victory of Wolfe was consolidated by the Treaty of Paris which ceded Canada to Great Britain. By the terms of that treaty the seventy thousand new subjects of His Majesty were granted the free exercise of their religion. But there was added, at the instigation of a few bigots in the dominant faction, this clause "as far as the laws of Great Britain permit." The Penal Laws were still on the statute books of England, for Emancipation did not come for more than a half a century later. In the Old Land many of these were not enforced, but there was a determined effort in Canada to revive those that applied to the colonies. This persecuting spirit was foreign to the mind of the home government, and was frustrated by Canada's second Governor General, Lord Dorchester, who was instrumental in the passing of the Quebec Act of 1774, which granted a generous measure of freedom to Canadian Catholics. The effects of this Act may be best expressed in the words of Stephen Leacock, "The fact that the British Government, in the face of bigoted opposition passed and maintained the statute which stands as a charter of religious liberties for Roman Catholic Canada may be said to have laid the foundation of the firm attachment of the Canadian French to the Crown, which, after the lapse of four generations, has become one of the fundamental factors of the political life of Canada." Certain it is that they gave immediate proof of their loyalty. The war for independence was on in the United States, and Montgomery in 1775 laid siege to Quebec, thinking that the French Canadians would rally to his standard. He was mistaken. In this, the first great crisis under British rule, Catholics were loyal to the Union Jack and saved Canada to the Empire.

There was one disability affecting Catholics which still remained after the passing of the Quebec Act. That was the Supremacy of the Crown in matters ecclesiastical, the making of religion a department of the State. This was vigorously protested up to the year 1812. That year saw the second attempt of the United States to capture Canada, an attempt which would have been successful if the Scotch Catholics of Upper Caanda had not fought with Brock at Queenston Heights, and if their coreligionists of Lower Canada had not turned the tide of victory at Chateauguay. For the second time in a great national crisis Catholics were loyal to the Union Jack and saved Canada to the Empire. As the result of their action, the Bishop of Quebec and his clergy were congratulated by the Prince Regent for their loyalty, and a few years later the Legislature of Upper Canada expressly recognized the supremacy of Rome in spiritual matters. This was incident to the appointment to the newly-erected bishopric of Kingston of Bishop McDonald who had organized the Glengarry Fencibles.

Turning over the pages we come to another crisis in the history of Canada. In 1841, following the report of Lord Durham, Upper and Lower Canada were united, thus forming the nucleus of Confederation. A bill was passed under the Draper ministry compensating those in Upper Canada who had suffered loss during the Rebellion of '37. A similar bill, known as the Rebellion Losses Bill, was introduced by the Baldwin ministry which followed, with a view to compensating those who had suffered loss in Lower Canada. It was a simple matter of justice that both provinces should be treated alike; but there was bitter opposition to the bill, led by Sir Allan McNab, who declared that "aliens and rebels" should not be rewarded. The bill passed the House, and was presented to Lord Elgin for his signature. Of this noble scion of the House of Bruce, Sir John Bourniot wrote: "This distinguished nobleman must always be placed by the Canadian historian in the very front rank of the Governors of Canada appointed by the Imperial State." A weaker man might well have hesitated to give the bill royal assent, but he followed the lines of duty. As a result this once-popular Governor was hotted, jeered at and even pelted with unsavory missiles by the rabble, who burned to the ground the Parliament buildings with their priceless documents, and circulated a petition looking to annexation with United States. Mark well that the leaders in this disgraceful episode were the lineal forebears of those who to-day accuse Canadian Catholics of disloyalty to the Crown and Flag.

The storm soon spent itself. At the next session held in 1850, Lord Elgin was again welcomed with popular acclaim. All the bills passed by the ministry received royal assent. Among them, by the way, was a bill giving to the Catholics of Upper Canada the right to establish Separate Schools, a right which was later incorporated in the pact of Confederation.

A young matron in whom the shopping instinct was strong asked a German butcher the price of hamburg steak.

"Twenty-five cents a pound," he replied.

"But," said she, "the price at the corner store is only 12 cents."

"Vell," asked Otto, "vy you don't buy it down there?"

"They haven't any," she replied.

"Ya, ya," said the butcher. "Ven I don't have it I sell it for 10 cents only."—The Cash Year.

WILL USE VIOLIN VALUED AT $1,500

Deane Miner Plans to Give Violin Recital on April 11.

A violin, the property of the late Dr. Luigi Von Kunitz, conductor of Toronto Symphony Orchestra, and valued at $1,500.00, has been loaned to Deane Miner and will be played by him at a recital to be held at Peterborough Conservatory of Music on April 11.

Dorothy Allen Park, vocalist, and Agnes Logan Green, pianist, will also appear on the forthcoming program here.

Mr. Miner, who has been in Peterborough for two years, teaches the violin at the local Conservatory of Music, and also at Hambourg Conservatory of Music at Toronto. A native of Amherst, Nova Scotia, he possesses a rich background of musical education and training both on this continent and in Europe.

He was but nine years old when he first commenced a study of the violin, and after the completion of his initial training at Mount Allison Conservatory at Sackville, he went to Boston and continued his studies under Richard Burgin, concert master of Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Such progress did he make with his studies that it was on the recommendation of Mr. Burgin that he went to Europe, where he studied under Professor Sevcik in Bohemia, Karl Flesch in Berlin and Lucien Capet in Paris.

The former master, it is stated taught many of the world's greatest violinists.

Since returning to Canada, Mr Miner has done concert work at various points between Halifax and Vancouver, before coming to this city and district.

The violin which he is intending to use at the forthcoming recital, and which has been loaned to him for the occasion, is described by Mr. Miner as an instrument of unusual clarity of tone. It was made in the year 1880 by Joannes Franciscus Pressanda at Turin, regarded as one of the greatest violin makers of the period.

SANTAL MIDY — SANTAL CAPSULES MIDY — FOR BLADDER CAUTION

DISTRICT NURSE

by Faith Baldwin

She said, "Mother?" very softly, and as Mrs. Adams looked at her startled, apprehensive, she spoke her name again. She said, "Mother, I've news. Such good news. You must be strong enough to hear it. I've found Coral, mother," she said simply. "She's coming home, to-morrow."

No, joy does not kill. Ellen put out her hand for the little glass with the spirits of ammonia in it that she had set on the table back of her mother. The amyl nitrate was in the black bag there. But nothing was necessary, no restorative. The little pinched-looking face was scarlet with the rush of startled blood, then it was white again. "Drink this, mother," said Ellen.

The small hands pushed the glass away.

"No . . . where is she . . . take me to her . . ." demanded Mrs. Adams. "I—oh, Ellen, Ellen, are you sure?"

She was crying but it was not the sort of weeping which would bring on an attack.

"Quite sure," Ellen said steadily. "I've seen her. She's been very sick You see, she was coming home from, from out west. . . . She was taken sick on the train—it was flu, mother. She was very delirious and they took her to a hospital here. They couldn't find out who she was, she couldn't tell them. It was Pete who recognized her finally. And phoned me at the office. I called Nancy. That's where Nancy's been to-day. I've been there too. She's thin, and tired, she needs care, but, she's all right. She was on her way home."

She was trying, thought Ellen, to find her way home. That much wasn't a lie. The rest was lame, halting. But perhaps her mother wouldn't ask, wouldn't question too closely.

"Can't she come to-night?" asked Mrs. Adams . . . "Oh, Ellen," she said, "if I should die before to-morrow!"

"You won't, darling." Ellen patted her shaking hands. "You won't. Think, to-morrow she'll be here! You'll have someone to fuss over and take care of."

She thought, why didn't I think of that before? That's what she needs, of course; why didn't I realize it? We've always spared her so much. She needs Coral, ill, helpless. It won't hurt her. It will do her good.

"Why didn't she write?" asked her mother. "I mean before she was taken sick."

Why?

Ellen said slowly, "I haven't questioned her much. She's pretty weak, you know. But it had been so long perhaps she was afraid."

"Of me?" asked her mother, indignantly. "Coral, afraid of me?"

"She doesn't know about Dad yet," said Ellen, low.

"Of course." Mrs. Adams was silent. She said after a moment, "We'll have to tell her."

"I'll tell her. Mother, stop shaking, dearest. Everything's going to be all right."

But there were a hundred questions Mrs. Adams had to ask. How Coral had looked, what she said. A hundred questions, none of them too difficult to answer. And then, practically, "We must get things ready for her here. She can sleep with me."

"No, darling, that would be bad for both of you. I'll sleep on the davenport. It will be all right, see if it isn't. And to-morrow I'll bring her home." She thought, one of us must go out and buy things for her. There'd been nothing in the gas-filled apartment but the clothes, the poor clothes, on her back, and some torn, clean underwear in the battered suitcase. Nothing else. In the hospital she was wearing the coarse hospital nightgown. Ellen knew where her vacation money would go. For Coral. Nightgowns and chemises, bed jackets and negligees, dresses. . . .

When she heard Nancy stir she rose and went to the kitchen to put on coffee and cut bread and butter and make sandwiches. Then she went into the bedroom and told Nancy all she had said. "That's the story," she told her, "you'll remember it?"

There were tears when Nancy came out of the bedroom, the weak tears of happiness. "To keep it from me all day," her mother said, reproachful.

"Blame it on Ellen," Nancy told her. "She wanted to tell you herself. She was afraid you'd be too upset."

"Upset?" said Mrs. Adams. "I've never felt so well, no, not in years. Pete found her, you say?" She paled. "Then she was in ——"

She halted.

"Yes. But you see, no one knew who she was Naturally she was taken to the hospital," said Ellen hastily, "to that hospital. And it was some days before Pete happened to see her."

"Pete," murmured her mother, remembering.

Nancy finished her supper. Ellen said, "You must be tired, Mother: you must get right into bed. And to sleep. For to-morrow's another day and I'll have Coral home before you know it. You—you must try to be courageous," she told her mother gently; "remember, she's been very ill, we must be careful of her."

Nancy was going after her mother. Before she went she drew Ellen to the door with her and held her in a quick hard unusual embrace. "You're pretty darned marvelous," said Nancy.

Left alone, Ellen sat down at the little desk in the living-room to write to Frank. He would, he'd said, call her to-morrow. She'd better write. To-morrow, everything would be different. She wrote quite simply. "My sister," she said, "has come home after so many years. Everything's pretty much in a whirl. I'm writing to explain. I'm bringing her from the hospital to-morrow. She'd been very ill. I'd rather you didn't phone for a day or two. I know you'll understand," she wrote and slipped out to mail it, special delivery, at the corner box.

She thought, returning to her own room, the room which would be made fresh for Coral the next day, how will we arrange things? . . . oh, this place is so dreadfully small now. She planned standing in the middle of the room, a finger at her lips. Daytimes, Coral could be in the living-room or in her mother's bedroom. Nights, in the other bedroom. And Ellen could sleep on the davenport. It was comfortable enough. When Coral was better, stronger, things would work out more easily.

She thought she would never sleep. Yet she slept as soon as her head touched the pillow. And suddenly it was morning. Nancy came in showing no signs of the lack of sleep of the day before. Mrs. Adams was up early. "When are you going for her?" she demanded.

"Soon, but not too soon. They'd throw me out," said Ellen laughing.

She herself went out early, and uptown to the shops. A plain little silk dress, a thin coat, a smart quilled tam. Powder and rouge and lipstick. Underwear, nightgowns, slippers. A tailored robe, a robe of silk. Stockings. Shoes. She guessed at Coral's size, vaguely, but as it happened correctly. Enough to go on with. A suitcase, new. She unwrapped the things in the women's rest-room and packed them in the case. Coral must come home equipped.

Nothing that she had worn would come home with her.

She took a taxi to the hospital and telephoned from there for a private, comfortable car. Her vacation money, not much would be left. But she had certain savings; she could carry on and keep up her share of the apartment. Only Coral must come home head high, eyes steady, not creep home with the broken suitcase, the poor clothes.

She took the new things up to the ward with her and displayed them. "There," she said, smiling to see the faint color in Coral's face and lips, and her rested eyes, "there, that's enough to go with, isn't it?"

Coral said, "You're so good. Why are you so good, Ellen? She caught her sister's hand. "Little Ellen . . ." she said.

She tried to laugh as Ellen drew the stockings up over her lovely too slender legs. "Ellen, you didn't tell me what you were made up for, yesterday."

"Oh, the uniform?" Ellen explained briefly. "I'm a district nurse," she said. "You know what that is, don't you?"

"Sweetness and light?" inquired Coral. She'd always been pert. She still was. "Not exactly," Ellen told her, smiling.

"And Nancy——?"

"Works nights." Ellen elucidated fully. Coral's blue eyes widened.

"Dad . . . doesn't he kick? Ellen, will he take me back?"

INSTALMENT 14.

Ellen looked around. They were alone, the curtains drawn. She said swiftly, steadily, "You've got to know, darling. Dad's—been gone—six years."

The faint color faded. Coral said after a moment. "Funny. I can't cry. I've cried so much, I suppose. Ellen, it wasn't worrying over me, was it?"

Her eyes pleaded and implored.

"It was pneumonia," said Ellen.

"He—did he forgive me?" asked Coral, quietly.

"Of course," Ellen answered She lied. She had to lie.

"And me not there. Ellen, if I'd known, if I'd known. But I was afraid, afraid to write, afraid to come back."

"Let's not talk about that now," said Ellen.

Pete was not in evidence as they went down the corridor. When they were in the rented car, Coral said, "Mother? I mean, I would have thought that after Dad went she couldn't go on"

"She has gone on. She's not awfully well. It's not serious," said Ellen hastily, "but——" She explained as best she could. Coral nodded. "I'll be careful of her, too," she said. "Ellen, what have you told her?"

"That you were coming home to us. That you were taken sick, on the train," Ellen replied. She went on coaching Coral in the poor little story. "It's only," said Coral afterwards, "a half lie, isn't it?"

She spoke of Pete. . . . "He was awfully good to me. But I couldn't bear the sight of him. I knew he hated me."

"He doesn't hate you," said Ellen.

"He knows?" asked Coral in a whisper.

"He had to know, dear; when you were brought in." She thought, we mustn't ever tell her that he was on that ambulance. Never

"Pete, a doctor. That's funny, somehow. It's not funny you're being a nurse. You always liked that sort of thing, I remember, when you were very little," said Coral from her two years' seniority.

Now her eyes widened. The car had turned a corner and was entering a familiar street. "The same house?" she said.

"But the neighborhood's changed. So changed. Is Joe still cobbling shoes? He is? And is Jim still your heavy suitor? No, things haven't changed so much."

The car stopped. She clung to Ellen a minute. She said, low, "I'm frightened. I can't face her. What shall I tell her, Ellen? What shall I tell her?"

"Tell her nothing," answered Ellen clearly, "that would hurt you or her."

And now the apartment door had opened. . . .

"Home . . ." said Coral, very low, and stumbled across the threshold, ignoring Ellen's swift outstretched hand, going straight into the frail arms, suddenly strong, that were held out to her.

Home . . .

And so time passed and the nine-day wonder of her homecoming faded. She was gradually becoming herself again under Ellen's watchful care. It was Ellen who saw she had nourishing food and drinks, Ellen who took her walking in the sunlight, Ellen who defended her from the neighborhood.

As a whole, however, the neighbors were kind.

Jim came, hearing the news by that underground circuit of his. Coral stared at him, laughter on his lips. "All grownup," she mocked him, "big business man now, Jimmy . . ."

And presently Frank came, too. Frank, whose flowers had arrived the very day Coral had come home. "For Ellen's sister," the card read.

Coral liked him at once. She told Ellen so. "I like the new beau," she said. "He's regular. I can tell. Ellen, what's come over Jim? He's different from what he used to be."

"No, he's the same." said Ellen, laughing, "he hasn't changed a bit."

Coral's eyes were puzzled.

"Yes, he has. Ellen, are you going to marry him, or the new applicant?"

"I'm not going to marry anybody for a long time," Ellen evaded the question gaily.

"Sez you," said Coral in her old slangy way.

TO FIND HOW RADIO ACTS AT SOUTH POLE

Head of British Radio Research Board Leads Expedition

London.—The man who last year found that the world's radio roof leaked and then discovered a new one higher up, is leaving for the Antarctic soon to see how radio acts at the South Pole.

He is Professor Appleton, head of the Radio Research Board, after whom the new roof—which bounces short wireless waves back to earth—has been called the Appleton layer. He now believes that the vast stillness of the Arctic forms a natural sounding board for radion waves that kicks back echoes, and wants to prove it.

With a band of youthful scientists, Professor Appleton, who is only 37 himself, will establish a base of operation at Tromso, within the Arctic Circle.

He is tackling one of the major problems of radio in trying to solve the reasons for the echoes of signals which have been heard as long as thirty seconds after the reception of the original sounds.

Market Closing On All Exchanges

TORONTO EXCHANGE.

TORONTO, Mar. 31. — (C.P.)— Toronto stock exchange market was weak at the close, interlisted issues bearing the brunt of the attack. Brazilian showed a small loss and Bell Telephone declined 1 point to 105.

Nickel was unchanged and Noranda off slightly. Consolidated Smelters dropped 4 points to 61.

STANDARD EXCHANGE.

TORONTO, March 31 (C.P.). — Softness on industrial board was reflected in a definitely lower tendency among interlisted and higher-priced stocks on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange Market in the afternoon to-day.

Noranda provided leadership for the decline, price dipping 60 to around $17. Nickel was only relatively easy. Among the golds, McIntyre fell below $17 for a 40-cent loss, Dome was down 25, and Teck-Hughes, Granada and Hollinger slipped around 5 cents apiece.

NEW YORK, Mar. 31.—(CP)— Stocks dropped sharply today in a thin market and closed with a weak tone. American Telephone and Santa Fe lost 5 points or so, while U. S. Steel, American Can, Consolidated Gas, Union Pacific, Eastman, Du Pont and Allied Chemical lost 2 to 3. Volume increased somewhat in the last half hour and transactions for the session approximated 1,300,000 shares.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

EXCHANGE RATES

TORONTO, Mar. 31.—(CP)—Exchange rates at noon today were as follows:

Pound Sterling in Montreal 4.18½.
Pound Sterling in New York 3.79.
Canadian Dollar in New York 90⅛.

Montreal Leaders Hold Small Gains

MONTREAL, Mar. 31. (CP) — Stock prices were fixed in this morning's trading on the Montreal stock exchange and at noon a few of the leaders held small gains, with one or two other stocks showing sharp breaks.

Canadian Pacific, active leader during the forenoon, advance ⅜ to 16⅛. Brazilian fluctuated narrowly and at noon was unchanged at 11⅛. Charles Gurd advanced ½ to 15½ and Nickel eased ¼ to 8½.

THE KING'S LEVEE.

STEEL ISSUES ARE UNCHANGED

Losses and Gains for Small Amounts Intermixed on Toronto Exchange.

OILS ARE STEADY.

TORONTO, March 31 (C.P.). — Toronto Stock Exchange did not deviate far enough from its former level to indicate a trend this morning. Losses and gains were intermixed, all being for very small amounts.

Nickel, Bell Telephone, Consumers Gas, Ford of Canada, Dominion Stores, the steels were pivotal issues unchanged to just above where they had left off last night. C.P.R. was rather strong and up ½ point at midday. The oils were very slow and for the most part unchanged.

Walkers Old at 3½ was unchanged, the new inactive and the new preferred firm but mostly unchanged. Consolidated Bakeries recovered part of yesterday's loss but Brazilian and Smelters still were soft, slipping fractions, and Loblaw "A" went down ¼ point.

WHO WILL BE BRITISH WOMAN GOLF LEADER?

Joyce Wethered Will Marry and May Not Head International Team

U.S. WOMAN'S CHANCE

Glenna Collett Vare Might Win British Women's Open Title This Year

London.—As Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare has been placed No. 1 in American women's international team, the question now exercising the minds of British golfers is—Who will be her opponent?

If Miss Joyce Wethered accepts the invitation to join the British team, a contingency which appears rather doubtful in view of her approaching marriage to Major Cecil Hutchison, she will naturally lead the side, in which case the two greatest women players will renew their battles. This would be their third meeting, the others having concluded in Miss Wethered's favor.

In the event of Miss Wethered not playing, Miss Enid Wilson, the British champion, will oppose Mrs. Collett Vare.

21-Year-Old Titleholders

This would probably lead to a meeting between Miss Wando Morgan, the English titleholder, and Miss Helen Hicks, the new American champion. The match between the two girls, each 21 years of age, should prove one of the most interesting of the series.

One thing, however, is certain, that Miss Wethered will not play in the women's open championship, and that should give Glenna a chance to achieve her long-thwarted ambition of winning.

Her attempts for this elusive trophy have not always been attended with the best of luck. A few years ago when she was right atop of her game, she was beaten in a fairly early round. Records give the credit to a rather unknown Yorkshire player, but witnesses of the match attribute it to a considerable extent to typical British east coast May weather.

The biting northeast wind whistled in from the sea and nearly "froze" the American champion. Her opponent, a stalwart Yorkshire player, was not incommoded and went on to win her match easily and with apparent comfort—for her home county is about the bleakest in the country.

Miss Wethered Unbeatable There

Glenna's other chance was when she reached the final at St. Andrew's in 1929 she had the misfortune to be pitted against Miss Joyce Wethered, who emerged from retirement to take part merely because the venue was her favorite course. According to Bobby Jones, there are few men in the world who can beat Miss Wethered on St. Andrew's. Even then she took Miss Wethered to the thirty-fifth hole, which in this case was the famous road hole of St. Andrew's and which has broken more golfing hearts than any other in the world.

This year presents Mrs. Collett Vare with a golden opportunity, for few of the British ladies this year have shown international championship form.

Sylvanite, Malartic and Alexandria also displayed small declines, but Bidgood and Canusa were slightly higher. In the oil section Ajax Oil, ex-dividend 3 percent, payable April 15, dropped a couple to $1 while Acme Gas firmed another fraction to 17.

GREEK LOAN PAYMENTS POSTPONED FOR YEAR

ATHENS, Mar. 31. (A.P.)—Finance Minister George Maris has informed the chamber of deputies that sinking fund payments on Grecian international loans will have to be suspended for a year and the interest on these loans reduced 25 per cent for a year.

Premier Venizelos, in a speech to the chamber, said in view of the country's financial difficulties the proposals of the League of Nations Financial Commission for aid were considered insufficient and the government would try on April 11 to obtain greater concessions from the League council.

GIVEN FOUR YEARS

TORONTO —Nelson Brinkley, Ottawa, was sentenced to four years in Portsmouth penitentiary today when he was convicted of breaking into a number of houses. He was known to police as the barefoot burglar, as he invariably took off his boots before breaking into houses.

The British Union Jack, which had not flown officially over Battersea, England, town hall during the 15 years in which Socialists ruled the borough council, has been unfurled there again.

Mr. and Mrs. Spratt Would Have Bought "Mayfield" Brand Bacon and Jack's widely publicized aversion to fat and his wife's dislike of lean would have been very equitably catered to if they had been able to buy this famous bacon. For the even distribution of fat and lean in every slice of Mayfield Bacon would have met with the enthusiastic approval of both of those two well-known characters.

And that evenness is just another reason why Mayfield Bacon is so economical.

There is no abnormal loss of weight in frying by reason of excessive fat nor is there lack of flavor through being too lean.

The next time you buy bacon try Mayfield and satisfy ALL the family.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE REVIEWS

TORONTO PRODUCE.

TORONT, Mar. 31. — A quiet trade on the local egg market brought prices to lower levels yesterday, and prospects for the weekend were not too bright. Brokers were willing to dispose of receipts at prices steady to 1c per dozen lower, while wholesalers were quoting the trade all grades at 1c per dozen below previous prices. Quotations to country shippers were steady to easier, or differing 2c per dozen from the graded supplies.

Country shippers were quoted 13c to 14c for extras, 11c to 12c for firsts and 9c to 10c for seconds, delivered, ungraded, cases returned. Retailers were offered supplies at 20c for extras in cartons, 18c for extras loose, 16c for firsts loose and 14c for seconds loose. Brokers quoted graded eggs, in free cases, at 15c to 16c for extras, 13c to 14c for firsts and there was a nominal price of 13c for seconds.

Butter.

Trade in butter was very slow, though asking prices were about steady. Buyers showed little interest in offerings and were evidently waiting on storage reports, which will be on hand to-day and to-morrow for Montreal and Toronto respectively. Nominal prices for creamery solids were 27c to 27½c, regraded grass quality, with a nominal figure of 27c for fresh makes. Wholesalers quoted the trade steady prices for creamery prints at 29c for No. 1 and 28c for No. 2.

Cream.

Prices for churning cream were unchanged at 24c for special, 23c for No. 1 and 20c for No 2, f.o.b. country points.

Cheese.

The cheese market was slightly easier. Brokers were quoting new makes at ¼c per pound lower than previously at 11¼c to 11½c for large, 11½c to 11¾c for twins and 11¾c to 12c for triplets. Retailers were quoted steady prices at 13c for new large, 13¼c for twins, 13½c for triplets and 15½c for stiltons.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, March 31.—Egg and butter prices again declined on the produce dairy market here yesterday, with cheese and potato quotations holding steady.

Graded Ontario fresh eggs, in cartons or broken lots, were mainly firm, firsts at 16c and seconds at 15c, being firm, with extras easing a cent at 17c to 18c a dozen. To retailers, quotations of fresh eggs, in cartons, lost a cent, specials being quoted at 25c extras at 23c, firsts at 22c and seconds at 21c a dozen. Receipts were 1,501 cases.

With demand slow, No. 1 butter, in carlot or less, dropped a quarter of a cent at 26¾c to 27c a pound. To retailers, solids and prints were unchanged at 23c and 29c a pound, respectively. Receipts were 241 boxes.

On the cheese market prices were steady, with current receipts being quoted at 10½c to 11c and summer make at 12c to 12½c a pound. Receipts were 19 boxes.

The potatoe market was firm, quotations of broken lots per 80-pound bag being 30c to 40c for Quebec Whites and 45c to 50c for Quebec and New Brunswick Green Mountains. Carlot prices were 10c a bag cheaper than the broken-lot levels.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, March 31.—Assertions that Western Kansas and adjoining territory would not produce half as much wheat as last year gave brisk upturns to grain prices late yesterday.

It was contended favorable conditions from now on would be needed to result even that well. The region referred to had a 1931 harvest of more than 200,000,000 bushels, but rapidly increasing complaints of crop damage focused attention on apparent likelihood of big losses.

Wheat closed stronger, contrasting sharply with earlier setbacks, and at ½ to 1 cent above Tuesday's finish, with corn ⅛ to ⅝ cent up, oats ¼ to ⅜ cent advanced and provisions unchanged to 7 cents down.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, March 31. — Further reports of damage to winter wheat crops in the South-west States and fair buying by Continental house foreign export gave a lift to grain prices for the third successive day.

May gained ⅝c to 61½c, while July and October each advanced ½c to 63½c and 65⅝c respectively.

From a fractional decline at the opening the market forged gradually ahead to close at the top levels The volume of trade was not large, but there appeared to be a firm undertone apparent throughout.

Broomhall reported the arrival of nearly 10,500,000 bushels of foreign wheat in England and the Continent during the past week. France contracted for the greater part of the shipment. He reported a good Continental demand, but restricted buying due to an erratic money market.

Cash wheat and coarse grain trade was draggy with spreads holding firm within a narrow range.

LARGE AUDIENCE HEARS DR. BEST DESCRIBE CONDITIONS IN EAST

Y. M. C. A. Official Delivers Splendid Address in George Street Church.

MISSIONARIES AND WORK.

Dr. E. M. Best, a former Peterborough boy, and now Canadian National Secretary of the Y.M.C.A., gave some very interesting facts in his splendid address on China and Japan, in George Street United Church last evening.

Some very fine choral numbers were sung by the Peterborough Male Voice Choir, who gave the first part of the evening's entertainment under the direction of A. H. Phillips.

This excellent program to which the public was cordially invited was sponsored by the Laymen's Association of the six United Churches of the city.

Dr. J. E. Middleton chairman of the Lay Association presided and introduced the speaker of the evening welcoming him on behalf of the audience to his home church.

To make a survey of the foreign work carried on by the Y.M.C.A. and the Y.W.C.A., in China, Japan, Korea and the Philippine Islands, was the task assigned to Dr. Best and of which he spoke to a large and interested audience.

Organized Commission

Upon arriving in Kobe in Japan, his first project was to organize a native commission who were to study the work of the association, reporting their strong or weak points. After spending nine months on this enterprise, Dr. Best returned with his report, based not only upon the finding of the commission but upon his own personal experiences.

The speaker stressed the difficulty of obtaining an authoritative report of missionary work in general. This is due in part to the fact that the work is divided into five different types, including Evangelistic, Educational, Medical, Social Service and Economic. It is possible to become identified with one phase and to know nothing of the others.

Then, too, one viewpoint of Missions may be obtained in the cities and an entirely different one in the interior. The foreigner's idea of missions may color your thinking, while the native thought is distinctly different.

Another viewpoint will be held by the official or military class, or by those engaged in business enterprices.

Recently the missionary enterprise has been suffering a great deal of criticism. In presenting these criticisms, Dr. Best gave a frank appraisal of both sides of the question.

Character of Missionary

One issue frequently raised is in regard to the character and quality of the missionaries themselves. The first criticism states that they are ignorant. While it is true that there are some ill-informed missionaries, yet taken as a whole, we can nowhere find a finer group of refined, cultured people.

Again, they are accused of being narrow-minded and bigoted. This, too, is true, in a sense, but fortunately these ideas are changing.

Missionaries are censured for their very slow progress. One million baptized Christians in three countries, does not seem a very great result. Yet we must remember there are another million believers who are not ranked as Christians, while far beyond the boundaries of the church lie the effect of Christianity on the thought and feeling of the people. Remarkable leaders such as Kagawa are being turned out and if the growth of missions is not great in extent, it is deep in loyalty.

Then comes the complaint against denominationalism which has been transferred to these countries. The resulting confusion of the people is one of the most discouraging features of the work, and this is one of the hardest problems to solve.

Another charge laid against the missionaries, is that they are destroying native culture. The blame for this should rather be laid to Western civilization.

Lastly, the missionaries are criticized for encouraging nationalism. This is something of which to be proud rather than ashamed, for they have left behind their own national prejudice and are urging these people to escape from unequal treaties.

So we see these current criticisms are both true and false. From a general perspective our missionaries are true ambassadors of Christ doing a marvellous piece of work.

A more fundamental criticism strikes at the validity of the Christian Gospel itself and contends: first, that it has no moral validity since it has not saved our own country in 1,900 years; secondly, the question is asked, Is our ecclesiastical system necessary? Are church government baptism and architecture vital parts in Christianity?

In the third place we are asked: Is the Gospel intellectually sound? Can it be reconciled with modern science?

These three challenges go to the heart of the Christian religion both at home and abroad and cannot easily be put off. In answer we must invite these other countries to share with us the common task of Christianizing civilization. We must not consider ritualism as the heart of Christianity but just as an expression of it.

Our traditional theological systems, with emphasis on certain doctrines, do not focus on the central point of Christianity, the life and character of Jesus Christ.

We must take to these countries a simple Gospel with (1) God as the Father of all men; (2), All men as brothers, and (3) to endeavor to fulfil the Father's will, then we will have a Gospel that is valid in China, Japan and Korea. A Gospel which they need and which we need. With materialism as the centre of modern thought, we have gradually been weaned away from the idea of sacrifice and service. We cannot serve God and mammon. And the challenge comes to us as never before to spread abroad the power of Jesus Christ.

G. A. Gillespie tendered thanks to the speaker for his admirable picture of conditions in the East.

Rev. J. E. J. Millyard dismissed the successful gathering with the Benediction.

During the evening the following program of music was given by the Male Voice Choir, assisted by D. Howat at the organ, and J. Tunstall at the piano: Organ selection; (a) "Shenandoah," (b) "Laudamus" by the choir; Organ selection; (a) "Drink to Me Only," (b) "Bells of the Sea," Choir; "Let Their Celestial Concerts All United, Choir; "Morning."

ARCHITECT OF FAMOUS BUCKFAST ABBEY DI

Designed Work That M Have Carried Out So Marvelously

FOUND RUINS IN 188?

So Vision of New Church, No Realized, Dates Back Nearly 50 Years

A Toronto architect, Mr. J. Jackson Beck, adds much to the interest of the story of Buckfast Abbey, which was told on this page last Saturday, by pointing out that the monks, who have almost completed this wonderful work after 25 years, have had the guidance of a fine architect, Mr. Frederick Arthur Walters, who has just died in his 83rd year. Mr. Walters, indeed, located the ruins of the original Buckfast Abbey, in Devonshire, England, over 48 years ago, and the dream and fulfilment cover that long period.

In the Journal of the Royal Institute of British Architects, the abbot of Buckfast reviews the life of Mr. Walters and his connection with the abbey, which six self-trained monks have built otherwise unaided. A condensation of the abbot's article follows:

In 1882 a colony of French Benedictines took up their abode in the village of Buckfast, on the River Dart, Devonshire. They understood they had settled on the site of one of England's oldest religious houses, but did not know the exact place where the original abbey stood.

In 1883 Mr. Walters was taken to Buckfast by Professor Mivart, who saw in the arrival of the Benedictines the possibility of resuscitating one of England's dead abbeys. Mr. Walters was appointed architect to the community of French fathers and was asked to prepare plans for the rebuilding of Buckfast Abbey.

The monks, working under the architect's supervision, uncovered the old foundations. Mr. Walters was an expert archaeologist and was able to conceive what the old building had been, and for complete visualising of the past he studied the famous ruins of monastic grandeur in England. Mr. Walters was the only architectural adviser in building the imposing new edifice, to be completed at Easter. He became famous as the designer of over 40 churches It was his great wish to be present at the consecration of Buckfast Abbey, which will take place on August 25. This was not granted to him, but he lived to see the practical realization of this cherished visio

KINSMEN PLAY NEXT FRIDAY

The Rivals By Sheridan to be Staged in Collegiate Auditorium.

SURE TO MAKE A HIT.

Nightly rehearsals are now being undertaken by the cast in the play "The Rivals," to be produced under the auspices of Peterborough Kinsmen Club at the Collegiate Auditorium on Friday evening, April 8.

Adrian Macdonald, under whose capable direction Richard Sheridan's comedy gem is being staged, expressed himself as well satisfied at the progress which the play is making. Incidentally he is himself taking a leading part in the portrayal of Sir Anthony Absolute.

First produced by Sheridan at Covent Garden Theatre, in the eighteenth century, the play made an instant hit with its brilliant repartee and scintillating comedy. It is to be reproduced in this city by a strong local cast, many of whom will be remembered for their acting in the club's initial venture last Spring, namely Noel Coward's "Hay Fever."

Arrangements have been completed with a Toronto theatrical company for props and scenery, and a feature of the production will be the picturesque costumes of the period.

Tickets for the play, which may be procured from any member of the club or cast, and which have been in circulation for more than a week, are reported to be moving rapidly. In patronizing the play, the public are reminded that not only will they be assured of high-class entertainment but they will be furthering the cause for which the club mainly exists, namely service to the community with special emphasis on underprivileged child work.

Company Completes Its Musketry Tests

Indoor minature range musketry tests which have been conducted by members of C Company 4th Battalion Canadian Machine Gun Corps, were concluded last evening on the Armouries ranges, and resulted in the following winners: Group A, Sergeant Major A. E. Hatcher; Group B, Sergt. Western; Group C, Private Hale.

Following the close of the competition an enjoyable smoker was held by officiers, N.C.O.'s and men of the company in the recreation room. Lieut. R. C. Honey presided. Officers of other units were present as guests.

Prizes were presented to the successful marksmen by Capt. J. Turnbull and Capt. H. J. Devey, after which Major J. A. Dewart, M.C., O.C. Company, expressed satisfaction with the progress which the unit was making. He introduced Lieut.-Colonel Gordon Hall, O.C. 137th Infantry Brigade, who presented Battalion Sergeant Major W. Piercy with his warrant of promotion.

The company was entertained by musical numbers and a rollicking sing-song led by Lieut. Robert Haddow of the Peterborough Rangers Regiment at the piano, and Walter Fitzgerald, violinist.

There were no deaths in the entire 26 cases.

WOMAN FALLS OVER CLIFF AT FOLKESTONE

Checked at 250 Feet and Brought Up Alive

Folkestone, Eng. — A woman fell 250 feet down the cliffs at Folkestone and was rescued alive by volunteers from a farm.

Miss Annie Freeman of Olinda Rd., Stamford Hill, London, was sitting at the top of the cliffs, which are 400 feet high and overlook the Warren, when she fell. A bush on the face of the cliff broke her fall and saved her from reaching the bottom.

Police and ambulance men were rushed to the scene, but they were unable to reach the woman either from above or below. Three farm workers, Harry Hatton, Walter Bromley and Leslie Rose, employed by Mr. A. C. Aird, with the assistance of two others, were lowered by ropes down the face of the cliff, and with great difficulty they reached the unconscious woman. Her condition is serious.

WOMAN DIES OF QUEER DISEASE IN A TRANCE

London. — An obscure form of trance was described at an inquest at St. Pancras on Mrs. Dorothy Agnes Potter, aged 30, of Belsize Park, Hampstead, N.W.

Her husband said that two weeks ago he was awakened in the night by his wife breathing heavily. She was unconscious and very pale. She recovered after a short while and knew nothing of what had occurred.

Two days ago, when they were going to play cards, she said, "I think there is something wrong with my arm." She became unconscious almost immediately and did not recover.

Sir Bernard Spilsbury, the pathologist, said there was nothing to indicate the cause of death, which he thought was due to auricular fibrillation, a condition about which very little was known.

Police Court

Three glasses of 4.4 beer was all that Clarence Smith, drover, of Port Hope, said that he had to drink on the afternoon of March 26, but three police officers told Magistrate Langley that when they took Smith from his truck on the Port Hope highway he was badly intoxicated. Detective Piercy said that when Smith was being searched at the police station before being locked in the cells he wobbled so badly that the constable had to stand him against a table.

Four citizens of Port Hope and vicinity said that Smith had the reputation of "never taking a drink," but Magistrate Langley found that he was drunk in charge of his truck that day on the highway and sentenced him to seven days in jail.

Smith's intoxication was discovered when he steered his car over on the wrong side of the highway and nearly hit Highway Patrol Officer A. E. Hornick. The officer pursued the car, and said that when he got Smith from the truck he was intoxicated. Piercy and Detective Meagher, who brought Smith into the station, also testified that the man was intoxicated.

Smith admitted that he had had three glasses of 4.4 in the "stone hotel" on Hunter Street, but that was all. He stated that on the afternoon mentioned he was as sober as he was to-day in the witness-box.

Creditors in Port au Prince, Haiti, are fighting bankruptcy proceedings against firms in trouble, because they believe they would fare much worse, under local conditions and laws, than debtors who were declared bankrupt.

GOV'T CONTROL

"Hampering restrictions," and the possibility of loss through the establishment of public ownership had prevented the full development of broadcasting in the past few years, the witness said.

He was of the opinion that the cost of taking over existing privately-owned broadcasting stations would be about 33 per cent greater than the estimate made in the Aird report.

Questioned by W. D. Euler (Lib., Waterloo, N.), the witness said his valuation of existing stations had included improvements made since the government act three years ago warning the industry that existing stations might be taken over.

Mr. Euler said the Government had pointed out that such improvements, pending action on the Aird report, would not be considered in the appropriation assessment.

$7 License Fee

The Aird report estimate of the cost of establishing the proposed publicly-owned broadcoasting system, had been too conservative in the opinion of the witness. Under the proposals outlined the system would operate under a deficit of more than $4,000,000, Mr. McFarlane estimated, and he foresaw an annual licence fee for receiving sets, of not less than $7.

Suggestions that Canadian Radio programs were selected and arranged in a haphazard and careless manner, were not in accordance with the facts the witness said. They were the work of trained specialists in the work, and every program represented a great deal of effort.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

FRASER RIVER SALMON FISHERY MAY BE MOVED TO OTHER BANKS

Threat to Eliminate the Fishery is Made by B. C. Government.

ECONOMIC MEASURE.

VANCOUVER, Mar. 31 (Special to The Examiner)—Unless the United States reverses its policy and agrees to co-operate with Canada in conserving the fisheries wealth of the Fraser river, the government of British Columbia threatens to take immediate steps to eliminate that stream from production, thus closing forever a source of many millions of dollars.

This threat is made by the provincial government, it is explained, not as a gesture of spite, as some American authorities seem to believe, but simply because it is economic and reasonable.

"For years we have been trying to get the United States to do their share toward protecting the sockeye salmon of the Fraser river," a government fisheries official told the writer. "We have tried in vain. On four distinct occasions the international treaty providing for this protection got so far as the United States senate, only to be turned down because of some selfish objections by western congressmen. It looks as though it will be rejected again in the senate this year: in fact, there seems to be no doubt about it. All right. We are ready to keep the goose that lays their golden egg."

Since the Fraser river fisheries first attained their ranking among the leading sources of food fish in the world, the official explained, American fishermen have been making 70 per cent of the catch. While the Fraser river is entirely in Canadian territory, the fish returning to spawn each year through American waters. Although Canadian fishermen have for years been restricted as to gear and season, and consequently their catch is severely limited, the American fishermen operating with ruthless gear, have taken the bulk of the salmon. Year after year of this reckless overfishing has gradually reduced the sockeye pack, although even now it is annually reckoned in many millions of dollars.

Enormous Yield Possible

John P. Babcock, probably the greatest authority on sockeye salmon in the world, who is deputy commissioner of fisheries at Victoria, estimates that with proper methods of conservation the Fraser could be made to yield $30,000,000 annually but unless the treaty is passed such a prospect is out of the question.

"Our only alternative," explained a fisheries expert, "is to abandon the Fraser and move the whole fishery to some river where we are completely in control, so that we can not only enforce our own conservation measure 100 per cent, but be able to benefit 100 per cent from the catch."

The attitude of the government is described officially as follows:

The sockeye salmon which run through the salt water approaches in the State of Washington leading to the Fraser river, are the progeny of the sockeye that spawn in the Fraser river basin and are seeking to return to that basin to spawn. They are natives of British Columbia. In passing through the State of Washington waters a large percentage of the fish are caught by Washington fishermen.

Trying for Twenty Years

The depletion of the sockeye salmon runs to the Fraser is largely due to fishing in the State of Washington. For 20 years Canada has pleaded for a treaty to ensure a sufficient escapement and spawning, to maintain the run at something like its maximum production. The fishery authorities of the United States and the State of Washington have approved of the treaties; Canada ratified four of them. The President signed and transmitted them to the United States senate. The senate has not ratified them because of opposition of the senators from the State of Washington in response to protests from fishermen.

Notwithstanding the failure of the United States senate to take action, and the fact that British Columbia has reaped only 25 to 30 per cent of the sockeye bred in its waters, the Canadian government has closely restricted fishing in Fraser waters and has operated extensive hatcheries for the propagation of sockeye. Its patience is about exhausted. By its action alone Canada can not maintain the runs. Under existing conditions they will soon be totally destroyed.

Entirely Practical

The proposal to abandon all efforts to maintain the runs of sockeye to the Fraser by operating hatcheries, and instead, to collect all the sockeye eggs possible in its watershed, transfer, hatch and liberate the fry in provincial waters unaffected by American fishermen, is entirely practical. It is a practical, economic proposal—an effort to save for its own benefit what little is left of one of its greatest food assets. It has been demonstrated beyond questions that sockeye return to the watershed in which they were hatched, provided those waters are not more remote from the sea than the waters in which their parents spawned.

Sockeye eggs collected in Alaska and transferred to, hatched and liberated in the Columbia, returned to that river. The practicability of collecting eggs from one stream, transferring hatching and liberating them in another stream has repeatedly been demonstrated.

Youthful Gunman Fatally Shot

After a running gun fight in Toronto on the night of March 27, between four young desperadoes and Police Officer Peter Thornton, the stolen car in which the men were seeking to escape crashed into the railing at Trinity Square and was abandoned. Albert Heward, 17, one of the four, was fatally wounded. Dotted line in (1) shows how car swung too wide and hit railing at Trinity Square, while photo of machine is shown in (2).

Thomasburg

On Tuesday evening a Pancake Social was held in the vestry of the Thomasburg United church. Supper was served from 6 till 8 p.m. About 90 people partook of the delicious supper which was served by the ladies of the church.

After the supper everyone removed to the church where a program was then given.

Rev. Mr. Flatt presided as chairman and gave a speech, after which Miss Doris Flatt gave a reading called "Miss Edith Helps Things Along."

CAPTAIN DOLLAR WORKS AT 88; HAS NO IDEA OF QUITING JOB

Shipping Magnate and Former Canadian Lumberman Optimistic.

SEES SLUMP GOING

BRACEBRIDGE, Ont., March 31—(Special to The Examiner).—Although it is over half a century since Robert Dollar left his lumbering interests here to go forth and eventually become the world's most prominent and picturesque shipping magnate, the news that he had just entered upon his 89th year "still on the job", was received here with pleasure, particularly by a few old-timers who remember him as a resident.

Nearly five years ago Capt. Dollar and his wife visited the scenes of their youthful days in Bracebridge. Arm in arm, like a honeymoon couple, though they had celebrated their golden wedding three years before, they walked around the house that was their old home. It is recalled that their youngest granddaughter, who was with them remarked, "Grandad, this is an awful dump," and the grandmother said, "Child, when we moved from our first house here we though this a palace, although it was clapboards and did not have its present brick facing."

Mrs. Dollar Had Fall.

The 88th birthday of Capt. Dollar was observed quietly at his magnificent home at San Francisco Bay, St. Rafael, California.

Mrs. Dollar, to whom he was married fifty-seven years ago, was unable to take part in the observance, having suffered a fall that still confined her to bed.

Hundreds of letters, telegrams, radiograms and cablegrams carrying birthday felicitations were delivered from all parts of the world.

Seventy-seven years ago Captain Dollar got his first job in a machine shop at Falkirk, Scotland, his birthplace. A week later he brought home to his mother his salary, 60 cents.

"It was hard work, but hard work never hurt any one," he reminisced; "that was a long time ago, but I'll never forget the light of love and pride in mother's eyes. No other event in my career brings me happier memory than that."

Since then he has made millions, climaxing his career with a fortnightly passenger steamship service around the world that the whole maritime fraternity predicted would be a failure.

Was Canuck Lumberjack

At 22 Captain Dollar was foreman of a Canadian lumber camp in the wooded wilderness north of Ottawa. Then he engaged in his lumber operations in Bracebridge until at 36 he moved to the Michigan woods. At 44 he was in the lumber business in California. At 66 he had lumber interests in Washington state and British Columbia and started trade to the Orient.

At 80, when most men are ready to retire, Captain Dollar launched the enterprise for which he is known throughout the world—his round-the-world steamship service.

Despite his age, he arrives at his San Francisco offices every morning at 8.35 o'clock. His health is good and he comments he won't stop work as long as he lives.

From the experience of his many years he refuses to believe that the present economic phase will last; and said the world is gradually crawling out of the slump.

"I've been through six or seven of them, and can generally predict their course," he said. "We are on the upgrade. Have confidence and work—good times are heading this way."

Bailieboro

Although the lake front and marshes have not opened to any extent as yet, still the trappers have commenced setting out a few traps for muskrats.

The time is now getting limited and the trappers are getting anxious to get going.

In the majority of marshes the rat houses are quite numerous and indications point to a fair catch, if the season opens soon.

On Tuesday the woodchucks could be seen in numbers, basking in the warm spring sun.

Mr. Reginald Armstrong has started a milk route. He has an excellent jersey herd and is supplying an excellent quality of milk and cream to the villagers. This is the first milk route to be opened in the village.

OHIO UNION IS SEEKING TO SPREAD COAL STRIKE

COLUMBUS, O., Mar. 31.—An attempt to spread the Ohio coal strike to every mine in the State and the West Virginia panhandle will be made by the United Mine Workers of America.

The first step in this move was taken last night when International and district officers of the union called for a strike of all miners in District 6, comprising the Panhandle and Ohio, effective to-morrow.

Lee Hall, president of the district, estimated the call would affect 25,000 miners including 12,000 already idle because of a wage dispute. An additional 10,000 miners in the district have drifted from the union fold since the breakdown of the Jacksonville agreement in 1927, Hall said.

WEIRD RITUAL OF HEAD HUNTERS SEEN FIRST TIME BY WHITE MEN

Ecuador Indians Remove Skull Then Bake and Smoke Skin Three Days.

DANCE LASTS WEEK.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 31—The Tzanza, weird victory ritual of head hunters in the Jivarro Indian country, of Ecuador, is described in a letter sent home by Don Beatty, Birmingham flier, a member of the Smithsonian Institute's Latin-American expedition.

Pilot Beatty wrote from Yaupe, Oriente de Ecuador, that his party had recently been permitted to witness the head shrinking ceremony that follows capture of enemy tribesmen by the Jivarros because of a kindness done a principal Chief, Ambuscha. The witnesses, he said, believed themselves the first white men to see such a celebration. Few had penetrated that jungle country before, he added.

"The Tzanza ceremony," the flier's letter said, "started with the ouring of the heads as two had been taken from the enemies of Chief Ambuscha. This was done by cutting the scalp up the back from the neck and taking the entire skull out of the covering skin. This skin was then filled with wet, hot sand, after having been rubbed with vegetable oil—and was then slowly revolved over the red coals of a fire.

Dancing and Drinking

"After being smoked and baked both inside and out for three days, the Tzanza was ready for the ceremony. This consisted of a week's dancing, much drinking of masato or chica—the Indian's wiskey—and constant dancing until the dancers fell out from exhaustion. The weird music—full of Congo atmosphere—kept going the entire time.

"Both heads, one of a man and the other of a woman, were in the central position, hung down by a piece of bark tied to the long hair of the Tzanza. This bark was in turn tied to the overhead grave of one of their chiefs. The Indians, with their lances and long chonta wood spears, their muzzle-loading guns, danced back and forth to the hanging Tzanzas, firing their guns, jabbing with their spears and lances in all directions.

"This kept up," with the constant drinking of chica, for six days and nights—until their medicine man, Wishinu, saw signs of victory for them in their next encounter."

Bottle Necks of St. Clair and St. Mary Rivers Block Upper Lower Lakes.

"FITTING OUT" STARTS.

TORONTO, March 31 (C.P.).—Ice, jammed into the "bottle necks" of the St. Clair and St. Mary's Rivers, is holding up what might have been the earliest start of navigation for many years. With the "official" opening of the Great Lakes navigation set for April 15, ice at Sault Ste. Marie and at Port Lambton is proving a barrier to both upper and lower lakes. But the spring weather is turning the ice mushy.

Every port on the lakes reports seasonal activity of shipping. "Fitting out" crews are busy overhauling engines and mixing paints. The staccato tap of chipping hammers resounds from empty hulls, and, ashore, thousands of stevedores, sailors and specialists in marine activity are anxiously awaiting the casting off of lines and the hoarse bellow of the whistles.

Toronto's quota of winter-bound boats are being moved around. Fussy little tugs are heaving and tugging the boats from their winter berths to elevators. A black pall of dust over the industrial area at Ashbridge's Bay signifies the unloading of coal cargoes. The oil fleet in the turning basin is being scrubbed and polished.

Outfitting is well under way at Sarnia. Grain vessels, having held their cargo in the holds all winter, are moving into the elevator slips.

PILES ALL GONE

Without Salves or Cutting

Itching bleeding protruding piles go quickly and don't come back if you remove the cause. Bad blood circulation in the hemorrhoidal veins causes piles by making the affected parts weak flabby almost dead. Salves and cutting fail because only an internal medicine can actually correct the cause of piles. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt discovered a real internal Pile remedy. After prescribing it for 4,000 patients with success in 960 cases he named it HEM-ROID. McDermid & Jury Bond's Drug Store says one bottle of HEM ROID Tablets must end your Pile misery or money back.

The Philippines' sugar crop is now expected to exceed estimates.

EASTER SUNDAY IS JOYOUS DAY AT MILLBROOK

Special Services Are Held in the Three Local Churches.

DECORATIONS BEAUTIFUL

MILLBROOK, March 31 (Examiner Correspondence).—Special Easter services were held in the three local churches on Sunday, with appropriate music by the choirs, seasonablef joral decorations while sermons emphasizing the Easter message were preached by the pastors to their respective congregations attendance being most gratifying at the several places of worship, an atmosphere of expectancy and joyousness suitable to the Eastertide marking the gatherings of the day throughout.

In the parish of Cavan services began at St. Thomas' church with holy communion at 8 a.m. and again at 9 o'clock the latter being fully choral, the rector, Rev. William Simpson, B.A., officiating. At eleven o'clock the service was at St. John's church, Ida, with holy communion and sermon, the anthem being "Christ Our Passover" Mrs. L. H. Winslow presiding at the pipe organ, and in the afternoon at three o'clock the rector was at Christ Church, Baillieboro, where the communion was administered preceding the sermon, the choir singing the anthem, "He is Risen" (Simper), and Mrs. I. Lunney playing the organ.

Evensong and sermon were at St. Thomas' church, Millbrook, at 7 p.m. the hymns bringing an appropriate Easter atmosphere, as did also the anthem by the choir "Hallelujh, Now is Christ Risen" (Caleb Simper), and the singing of Psalms 114 and 115, with the Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis (Maunder in C).

Miss Collins played as the opening voluntary, "Adoration" by Felix Borowski, and as a recessional "Ceremonial March" (Harris), while leading up to the Easter services on Sunday were a special gathering for prayer and meditation on Thursday at 3 p.m. in the parish hall, and on Good Friday at 8 o'clock a congregational meeting i St. Thomas' church at which the rector preached. The flowers on Sunday were given by members of the congregation in memory of loved ones called home, and were kept all in white, Easter lilies on the altar, and carnations for the organ and reading desk.

Grace Presbyterian

Grace Presbyterian church marked the Easter Sunday with a service for the Sunday School at 2 p.m. Hymns were in keeping with the Easter occasion, Master Hugh Williams reading the scripture lesson, and also giving a recitation emphasizing the joyousness of the special season.

The members of the senior classes formed the choir, singing an appropriate anthem, while the boys of Miss Vanita Ingram's class, aged from six to ten years, came to the pulpit and told the Easter story illustrated by large colored pictures, and illuminated Bible texts. The address was given by the minister, Rev. H. R. Williams, B.A., and the encouraging reports for the day, with the benediction, closed the service.

In the evening a large congregation gathered, the choir singing the anthem "Rejoice 'Tis Eastertide" the leader, Mr. Charles Thorndyke, contributing a tenor solo, "Precious Name, O How Sweet" at the conclusion of the sermon; Miss Grace Johnson presided at the organ. Rev. Mr. Williams preached from the text, "If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain" (1 Corinthians 15:14) the Easter message centring round three questions, with the replies developed in detail (a) Could God raise Jesus from the dead? (b) Did God raise Christ from the dead? (c) Why did God raise His Son from the dead?

The flowers banking the altar were potted tulips, primroses, and ferns, their fragrance and loveliness adding to the spirit of worship which marked in a special manner the day's services.

In St. Andrew's United Church the processional anthem at morning worship was, "Risen a Glorious King" (Ira B. Wilson), the second offering by the choir being, "Hallelujah, Now is Christ Risen" (Simper), and the other special number a quartette, "'Tis Midnight" (Billingsby), by Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. M. McDowell.

The flowers on the altar were daffodils and lovely Easter lilies, the latter the gift of Mrs. (Rev.) Joseph Wilks and coming direct from Bermuda; Howard E. Smith, a friend of the late Mr. Wilks, continuing the custom he kept up for many years during his lifetime, of sending a box of the fragrant blossoms from his home at St. David's Bermuda, each Eastertide.

The pastor, Rev. W. W. Jones, B.D., chose his text from Hebrews 13:20-21: "Now the God of Peace that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in every good work to do His will" developing the though that Easter emphasizes the spiritual side, marking a great victory into which we enter by reverence, faith, love, and obedience. The secondary evidences of the resurrection were chiefly dealt with, and through the analogy of scriptural illustration proof was given that the same Jesus who companied with His disciples previous to Calvary met them again after His resurrection. "His interest in little children continues still; also His anxiety to comfort sorrowing hearts; to save the lost, and to start anew those who have made a moral failure of life; may this Eastertide bring to all them that believe a new joy, new sense of duty, new hope, and newness of life in our Saviour, Christ the Lord."

MOUNTIES PLAN PATROL BY AIR

Planes Will be Used to Stop Liquor Being Landed in Nova Scotia.

BASE AT HALIFAX

HALIFAX, N.S., March 31.—(Special to The Examiner).—Flying boats or pontoon equipped planes will provide the "eyes" for Royal Canadian Mounted Police who are assuming the duty of preventing the landing of contraband liquors along the Nova Scotia coast, according to announcement of Assistant Commissioner Junget.

At least two aircraft will be quartered here, at the old marine flying base, constructed during the latter years of the war at Eastern Passage. The old hangar at the Passage, it is understood, is to undergo repairs immediately, and in future will provide coverage for the aircraft of the customs preventive division of the "Mounties."

For years the hangar, constructed in 1917 and used by an American squadron under direction of Admiral (then Captain) Richard R. Byrd, polar and trans-Atlantic flyer, has been in disuse. At the conclusion of the war the American squadron, consisting of some two hundred men, not including members of an American Red Cross unit, who were quartered in the city, abandoned the site and later it was used for a time by planes of the department of national defence, engaged in photographic survey and forestry work.

Appointments Announced.

At Moncton Commissioner Junget announced the senior officers who will command the units policing Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. Inspector J. L. Fripps, a Halifax man will be assistant officer in charge of Maritimes headquarters with Capt. E. P. C. Salt, at present commissioner of the New Brunswick provincial unit, as superintendent of the N.B. division.

Inspector LaNauze will be superintendent for Nova Scotia with headquarters here and Commissioner Blaks will become an inspector and will take up his duties at Fredericton as assistant to Captain Salt.

Commissioner Junget announced that the policing of Prince Edward Island may also be taken over by the R.C.M.P. and stated that the total strength of the force would number between 300 and 350 men.

Taken Ill on Way.

Inspector La Nauze, who will have charge of the Nova Scotia division was taken ill en route here from Banff, Alta., and entered hospital at Ottawa to undergo treatment for an attack of flu. Mrs. La Nauze and her four children proceded to the city.

GRAB-RUN THIEVES VERY BUSY IN LONDON

Newspapers Are Criticizing Police for Failure to Check Robberies

London.—Newspapers here are asking the police why they do not check the street robberies which have increased greatly of late.

The Express says: "Ignoring wireless, mobile police, police boxes, and the famous flying squad, these modern Dick Turpins have flung defiance at Scotland Yard.

A number of girl cashiers going to and from banks have been robbed. In one case, the other day, a bag containing £115 was snatched.

Miss M. Wright of Carshalton Rd., Carshalton, walking in Oxford Rd., Carshalton, was knocked down by a defiance at Scotland Yard." and escaped.

According to the last report of the commissioner of police, there were 77 robberies reported to the police. In only 29 of these cases were convictions obtained.

A special squad of detectives, under a chief inspector, were detailed to concentrate on scouring the underworld of London to round up all known thieves. But street stealing continues.

MAURICE WENTWORTH GRAY

MILLBROOK, Mar. 31 (Examiner Correspondence)—The funeral of Maurice Wentworth Gray, whose death at the early age of twenty-eight years occurred on Easter Sunday, March 27, after a lingering illness, took place on Tuesday, at 4.30 p.m., from the residence of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wentworth Gray, King street. Rev. William Simpson, B.A., rector of the parish of Cavan, assisted by Rev. H. R. Williams, B.A., of Grace Presbyterian Church, and Rev. W. W. Jones, B.D. of St. Andrew's United Church conducted the services.

Deceased was an active member of the Canadian Order of Foresters and also of J. B. Hall Lodge A.F. and A.M., No. 145, and the funeral, which was very largely attended, was under the auspices of the latter fraternal organization, the officers in charge including Brothers Ivan L. H. Gray, W.M.; J. Stewart McGill, P.M.; and Charles Thorndyke, P.D.D.G.M.

Mr. Gray was born and brought up in Millbrook, and though his life was such a comparatively brief one, he had won for himself an assured place in the community and in the esteem of its citizens. A member of St. Thomas' Anglican Church, he was active in its interests and a competent worker in the A.Y.P.A., so long as his health permitted. Scarcely more than six months ago he was married to Gladys, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. McQuilkin, of Brighton, who survives him together with his parents; three brothers, Dr. Alvin, of Victoria, B.C.; Henry and George at home; and three sisters, Mrs. Lloyd Acton, of Detroit, Michigan; Mrs. Russell H. Smith, Millbrook; and Maretta, whose school is at Raeboro.

Holding a responsible business position as manager of the local branch of the Lindsay Creamery Company and the Millbrook Coal Company for some time past, deceased was finally obliged in January of this year to resign from all activities of any nature owing to failing health.

Among the many beautiful floral tributes, in addition to those from a wide circle of relatives and friends, were emblems from J. B. Hall Lodge A.F. and A.M. and the local branch of the Canadian Order of Foresters; and wreaths from the A.Y.P.A. of St. Thomas' Church, and from the congregation; also the Peterborough and Millbrook branches of the business firm of which Mr. Gray was for some months the head.

The pall-bearers were brother members of the Masonic Order, and included Brothers R. Scott, L. J. Byam, P.M.; J. S. McGill, P.M.; D. Fowler, Dr. L. J. Stewart, and Clifford Hall, P.M. Interment was in the Presbyterian cemetery, Millbrook.

Friends from outside points who attended the funeral included: Mr. and Mrs. Moffatt, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Acton, Detroit; Mrs. G. West, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. H. McQuilkin, Brighton; Mr. and Mrs. Ernest McQuilkin, and child, of Rochester, N.Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Mills, Brighton; Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Scott, Peterborough.

W. Jones, B. D., pastor of St. Andrew's United Church, having charge of the service.

Deceased was born in Pontypool fifty-two years ago, but in recent years had been living in Toronto, failing health leading to his coming to Millbrook and remaining with his mother for the past two years.

Mr. Ridge is survived by his widow, formerly Fledda Wright, of Hadyn, Ontario, and one daughter, Margaret, both living in Toronto; one brother, John, of Millbrook; another brother, Joseph, and his father, William Ridge, predeceased him, his mother continuing to retain her home in the village. Mr. G. W. Sayles, and his sister, Mrs. William West, are cousins.

HAVELOCK DANCE PROVES POPULAR

Miss M. McMahon Wins Cedar Chest—Ticket Drawn by T. P. Lancaster.

HAVELOCK, March 31.—(Examiner Correspondence).—The "At Home" and dance held in the town hall under the auspices of the ladies of Our Lady of Mount Carmel parish on Easter Monday evening was an outstanding success. The decorations being carried out in mauve and orchid were most appropriate and voted by all present as the best the old town hall ever donned. Gone was the old dilapidated scenery and with it the drab atmosphere, having been replaced, temporarily at least, by decorations that truly expressed all the joy of Eastertide. Seated at the inner door one could easily discern a look of genuine amazement on the countenances of the couples as they filed in to a hall magnificently transformed.

Lucky Ticket

A sumptuous buffet luncheon was served in the basement at midnight. A few more dances then time was taken for the feature of the evening, namely the drawing of the ticket for the beautiful cedar chest and contents. T. P. Lancaster, M.L.A., was then called on to mix the tickets in a churn on the platform and draw the lucky ticket. Previous to the drawing Mr. Lancaster said in all his years as a resident of the village he had never seen the hall looking so beautiful and complimented the ladies on the splendidly managed and most successful dance. Continuing he said: "Never have I had the pleasure of seeing so many beautiful dresses and young ladies at a dance in the village. It is a much easier task to pick this ticket than it would be to choose the prettiest girl." Miss Margaret McMahon, Hastings, R.R. No. 2, was the winner and the number of the ticket was 893.

Mose Yokom and his Band of Peterborough played for both round and square dancing. The splendid program included many novelty numbers such as the balloon dance, Leap Year Waltz, Paul Jones's and several snappy fox trots. "Kiss Waltz" was perfect for the Moon dance.

FASHION SERVICE

It promises to be a very popular season for jacket dresses.

They are already appearing in gay contrasting schemes.

This model is sportive. The skirt is plain light green sheer woolen. The blouse is vivid yellow crepe silk print. The bone buttons repeat the green shade. The Vionnet closing produces a decidedly slenderizing effect.

And it's the most simple dress to fashion.

You can also carry it out as a complete dress, if you like. Choose one material as plain or printed flat crepe or a sheer woolen

Engagement Broken

Joyce Wethered, noted British golfer, whose engagement to another golfer, 20 years her senior, has been broken off.

Lenten season and Good Friday services. The full Choral Communion service was used (Smart's), and the hymns spoke eloquently of the glorious Easter resurrection. The processional hymn was "Christ, the Lord, is Risen To-day, Alleluia." Other hymns were "Ye Choirs of New Jerusalem," and "Jesus, Gentlest Saviour." The recession used was "Lord, Now Lettest Thy Servant Depart in Peace." The number of communicants was the largest since 1916, and both congregations were unusually large. The rector, Rev. P. Gatley Reynolds, chose as his text, "Be not affrighted; ye seek Jesus, of Nazareth, which was crucified; He is risen; he is not here; behold the place where they laid Him," St. Mark 16:6; and "Then were the disciples glad, when they saw the Lord." St. John 20:20.

The evening service was a continuation of the Easter theme; the rector taking as his subject, "The Peace of Christ's Resurrection Blessing." "When the doors were shut where the disciples where for fear of the Jews, came Jesus and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, 'Peace be unto you'." St. John 20:19. Dwelling on the thought that Jesus comes in spite of fears and troubles and shut doors, Mr. Reynolds urged all to remember that you cannot leave Jesus out of you life, or your sin.

The evening's processional hymn was "Jesus Christ is Risen To-day, Alleluia," and the other hymns were, "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth," and "Hail, Gladdening Light," with Mrs. James Aylesworth as organist.

Household Hints

Spring is the time to paint. Brighten up the home, outside and inside. Nothing gives one quite as much satisfaction for a limited cost. It's so easy, now that the best paint comes to you ready mixed with full directions. With a good brush and good paint, you can work wonders on the dingiest, shabbiest surface in a short time. Besides improving the appearance, painting with good paint preserves and protects, prolonging the life of the dwelling.

Higgins' Hardware Company and The Canadian Department Stores Limited has secured the right to sell Flo-glaze, the paint that leaves no brush marks, covers farther, looks better, lasts longer and costs less per square foot of painted surface. They can sell you a good brush too and you can't do a good job with a poor brush.

CREPE PAPER WORK BEING DISPLAYED

Crepe Paper Demonstrator to be Seen at Hill's Store.

A dainty pink lady spreads her voluminous skirts in the south display window of The Examiner. She is just one of the many pretty things in the window that have been manufactured from Interlake Crepe Paper, whose demonstrator is at the Hill Store this week.

She is a rose pink boudoir novelty, with a saucy green paper plume to her bonnet and bewitching butterflies sprayed over her wide skirts.

There are beautiful paper flowers in the window, rich red roses with perfectly natural folded buds; gladioli and hollyhocks on their long stalks; yellow daffodils, crimson poppies, huge pink peonies, white carnations and a spreading sheaf of apple blossoms.

The baskets of paper are very pretty, one rounded shape of braided red and black especially smart. There are oddly-shaped lamp shades, one in a fetching pagoda pattern and another with six stripes of different colors, in a new idea.

And there is a whole picture developed in paper with minute and careful skill. An old-time lady with crinoline and poke bonnet goes a-calling with an attendant swain resplendent in high hat and spreading coat-tails. Every bit of this pretty design is done in paper, in a very distinctive and novel conception.

District Churches

AT MADOC

AT ST. PETER'S PRESBYTERIAN

MADOC, March 31 (Examiner Correspondence).—Easter Sunday was a red letter day in St. Peter's Presbyterian Church. A wonderful sunny day, glorious Easter music rendered by the choir during the services, in addition to an organ recital at the close of the day, and the event of the newly inducted pastor, Rev. R. Bertram Nelles, taking charge, all combined to make the day a very special occasion. Large congregations greeted Mr. Nelles, who preached Easter messages at both services. Many strangers and members from neighboring congregations augmented the regular attendance, and they were rewarded by exceptionally fine services.

Mr. Nelles chose as his morning theme, "Thomas, the missing man," John 2, 20-24. "Thomas, one of the twelve, was not with them when Jesus came"; and the evening there was "Sweeter as the years go by," with the text, Isaiah 48, 18.

The music under the guidance of Mr. George Maybee, Jr., was greatly enjoyed. Morning anthem was "Christ is risen from the dead" (Smith). A duet was given by Mr. and Mrs. M. Bedford, "In the Garden." The evening anthem, "Christ, Being Raised from the Dead" (Elvey).

The recital following, a solo was given by Miss Lenore Vandervoort, "Open the Gates of the Temple," and the anthem, "Sun of My Soul," by Turner. Mr. E. Bedford gave as a solo, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul."

An organ number followed, "Tocoata" by Boelmann; and later, "Ave Maria" (Schubert), with "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth" (Handel), for the offertory. The anthem, "Radiant Morn" (Woodward) was given also. The postlude was "Prelude" and "Fuge" in C major (Bach).

AT ST. JOHN'S

Easter Day services at the Church of St. John the Baptist (Anglican), Madoc, were characterized by bright, triumphal music, with Miss Lilian Hart as organist; beautiful decorations of calla lillies, Easter lillies, daffodils, and gay red tulips, some of which were presented by their daughters in loving memory of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Spurr.

The choir, in fresh white robes, rejoiced in the Easter Processional which had been omitted during the Miss Grace McCarthy, Reid Street, who has just been transferred by the Bell Telephone Company to Port Hope, where she will be chief operator, was guest of honor yesterday afternoon at a charming tea arranged by her associates of the local Bell staff. The table in the ladies' parlor was very attractively done with a cloth of ecru lace, a silver basket filled with daffodils and mauve candles in silver holders, carrying out the prevailing Easter color scheme of mauve and yellow. Tea was poured by Miss Winifred Pammett, assisted by Miss Audrey Elcombe, Miss Geraldine Anderson, Miss Mary Flynn and Miss May Johnson. Arrangements were in charge of the Misses Pammett, Elcombe and Anderson. The presentation of a leather writing case to Miss McCarthy, the gift of her associates, with an accompanying address, was made by Miss Loretta Kennedy, and was suitably acknowledged.

The Major Bennett Chapter I.O.D.E. was responsible for a very gay Leap Year dance last night, held in Austin's Banquet Hall, with a number of novel features that made it quite an original affair. The jolly note to the entertainment was set when in a victoria drawn by a spanking pair, loaned by Mr. Gus White, a number of the guests arrived, with Bob White and Douglas Hall as black-faced coachmen in old-time outfits, followed closely by Terry Hall on his motorcycle, with his partner of the evening in the side car. The whole dance was a Leap Year event, the ladies inviting their partners, paying their taxi fares and their dance expenses, even providing boutonnieres and refreshments later at the Elite Sweets Cafe. The programs were also filled by the young ladies, the young men having the unique experience of sitting against the wall, waiting for invitations to dance. Excellent music was provided by Mowry-Steer and their Silver Collegians, and the hall, recently decorated by Mr. Austin, was done in Easter effect, very attractively, with spring flowers in gay paper over the lights and around the orchestra stand, and streamers in green and canary yellow. The prizes for the spot dance were won by Miss Arleigh Comstock and Mr. Max Comstock, and for the Cinderella dance by Miss Marcelle Garvey and Mr. Arnold Deyell. The guests, who were received by the patronesses, Mrs. C. H. Rogers and Mrs. R. G. Gavine, with the regent of the Chapter, Miss Frances Jennings, included Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Cowan, the Misses Marion Stacey, Shirley Pettit, Margaret Rogers, Mary Kirkwood, Betty Pilling, Ruth McKee, Peggy Glaspell of Toronto, Jean Ackerman, Helen Cole, Mary Macdonald, Grace Comstock, Margaret Borbridge, T. FLOWERS HAVE AGAIN taken their place in the realm of millinery.

* * * * * * *

With the advent of spring they make a timely trimming, gay and cheerful. The unrelieved and often unbecoming hats of past seasons are giving way to shapes that set off faces to better advantage.

* * * * * * *

The trimmings of buds and blossoms and feathers, too, lend charm to complexions as well as adornment to the hats. But they can do this only when the flowers are kept in their pristine beauty.

* * * * * * *

The hints given to-day will prove an aid to this end, whether the flowers are new as the season, or have been brought out from a long rest in some old hatbox or store closet.

* * * * * * *

Never allow edges of flowers or foliage to get frayed. Just a few wisps of ravelling spoil an entire effect. Clip the threads. If necessary, shear the edgess of the flowers to remove any soiled rims.

* * * * * * *

It is these that catch the dust first. The other portions of petals may have kept fresh. Manicure scissors are recommended for this work.

* * * * * * *

When artificial flowers are actually soiled they can be home cleaned with any quick-drying cleansing fluid.

* * * * * * *

Moisten a lamb's wool powder puff with the fluid and rub the petals gently and deftly with it. The amount of dust which can be removed thus is certainly amazing.

* * * * * * *

The petals will not be harmed if the work is done rapidly and the rubbing is done with the nap, should the petals and foliage have a nap. All velvet has.

* * * * * * *

When flowers are white, a further treatment, this time with French chalk, should be given the petals. Dip the powder puff in the interstices in the textile and ensure a better white quality.

* * * * * * *

Shake the flowers well so that none of the loose white dust remains.

* * * * * * *

When flowers are crushed or wilted looking, a good steaming will bring back their vitality. Hold a flower upside down where the steam from a tea kettle spout will force its way into the very heart of the blossom.

* * * * * * *

Keep it in this steam until petals are moist, but not wet. From time to time shake the flower gently. When all the petals are slightly dampened, press them very lightly into their original shape, and while not yet dry, hang up the flower by its stem, thus keeping it upside down to thoroughy dry.

* * * * * * *

If the flowers are very delicate in texture, the petals should not be pressed into shape, but be allowed to dry immediately as described. When the dry flowers are positioned right side up, the petals fall gracefully as they should.

* * * * * * *

The tiny wires which are used at the back of artificial foliage separate easily from the leaves. They can be touched lightly with glue and pressed into place so that they hold.

* * * * * * *

Or they can be more firmly secured in position with slivers of court plaster or surgeons' tape.

Twilight Circle To Hold Afternoon Tea

Group F of the Women's Missionary Society of George Street United Church, under the leadership of Mrs. W. H. Morton, met at the home of Mrs. J. W. Hales, 635 Stewart street on Tuesday evening with a large attendance.

Mrs. Morton presided and announced the tea which is to be held by the Twilight Mission Circle on Saturday, April 2nd at the home of Miss Georgie Hardill, 343 McDonnel street. The Scripture reading was given by Mrs. E. Brown, Mrs. A. Lane led in prayer. In the absence of Mrs. Fanning Mrs. Morton read the treasurer's report, Mrs. Flannery reported for the Sick and Visiting Committee.

Rev. Dr. A. T. Brown gave an inspiring address on "Holding up the Torch." A vocal duet "Ivory Palaces' 'was given by Mesdames Girven and Lewis accompanied by the Misses Ludbrook. Several guitar and banjo selections were played by the Misses Ludbrook.

Dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. W. J. Hales assisted by members of the group and a social half hour enjoyed.

A vote of thanks was moved by Rev. Dr. A. T. Brown, seconded by Mrs. Piber. The meeting closed with prayer by Rev. Dr. A. T. Brown.

How to Treat Those Miserable Colds So Prevalent Here Now

In This Season of Pneumonia, With Many Scattered Cases of Flu Reported, Colds Should Be Checked Promptly

Peterborough families are urged not to take chances with colds now. Colds reduce the body resistance and often pave the way for "Flu" and pneumonia. At this season when pneumonia takes its heaviest toll—and with scattered cases of "Flu" reported from many sections of the Dominion—every cold should be checked promptly.

Start at the "First Sign."

At the first sign of "catching cold"—that unmistakable stuffy, sneezy feeling—snuff some Vicks VapoRub up the nose several times a day. This will often check a cold at the start. It is a wise plan, if possible, to avoid exposure to those with colds, or to conditions usually followed by colds.

Vigorous Treatment Urged.

If a cold has developed, don't neglect it. At bed-time, rub the chest and throat vigorously with Vicks VapoRub. Spread on thick and cover with warm flannel. If the head is clogged with mucus or there is much coughing, melt a spoonful of Vicks in boiling water and inhale the steaming vapors. If possible, stay at home until the cold is broken. Complete rest—preferably in bed—helps to maintain body resistance and throw off the cold more quickly.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

GALLSTONES VERY COMMON.

If you were asked which was the most important organ in the body it is very likely that you would say the heart, as you remember that it is only by its continuous pumping of the blood that you are kept alive.

Your doctor, however, would likely consider other organs of more importance as he thinks of the various jobs they perform in the body.

The liver is really the 'king of the organs' in the estimation of physicians because of the many important things it does for you.

Notwithstanding these very important things it is doing—making bile, clearing out poisons from the blood, storing sugar and so forth, it seems able to withstand considerable abuse without apparently showing any symptoms. And the gall-bladder which is really a part of the liver and holds the bile manufactured by the liver, is also able to continue its work despite the abuse it also receives.

In one of the great European hospitals where examinations are made after death in a regular routine manner, it was found that in 1000 cases, 450 men and 550 women, that gallstones were present in nearly one-third of the cases. While there is a little higher percentage than is found in Canada and the United States, nevertheless it shows that a great number of people have gall-stones and do not know that they have them because they apparently have no symptoms.

The examination showed that in addition to the gall-stones that there had been actually inflammation of the gall-bladder and the surrounding parts in the majority of cases.

In other words, a great majority of individuals, especially as they get older, really have an inflamed condition of the gall-bladder which causes a "sick" feeling in the stomach with a great deal of gas formation, but the individual thinks he has a simple attack of indigestion, or gas pressure from something he has eaten.

Now, while it is gratifying in a sense to know that despite the formation of gall-stones very few have to undergo an operation, nevertheless the lesson for all of us is that inflammation of the gall-bladder with 'indigestion' symptoms and the formation of stones, is usually due to some infection in the system, and to the fact that the liver and gall-bladder are not "squeezed" sufficiently by exercise or deep breathing.

It is this slowing up or stasis of the liver circulation and gall-bladder that causes inflammation and stone formation.

MOURNING WARDROBE

"A death occurred in our family and I had to go in mourning. I could hardly afford to buy all black clothes, so decided to dye what I had. I consulted our druggist and he advised using Diamond Dyes. Everything came out beautifully; coats, wool dresses, stockings and all. I have since learned to appreciate the excellence of the black Diamond Dyes. I tried another black dye and the results were impossible. I had to get Diamond Dyes and do the work over. Recently I have tinted my curtains a beautiful raspberry shade and dyed a rug a lovely garnet with Diamond Dyes. They are real money savers—the finest dyes money can buy—I truly believe."

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL

GEORGE ARLISS IN "THE MAN WHO PLAYED GOD"

A great musician, a pianist deprived of his hearing at a crucial moment in his career, turning against his Creator because of his suffering, contemplating suicide as a way out, and then—finding by a unique means a solution of his problem, playing God to those less fortunate—that is the theme of Arliss' latest picture.

His voice seems more resonant and more rich than ever in this picture. It has a low note that chimes in with the somewhat dramatic action. And his art is supreme. In an age of youth, this older actor holds the stage with his finesse, the manner in which he conveys impressions so subtly and easily by means of simple action and, more often, merely by his expressive eyes. As Monte Royle, a genius in the musical world, he holds the stage from first to last.

His wife is with him, as nearly always is the case in his pictures. It is said that he always wants to include her, if possible. This time she is Florence, Monte's sister, while Violet Heming and Bette Davis have the roles of the two women who love him, the young, eager Grace, infatuated by his music, and the older Mildred.

With the feature is a Collegian comedy, youthful and refreshing, and some Irish scenes and music that bring back memories of another time in their simple melodies. Through the bits of beauty from the Green Isle over the sea runs the thread of unforgettable Celtic music: "Danny Boy," "The Wearing of the Green," "The Pretty Girl Milking Her Cow," "Slan-na-Gael, Mavourneen"—those old favorites.—Jeanette.

Mrs. Throop also brought many fine suggestions as to different forms of work for the local union, and outlined the purpose of the county organization and the means of affiliation.

She announced a county executive meeting to be held here on April 13th, when plans will be made for a county convention to be held in June.

Letters of appreciation for kindness, and flowers to shut-in members will be sent by those in charge.

The meeting was brought to a conclusion with prayer and the Benediction by Mrs. Munn.

Ernest Hope is Expressed That Industry Will Be Stimulated.

EAST WINDSOR, March 31. — Prices of the new Ford V-8 and four-cylinder cars — which are established deliberately to inspire a return of large-volume automobile buying, and thus to "start employment again"—were announced yesterday by Wallace R. Campbell, President of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited.

May Stimulate Business

"The announcement of the prices of the new Ford cars gives us the greatest satisfaction," said Mr. Campbell, "because the entire Ford organization believes that their presentation to the public will give a definite stimulus to business activity in Canada.

"The new Ford car has been developed with the deliberate intention of ding everything in our power to start employment again. We considered that to be our duty. To accomplish this we sought to create a car, greatly in advance of former cars in value, yet so simple that it could be manufactured and sold at a price which would inspire the public to buy, even in the face of the present economic conditions.

"We know already that the public will acclaim the new car. At meetings throughout Canada our dealers received the car with tremendous enthusiasm. With the announcement of the prices to-day, we feel certain we have accomplished what we set out to do.

"We have taken this step deliberately. We have priced the cars at levels which will allow little if any profit, with the sole intention of offering the public the finest cars we know how to build at a price it can afford, in these days, to pay. That combination should start buying again. If it does, it will mean a very definite increase in employment and in business generally."

Acclaimed Everywhere

At the same time Mr. Campbell made public excerpts from telegrams received to-day from branches reporting the enthusiasm with which the car was received by dealers yesterday. These follow:—

Toronto—"Just completed most enthusiastic dealer showing ever witnessed in the experience of this branch."

London—"Not possible for dealers to be more enthusiastic regarding product. They cheered for three minutes when car was unveiled. Appearances startled them."

Montreal—"Dealer reaction wonderful. Enthusiasm unbounded. Public interest displayed by telephone calls in response to morning paper announcement."

Saint John—"Enthusiasm tremendous. Dealer reaction most favorable ever seen here."

Regina—"Showing huge success. Everybody highly enthusiastic. Product greatly exceeded their expectations."

Calgary—"Dealer showing complete success. Enthusiasm far greater than at introduction of Model A."

Vancouver—"Never before in our experience have we witnessed so much genuine enthusiasm."

FIRE TOLL NINE.

ZAGREB, Rumania.— The death toll of the fire which started when a stock of films exploded in an apartment house here yesterday was raised to nine to-day by the death of five more of those who were injured.

CULBERTSON on CONTRACT

by Ely Culbertson

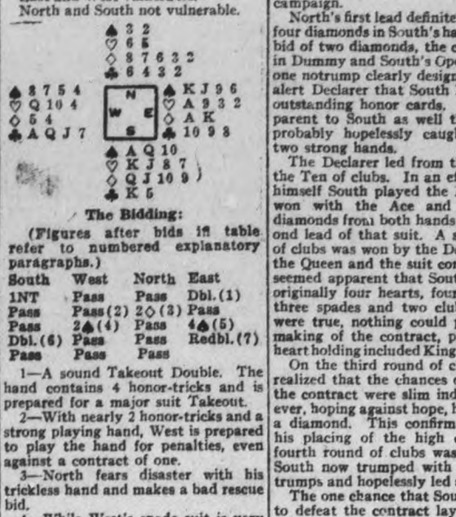
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

140

TIME'S POTENT POWER

Holding 3 sure trump-tricks in tenace position over the Declarer, and 2 full honor-tricks in the side suits, a player cannot be blamed for feeling certain that he can defeat a contract to take 10 tricks, particularly when neither Dummy nor the closed hand shows up with long suits already established. However, Mr. Bernard Cone, a New York Contract player, recently demonstrated, in a rubber game, the potent influence of the time factor in making an apparently unmakeable contract. His success, it is true, was in the first instance made possible by the unwise choice of an Opening lead by his senior opponent. Utilizing this initial error, Mr. Cone brilliantly played the hand below to a successful conclusion.

South—Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.
North and South not vulnerable.



The Bidding:

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1NT	Pass	Pass	Dbl.(1)
Pass	Pass(2)	2◇(3)	Pass
Pass	2♠(4)	Pass	4♠(5)
Dbl.(6)	Pass	Pass	Redbl.(7)
Pass	Pass	Pass

1—A sound Takeout Double. The hand contains 4 honor-tricks and is prepared for a major suit Takeout.

2—With nearly 2 honor-tricks and a strong playing hand, West is prepared to play the hand for penalties, even against a contract of one.

3—North fears disaster with his trickless hand and makes a bad rescue bid.

4—While West's spade suit is very weak, his partner's Takeout Double he knows is based on ability to play the hand at spades, or, failing that, his partner has a sound bid of his own. Otherwise, he would not have made a Takeout Double of an uncontested bid of one notrump.

5—East's jump to four spades is justified by his strong hand and his partner's show of strength through passing the bid of one notrump for penalties and his later bid of two spades.

6—Apparently a safe Penalty Double.

7—Perhaps questionable, although West's bid has been very strong.

The North player was a wooden follower of Whist traditions and opened, of all things, his fourth best diamond from a suit eight spot high and without the possibility of a single re-entry. This routine and unreasoned lead gave West the opportunity he was seeking. The correct Opening lead—namely, the doubleton heart—would have defeated the contract as it would have given his partner, with his strong hand, sea room in which to navigate and an opportunity to fight against the barrier of time. The heart lead, which is clearly dictated by the holding and the bidding, must result in the loss of a trick in that suit for East and West, which, through the workings of the time element, failed later to materialize. East's diamond King held the first trick and West immediately proceeded to develop his brilliant plan of campaign.

North's first lead definitely indicated four diamonds in South's hand. North's bid of two diamonds, the cards shown in Dummy and South's Opening bid of one notrump clearly designated to the alert Declarer that South held all the outstanding honor cards. It was apparent to South as well that he was probably hopelessly caught between two strong hands.

The Declarer led from the Dummy the Ten of clubs. In an effort to free himself South played the King; West won with the Ace and eliminated diamonds from both hands by the second lead of that suit. A second lead of clubs was won by the Declarer with the Queen and the suit continued. It seemed apparent that South had held originally four hearts, four diamonds, three spades and two clubs. If this were true, nothing could prevent the making of the contract, provided his heart holding included King and Knave.

On the third round of clubs, South realized that the chances of defeating the contract were slim indeed. However, hoping against hope, he discarded a diamond. This confirmed West in his placing of the high cards, so a fourth round of clubs was led, which South now trumped with the Ten of trumps and hopelessly led a heart.

The one chance that South now saw to defeat the contract lay in North's possible possession of the heart Queen, as the Dummy was void of both clubs and diamonds. South, therefore, led a heart and West's Ten held. West refused to permit South to escape from the trap and placed him in the lead again with the trump Queen, which, except for his Ace of trumps, was the only trick now remaining for the defending side, as South, after laying down the Ace, was forced to lead another heart or in lieu of that a diamond, giving West a trump and a discard. Through using the double throw-in of the strong South hand, Mr. Cone had brilliantly outwitted his opponents.

TO-DAY'S POINTER

Question: In what language do partners exchange information as to their respective holdings?

Answer: Valuation language, i.e., the trick-taking possibilities of each hand.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS

Untimely "Phychic" Bid.

Question: We had a most unusual hand arrive at disastrous results last evening and quite an argument. The writer was playing the South hand and the North and South hands were as follows:

North
Spades 7 6 5 4 2
Hearts Q
Diamonds Q J 6 4 3 2
Clubs J

South
Spades —
Hearts A 10 9 6 5 3
Diamonds A 10 9
Clubs 10 9 7 6

East and West are vulnerable and 30; North and South are nothing. East deals and bids one club; South bids one spade; West pass; North bids two spades; East three clubs; South pass; West pass; North three spades; East pass; South four hearts; West Double; North four spades; East Double; South five hearts; West Double; North five spades; East Double; South pass; West pass; North pass.

Answer: South's bid of one spade is an extremely dangerous "phychic" bid, as it is made in the highest ranking suit with no safe escape in case partner misunderstands; furthermore, having a void in a suit, there is always the danger that partner may hold four or five and therefore have defense in his hand. I agree that had North been particularly alert he could have passed three clubs or subsequently bid his diamond suit. On the other hand, South might also have passed three spades to avoid more serious disaster, realizing that his partner was hopelessly misled and would doubtless continue the bidding in spades.

Contracting for a Slam Over Opponent's Opening Bid.

Question: Will you be so kind as to give the proper bidding and analysis of the following hands—South is Dealer and bids one diamond (North and South ultimately reach five diamonds):

West
Spades A Q 10 x x x x
Hearts A K x x x
Diamonds —
Clubs x

East
Spades K x x
Hearts Q J 10 x x x
Diamonds x
Clubs A K 10

Answer: It is easy for East-West to reach a contract of six or seven hearts on this hand regardless of adverse bidding. For example: South one diamond; West two spades; North three diamonds; East three hearts; West five hearts; East six hearts, or South one diamond; West two spades; North three diamonds; East three hearts; West four diamonds; East four spades; West six hearts; East seven hearts.

Like milk or butter Coffee must be delivered fresh

Our swift trucks rush this delicious coffee to you at the PEAK OF ITS FLAVOR

HERE is coffee delivered like the fresh food that coffee really is! Rushed straight from roasting ovens to grocers by swift trucks, the same great Dominion-wide service that delivers Fleischmann's Yeast.

Chase & Sanborn instituted this unique system of delivering fresh coffee, because of certain scientific facts recently discovered about coffee:

SCIENTISTS have discovered that in every pound of coffee there is approximately half a cup of delicate oil. Fresh, this oil carries the marvelous flavor and aroma you love in good coffee. Stale, it becomes rancid, toxic . . . is a frequent cause of indigestion, headaches, nervousness, sleeplessness. And this rancidity develops in days, not months, after roasting.

That is why we take such precautions to make sure you get Chase & Sanborn's absolutely fresh . . . Why we stamp each tin with the date it reaches your grocer . . . We replace any tin that has been on your grocer's shelf longer than ten days. You can't get a stale tin of this coffee.

Buy a tin of this delicious dated coffee today. Enjoy its wonderful flavor. Packed in one-pound and half-pound tins.

● We now know that coffee is a fresh food . . . perishable, just like other fresh foods.

DISAPPOINTED WIFE Seeks Advice from School Girl Friend!

Gains Valuable Help

Bitterly, Susette Hobart began to realize that marriage was not "all a bed of roses." Try as she would, things didn't seem to go and when the baby arrived there was so much additional washing to do that the house seemed to be always in a muddle and marriage to have lost some of its romance.

One day she called to see her old school friend Jean and poured out her troubles. "My dear," said Jean, "keeping a house orderly and systematic is not such a terrible task; even wash day is not a thing to dread. Don't worry so much about it. There is nothing complicated about it. I'll tell you what I do.

Explains Wash Day Secret!

"First use a good soap. I'd advise you to use the brand I always buy—Pearl White Naptha. You'll find it a good practical laundry soap and a lot more economical than most. Then soap your clothes well and put them to soak overnight in cold water. You will find that, as the water temperature rises to the heat of the room, more dirt is loosened than would be if the water were cooling. In the morning, rinse your clothes thoroughly in warm water and you'll never need have any more trouble with your wash."

Thousands of women have learned this valuable laundry secret. Get the Pearl habit yourself—Pearl means efficient work in less time and at less cost. That's something to remember these days.

ARTICLES OF INTEREST TO THE FARMER

COWS IN GOOD SHAPE AT CALVING PROVE BETTER MILK PRODUCERS

Feed Plenty of Clover, Alfalfa, Both Being High in Protein and Minerals.

RIGHT FEED BIG ITEM.

This is the season of the year when the farmer must be more careful in his livestock feeding practices, according to J. B. Nelson, Agricultural Representative for Peterborough County.

During the next few months a greater part of this year's crop of livestock will be born and if these youngsters are to develop into profitable animals they must receive the best start possible. This is particularly true of calves which are largely hand-raised in Peterborough County.

At this time of year, the spring-freshening cow is working her hardest to develop a calf and to prepare for the summer milk-flow. She should be given every chance to do a good job by feeding her good quantities of a well-balanced ration.

The cow that is poorly fed, now will draw on her own body to produce the calf and will then be in very low condition to produce milk; whereas the cow that is properly fed will produce a better calf and at the same time build up the reserves in her body so that she can milk her best from the commencement of her lactation period.

Proteins, Minerals Needed

The developing calf makes great demands for protein and mineral so that a strong body with firm muscling, good bone and blood may be developed. Then materials are supplied by the cow and can be procured with the least effect on the mother when the feed fed to her contains them in large quantities.

A good ration for the pregnant cow should contain a high percentage of protein and mineral. Both these ingredients are very low in grass, hay and straw but are contained in large quantities in clover and alfalfa hay.

A cow that is lacking in condition at calving time usually does not milk her best for some time. The spring-freshening cow that is thin usually takes a month or more of good grass before she produces at her best.

The cow in good condition at calving usually milks well from the commencement of the period.

The latter cow will usually produce several thousand pounds more milk during the season than the first one, she will milk well for a longer period, she will make better use of the grass when it does come and she will be a much more profitable producer.

Milk contains a great deal of protein and mineral just as does the young calf, and the same kind of feed is necessary for its production.

Cows are kept for two purposes: to produce calves and to produce milk.

To produce the best calves it is necessary to feed the cow well before the calf is born on feeds high in protein and mineral.

To produce the most profitable milk it is necessary to have the cow freshen in good condition and have her fed well on feeds high in protein and mineral.

To make the most out of cows next season commence now and give your cows a good start by feeding them the best feed you have, particularly clover and alfalfa hay.

Canning Industry Is Growing

During the past decade there has been a rapid development of small canning establishments in rural Quebec. In 1929 there were but four or five canning plants of this type, whereas in 1931 there were 59. The output was 500,000 cases of canned goods and in addition catsups, mayonnaise, marmalades and jellies were made in considerable volume. The value of these canned goods produced in Quebec in 1930 was over $4,000,000.—The Economic Annalist.

WOOL CO-OPERATIVE REPORTS PROGRESS

Full Settlement Made on Largest Volume Yet Handled.

Despite a poor demand prevailing throughout the greater part of the season, full settlement on all wool consigned for 1931 was reported at the annual meeting of the Canadian Co-operative Wool Growers in Toronto this week. Nearly five million pounds, or the largest annual volume yet handled by this organization, was taken care of, with practically all of it sold, and highest current prices paid to shippers. Colonel Robert McEwen, President of the Co-operative, announced a three quarters of a cent cut in handling charges to a cent and a half per pound, six per cent interest paid on the original capital invested by the sheepmen, a small operating surplus, adequate reserves, and not a dollar owing to the bank.

It had been necessary to go outside the country for a market for most of the wool, stated General Manager George E. O'Brien, whose report showed 75 per cent of the volume handled sold to Great Britain, 18 per cent to Canadian mills and the small balance to the United States and Continental Europe.

General confidence in the sheep industry was reported by delegates from all parts of the Dominion. While prices of lamb and wool were admitted to be low, there was no liquidation of sheep holdings.

Progress.

Following the meeting of the Co-operative, advantage was taken of the occasion to hold a second General Sheep Conference. The committee appointed at the gathering a year ago to make investigations into lamb grading and the development of greater lamb markets reported substantial progress. Warning was issued against premature steps in advance of public opinion and after approving of tentative grades for spring lamb, standard lamb, and mutton, a resolution was passed favoring only volunteer grading for the present year. Where possible and apparently practicable, a grading system would be adopted and results watched with a view to a general application later on. At the same time, too, educational work will be carried on to make the consumer, producer and retailer familiar with the various grades.

President—Col. Robert McEwen, London, Ont.

Vice-president—Chris Jensen, Magrath, Alta.

2nd vice-president—S. A. Logan, Amherst, N.S.

ROCK GARDENING HOLDS LIGHTS

Alpine and Rock Flowers Are Jewels Of Plant World

MUCH STUDY NEEDED

Although rock gardens have been very popular in Great Britain and Europe for many years it is only comparatively recently that they have become common in Canada but now many persons have them and numerous gardens are being started each year. A rock garden border has been established at the Experimental Farm, Ottawa, where rock and alpine plants are being tested to determine which will succeed under conditions that anyone may imitate.

What is it that makes rock gardens so attractive? One important reason is the greatest amount of bloom early in the spring when it is in the garden are most appreciated. Another attraction of the rock garden is that more depends on individual effort than, perhaps, any other type of gardening. The rocks may be arranged so that they give a very unnatural effect not to be desired, or they may be placed in such a way that the setting for the plants seems very real.

Even with a small area to work on there are many possible ways of arranging the stones and in laying out a garden and one's resourcefulness is brought into play in trying to make the most pleasing and natural effects.

Study necessary.

Another great attraction of the rock garden is the study which it is necessary to give to each kind of plant so that it will get a favorable amount of sunshine or shade and one must also know whether the plant needs best under very dry conditions or whether it needs a moderate liberal supply of moisture. The individual needs of each species as regard to drainage must also be learned. There is a charm about rock plants, however, not possessed by most other plants. There are many of them that are suitable for cutting; their attraction lies not only in their dainty and brightly colored flowers and in the case of many species in the mass of bloom which forms a veritable carpet.

The rock garden also has the attraction of having the largest number of species in the smallest space and a number of kinds of rock and alpine plants that it is possible to grow is very large. This is what makes rock gardening so attractive to those in cities who have but a limited area on a small lot.

There is a endless variety and endless experimenting to find which will succeed. Some of the rock plants are very tiny and these have a great charm for the flower lover. It is natural for both men and women to be attracted to and to care for small things whether it be children, household pets or plants, and rock and alpine flowers are the gems among plants as children are the jewels among humankind.

Field Force Counts

C. B. Gooderham, Dominion Apiarist for the Department of Agriculture, calls attention to an important phase of honey production in the following statement: "The amount of honey which a colony can gather is largely dependent upon the number of bees that colony can release for field work during the period of the honey flow and upon the ability of the bee-keeper to keep this force contentedly working. The total number of bees within the colony is not a reliable index as to its ability to gather honey, because it is only those bees that are above a definite age that are effective as nectar gatherers and it is the number of bees in this force that counts in the production of surplus honey and furthermore, the strength of this force is dependent upon the care given the colony during the previous eleven months and not upon spring management alone as so many beekeepers fondly hope."

PACKAGE BEES HELP

The use of package bees in building up colonies to full working strength is proving increasingly popular with Canadian beekeepers, according to C. B. Gooderham, Dominion Apiarist. The reason for this lies in the fact that it is impossible under Canadian conditions to rear the quantity of bees required annually to replenish winter losses early enough in the season to take advantage of the rich flow of nectar from early bloom.

In the Southern States the active season opens much earlier than it does in Canada and young bees are still in winter quarters. Package bees are of greater importance in Western Canada than they are in the East because they build up rapidly under Western conditions.

Bees are shipped in wire-screen cages holding one or more pounds of bees and are easily transferred to standard hives on arrival.

PLANNING CROPS TO SUPPLY FEED

In Grains Care Must Be Given to High Yielding Mixtures Instead of Pure Varieties.

BALANCE IMPORTANT

With the prospects of continued low prices for livestock and livestock products, Peterborough County farmers will attempt to grow a large percentage of their feed supplies in 1932, states J. B. Nelson, Agricultural Representative.

Because of this fact a different crop program will have to be carried out than when considerable cash crops were grown and more commercial feeds purchased.

In planning the crops to grow this year several factors will have to be considered.

(1) Kind of livestock kept so that the crops grown will produce suitable feed.
(2) Total yield of feed per acre.
(3) Quality of the feed grown.
(4) Cost of seed.

Influences.

The kind of livestock kept will determine the types of feed grown, for example for hogs or poultry, grain is the important item whereas for cattle more of the bulkier feeds such as hay, silage and roots can be used to advantage.

Total yield of feed per acre is a big consideration. In the grains more attention will be given to the high yielding mixtures instead of the pure grain that was required for market.

A large percentage of high yielding hays will be grown on the cattle farms.

It is well known that clover hay is of more feeding value than the grass hays such as timothy and the question of the quality of the resultant feed will be considered.

The cost for seed will also be a factor and more home grown seed than usual will be sown. This should not, however, be carried to the extreme to the detriment of the crops grown.

Feed crops can be roughly put in three classes and all these three should be considered in planning the crops for this year.

(1) Grains for concentrate feeds for fattening and production.
(2) Hays and other roughage for cattle and horses.
(3) Succulent feeds such as silage and roots for the maintenance of healthy stock during the period of winter feeding.

Four Points.

In all feeding four main food constituents should be considered—carbohydrates, fat, protein and mineral content—and an effort made to secure the greatest yield of these from the acreage devoted to feed crops.

In most feeds the lack of balance and consequent poor feeding quality comes from a deficiency of protein and minerals—the fat and energy forming carbohydrates are usually present in abundance.

Therefore feeds may be roughly valued from their protein and mineral content and the effort should be to grow feeds yielding as high a percentage as possible of these valuable constituents. The following table based on average yields in Peterborough County should help farmers to select the most valuable feeds to grow.

Protein Yields Per Acre of Important Crops.

	Yield per Acre in lbs.	% Protein	Yield per Acre lbs. Protein
Alfalfa	4600	10.6	488
Red Clover	3450	7.6	266
Timothy	2400	3.0	72
Oats	1217	9.7	118
Oats and Barley	1465	9.3	132
Corn Silage	15200	1.1	167
Mangels	17500	.8	140

The above figures are only averages but they indicate that for feeding purposes some crops yield a much higher feed yield than others.

The figures for alfalfa are particularly interesting. Under ordinary conditions this crop will yield over three times as much protein per acre as a crop of mixed grain. With the present prices of alfalfa seed and the other desirable characteristics of this crop its growing should be very popular in 1932.

Maple Means "Juice"

Now that the sap season is here again it is timely to point out that Canada leads the world in respect to pure maple products. Under the provisions of the Maple Products Industry Act (1931) the word "maple" may be used only to designate a maple product 100 per cent pure. Any adulteration is not permitted. Wherever the Canadian product is offered under the name of "maple" it is 100 per cent pure, being the product of evaporation of pure maple sap.—Dominion Fruit Branch.

SOW CAREFULLY ALL FERTILIZER

Get it Down Into Damp Soil —Keep From Direct Contact With Seed.

PLACE AT UNIFORM DEPTH

This is a year when Ontario farmers must make their dollars work. No investment should be made blindly, nor should anything be left undone to make each investment return its maximum. Particularly is this true with reference to the use of fertilizers.

Not a few times has money been invested in good high grade fertilizers and these have been applied in such a way that good returns were impossible. Definite tests and actual experience have shown that fertilizer broadcast on top the soil will not give nearly as good results as will the same fertilizer drilled into the soil where the nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash may go into solution and immediately benefit the growing crop.

Conditions Vary.

The exact placing of fertilizers must be determined for each class of crops and for each general type of soil. It has been pretty well established that fertilizer drilled into the soil for grains gives better results than an equal quantity of the same fertilizer broadcast and worked into the soil. This is especially true of phosphate fertilizers. The apparent reason for this result is that the drilled fertilizer is placed at a uniform depth in damp soil and complete reversion is avoided.

For grain, the tube application as accomplished by the ordinary grain drill fertilizer equipment gives satisfactory application up to 400 lbs. per acre.

For potatoes, it is pretty well established that fertilizer gives best results if it is sown on either side of the seed pieces, but not in contact with them, and on a level with the seed pieces—neither above nor below them.

For Turnips.

For turnips and mangels grown on the drill, it is good practice to broadcast the fertilizer on the land just before drilling it up. When the land is drilled up the fertilizer is gathered to the centre of the drill or row where it may be of early help to the young crop.

For beans and peas, special care should be taken to prevent seed and fertilizer coming together. Many successful growers sow the fertilizer through tubes on either side of the tube through which the beans or peas are dropped.

Two points of importance with reference to fertilizing all crops stick out like a sore thumb. They are:

1. Get the fertilizer down into the damp soil.
2. Don't let much of it come in direct contact with the seed or seed piece.

Fertilizers pay best when properly applied.

Account Book for Farming

Farming is a business, and if it doesn't pay the farmer wants to know why it doesn't pay. Some record of receipts and expenses, together with an inventory (a list with values of live stock, feed, implements, etc., on hand), taken at the beginning and end of the farmer's year, must be kept if he is to find out why or where it doesn't pay. A record of each department of the farm business should be kept. This is the only way to find out how much is being made from each or which departments are not paying. To assist the farmer in this matter, the Dominion Experimental Farms have issued a very simple and useful little acount book. This little book, while simple, is a great step in advance of keeping no accounts whatever. It may be procured from the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, for the sum of ten cents.

The Gardener's Corner

Often there is far too much reluctance on the part of the average person to move perennial flowers. Not only do most of these things benefit by a change of quarters every third or fourth year but the constant re-arranging and development of new beds constitutes one of the real joys of gardening. There is seldom a lay-out which could not be improved and the same appearance season after season tends to lose interest. But aside from this clumps get too big and unwieldy, often growth dies out in the centre, weeds get entrenched and it is difficult to replenish the food supply.

There are two periods when moving is most successfully carried out, in the early spring and during September. At both times growth is usually dormant, and lifting the whole clump or a portion of it, dividing with a sharp spade and replanting in moist earth can be carried out with little harm. New perennials are also added then. There are a few exceptions to the general rule. Oriental poppies, for instance, rather difficult to handle at any time, should be moved or set out in August, while late bloomers like the Delphinium are best planted in October.

The Secret.

In all work of this kind one should bear in mind that the secret of transplanting is speed in getting the roots into the ground and plenty of water.

The soil must be pressed down firmly all around the plant. Care must also be taken that the flower is set to the same depth as before, with particular attention paid to Iris and Peonies. If these are planted too deeply they will not give good results. Mere covering of the small roots is enough for the former while an inch on top of the crown will do for the Peony. Before laying out a new perennial bed or in renovating a piece of old one dig in plenty of fertilizer, and work up the soil as finely as possible.

Pruning.

Most commercial pruning is also carried out in March although where only a little work is done it is better left until growth is farther advanced. There is one exception to the latter statement, however, and that applies to grapes. To avoid excessive bleeding vines of this fruit must be pruned while absolutely dormant and this means before the middle of March.

In pruning grapes the best plan is to remove all but a bare skeleton as the fruit is borne on new growth each year. In the commercial fruit districts but the trunk and two laterals each way are left when the men are through with the knife and clipper. In pruning fruit trees the main thing is to open up the branches to admit plenty of light and air and to prevent the growth of branches at a wide angle from the main structure as such would be liable to break off when loaded with fruit. Branches which cross and rub against each other, of course should be removed.

Heading Back.

In the smaller garden it is important to keep all fruit trees headed back, so that the risk of picking the upper branches will come within the realms of safety. Where carried out systematically and where there is not too much shade it is quite possible to have cherries, plums, peaches, pears and apples bearing on branches within a foot of the ground. In fact in the older countries and also on the Prairies most fruit trees are trained so that they branch out close to the bottom of the trunk.

Except for a little training, it is not necessary to do much pruning until the fruit tree comes into bearing. If it is necessary to remove large limbs, the wounds should be painted over, or coated with grafting wax, to prevent rot setting in and to encourage rapid healing. Flowering shrubs also benefit from a light thinning each year, after they have reached maturity. Those that bloom early in the spring or summer should not be pruned until after the flowers fade when a little of the old growth and as many of the dead blooms as possible would be taken out.

Late bloomers are pruned first thing in the spring. Ordinary rose bushes are severely pruned back each spring while with the climbers it is customary to take out a good deal of the old wood anytime after the bloom is over. With raspberries take out all the year-old canes following fruiting as next year's crop will be borne on the canes produced this summer.

ROTATION BENEFITS

As expressed by E. S. Hopkins, Dominion Field Husbandman of the Department of Agriculture, "the chief advantages of crop rotation consist in maintaining the productivity of the land at a higher level, in distributing the farm labor more uniformly throughout the season, and in controlling more effectively weeds, insects, and fungous diseases. These advantages, fortunately, may be secured without any additional expenditure beyond that required where no rotation is followed."

"Crop rotation is the growing of different crops upon the same land in a definite order and in recurring succession. The simplest form of crop rotation is the two-year wheat and summer-fallow rotation, in which one-half of the land is in wheat and the other half in summer-fallow, the positions being reversed each year. Other crop rotations extend for three or more years and, besides grain, may include such crops as grass and legumes, or intertilled crops as corn, sunflowers or roots."

The Age of Selection is here

Our times are marked by one vast advantage over all past history—freedom of choice for the average person.

A young man now has a hundred interesting careers to consider. His grandfather had ten. Many paths are open to the scientist, writer, teacher, athlete, business man. When we travel, we often choose between rail and bus and car and plane. Every last thing we buy is one of many offered.

This is the Age of Selection. For advertising keeps us informed. Tells us the special benefits of this, the new features of that. Shows us how to build houses and how to make muffins. Explains why and where and when and how much.

As we read we learn how to discriminate, to recognize worth, to be sure of value received. Before we buy a car or refrigerator or a can of beans, we know what it is and what it offers. Advertising teaches us how to live by this year's rules.

Nationals Qualify For Dominion Cup Finals

SEA-FLEAS ELIMINATE SENIOR WHEELERS BY TAKING ROUND 5-3

Toronto Club Qualifies by Holding M.A.A.A. to 2-all Tie Last Night.

ON MONTREAL ICE.

FORUM, MONTREAL, March 31—The Toronto National Sea Fleas won the Eastern semi-final round of the Allan Cup series by holding Montreal Amateur Athletic Association seniors, champions of Quebec and the Maritimes, to a 2—2 draw here last night. Nationals took the round 5—3, having beaten the Montrealers by 3—1 in Toronto last Saturday night. Nationals now meet Fort William for the Dominion amateur hockey title, playing a series of best-two-out-of-three games here next week.

The Sea Fleas were playing under wraps last night, guarding their defense well, except for occasional swift forays into enemy territory. Their close-checking forward line, husky defense and smart goal-keeper enabled them to preserve their 2-goal lead. The Montrealers put up a courageous struggle, but their over-anxiety cost them the game. Their shooting was worse than indifferent and some of their smartest plays were offside.

A little injudicious bumping and slashing in the third period was costly to the Nationals, and the Wheelers scored with the Sea Fleas two men short. A goal in the last minute sewed the series up for Toronto, however, leaving the Quebec champions staggering in their wake.

St. Germain Scores

The Wheelers plunged in at the start with a strong bid to catch up on the Nationals by cutting down that two-goal lead. The Lamport-McAlpine defense stood them off timidly, backed up by close back-checking from the forward line. Johnny Coulter handled a couple of long shots from Lough. Three Wheelers broke away abreast and rushed in on Lamport and McAlpine, but an offside spoiled a promising looking thrust. The Wheelers were still forcing the pace at the end of the first five minutes.

Bill Mackenzie got off a nice rush and then St. Germain went down the left wing and beat Mueller with a burning shot from the boards.

Hearne almost beat Coulter when Massey let a loose puck go by on the Montreal defense. The Wheelers switched lines without slackening their pressure. Offsides ruined a couple of good tries, and then the Nationals sent down two waves of three men up well, though McMullen rapped a low shot at Coulter. Mueller was mixed up in a scramble a little later and went to the ice to save. McKenzie rushed twice for a shot on Mueller. Lough got through on Coulter on a fast rush, but the shot was square on the goal-keeper's pads. Kane got the first penalty for holding St. Germain.

Paul Ties Score

With Kane already in the penalty box when the second period started, the Nationals were further weakened through a penalty to Paul for tripping Delahey. The Wheelers jumped in close, but in their anxiety over-shot the cage. The Nationals were playing a smart defense under the circumstances, and many possible shots were tied up tightly. Kane was soon back. The Nationals held out till they were at full strength again. The Wheelers kept on rushing, and the Toronto team seemed content with a semi-defensive game. They rushed for shots from far out and hurried back to their own defense. Lough rushed into a corner, circled out, and nearly beat Coulter with a back-hander. Mueller snared a few fast ones from Jotkus and Baril.

Tony Baril was sent off with a tripping penalty and the Wheelers were short for the first time. St. Germain and McKenzie ragged the puck behind their own cage until Baril was back. St. Germain and Paul collided at full speed. St. Germain had to be helped to the dressing room, but Paul was not hurt. Collins tripped Neville and was sent off. The Wheelers sent four men up to try for the equalizing goal, but offsides and too hasty shooting robbed them of the counter. Neville had a goal called back for offside. Jotkus and Kelly teamed up in a scramble that nearly fooled Mueller. Paul scored for Nationals on a pass from Kane just after Collins was back in play. Kane split the defense and passed across to Paul, who whipped a high shot into the net.

McKenzie Draws Major

A piece of tape across his broken nose, Ralph St. Germain was back in play for the third period. The Wheeler also had his shoulder hurt by the bump with Paul. Collins was penalized for charging young Kelly. Mueller had plenty to worry about for the next two minutes as the Montrealers desperately banged the puck inside the Toronto defense. The Wheelers were still to anxious and their shots for the most part were wide of the mark.

Collins came back and then Kane went off for slashing at Jotkus. Lough joined Kane in the box for a tripping infraction and the Nationals were in a tough spot. The Wheelers went down five abreast. McKenzie carried the puck down and scored from right on top of Mueller. McKenzie drew a penalty for slashing at Lamport. He cut Lamport over the head and got a major for it.

The Nationals opened up a little to lengthen their lead with the Wheelers a man short. The Wheelers stood upon the blue line and turned them back with hefty body-checking The Wheelers were caught napping a moment and Lough and Kane caught the defense away from home. Coulter alone averted the goal. Lough got another for tripping, but the Nationals were going stronger on the defense and played close to their blue line to check the Wheelers as they rushed every man down.

Lough scored and the game was tied again. The Wheelers' defense was wide open. Collins carried the rubber in and passed to Lough, who shot it into the top of the net.

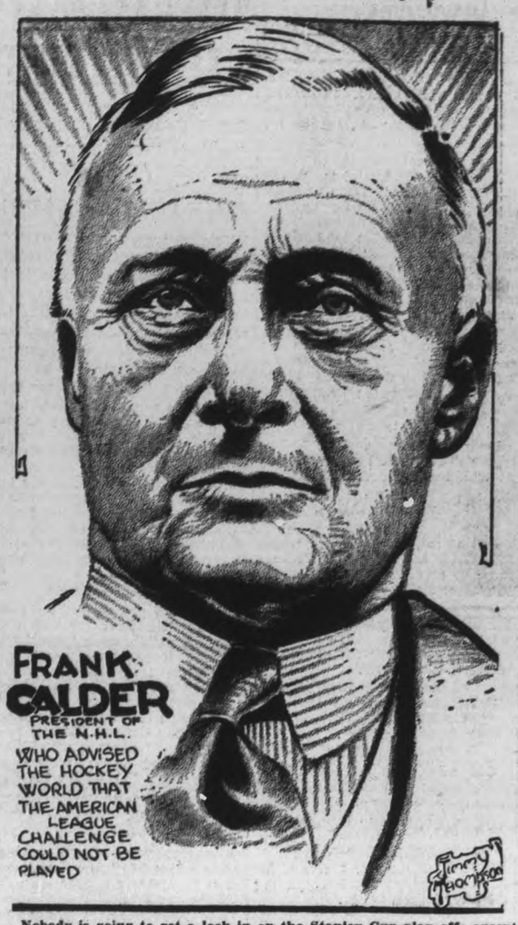
Calder, Dean Of Hockey



Nobody is going to get a look in on the Stanley Cup play-offs except the American and Canadian sections of the National Hockey League. No Siree! Frank Calder has spoken and that's that. .Least of all such an outlaw bunch of stick handlers as the American League. .The mere suggestion would almost bust up the present National League, which has, since the Pacific Coast League went up in smoke, just taken the cup to its capacious shaggy bear chest and held it there. .Major McLaughlin of the Chicago Black Hawks comes out flat-footed and says that if the Chicago Shamrocks are going to be given a pot shot even at the cup, he will drop the whole gosh-darned caboodle like hot cakes. Well anyway, Mr. Calder told the Cup trustee who has been sitting with him at the last few games, and kind of following him rouhd generally, that it is no go—and, fans, that's that! WRESTLING HAS NO APPEAL FOR SPORT FOLLOWERS IN ENGLAND

Potteries Weekly Post Scribe Not Much Impressed With Modern Version.

RING PANTOMIMICS.

The modern version of wrestling which is drawing huge crowds throughout Canada and the States evidently doesn't appeal to followers of the game in the Old Country. At least, the sports writer of Potteries Weekly Post wasn't much impressed with his first view of the sport which he calls "all-in" wrestling, the diving, colorful type that proved popular in Peterborough last summer and fall, as it did all over the province. Following is an article on an exhibition of wrestling as seen by the Potteries Post scribe:

"I was amongst the 2,000 spectators who visited the Palace Skating Rink, Hanley, last Tuesday night to see "all-in" wrestling presented to the local public for the first time.

No doubt the great majority of those present were there out of curiosity, and I doubt very much whether a large proportion of them would trouble to go again if the promoters thought fit to stage a similar programme.

I was left in doubt whether this was supposed to be a music hall entertainment or a serious wrestling tournament.

Probably the antics and showmanship of some of the participants in the ring would appeal to the fancy of a credulous and sensation-seeking American crowd, but whether this curious kind of serio-comedy-boxing-cum-wrestling has any real attraction for a critical English sporting gathering is very doubtful.

It was difficult to define the position of the referee, and to follow to what exact lengths contestants were allowed to go in the way of arguing, threatening and even kicking at the official in charge.

Pantomimics in the Ring

The pantomimic actions of the much-boomed artists, too, were surely rather overdone. It may have been excellent material for a music-hall sketch or a film comedy, but as a serious exhibition of wrestling, even of the so-called "all-in" type, it failed to "get across."

I shall be surprised if any more of this kind of thing is offered to the local public.

Do not let it be thought for a moment that I am criticising the promoters. Far from it. I happen to know that there had been an insistent demand by a large number of their patrons for an "all-in" wrestling program to be staged.

The proprietors of the hall, quite rightly, came to the conclusion that their patrons were entitled to have what they wanted. The public have seen the new sport, or entertainment, or whatever you like to call it, and there, I suppose, the matter will end."

No High Records In Team Division

DETROIT, Mar. 31.—Sixty-two more pin groups will attempt to wrest the lead from the Joe Voss Belters in the American Bowling Congress tournament tonight. Seventeen cities are represented, led by Flint, Mich., which is sending 21 teams into action.

The team division of the big pin classic is the only event which has not been featured with high scores. Though the Joe Voss Belters 3,046 total has been high enough to win 22 of the past thirty-one tournaments, it is not expected to stand as the high mark here, as some of the country's best line-ups are to perform before the windup, April 11.

Only one change was recorded among the various leaders yesterday. Dr. Casimir Czarnecki, Toledo, took tenth place in the all-events division with a total of 1,883.

Hockey Results

The scores of hockey games played yesterday were as follows:

Allan Cup Semi-finals.
zToronto Nationals 2, Montreal A.A.A. 2.
zNationals win round, 5 to 3.

O.H.A. Intermediate Final.
Windsor Mic-Macs 3, Doherty A. C. 2.

MAY CHANGE DATES TO SUIT RANGERS

Madison Square Garden Available for Only One Game of Finals.

NEW YORK, N.Y., March 31. — The final series in the play-offs for the Stanley Cup, emblematic of the world championship in professional hockey, may be forced out of New York for all but one game by the annual pilgrimage of the circus.

The circus comes into Madison Square Garden, home ice of the New York Rangers, at midnight on April 5. Yet that date is believed the earliest on which the Rangers, who won a place in the finals by taking the deciding game from the Canadiens on Tuesday night, can start the closing five-game series with the winner of the Montreal Maroons-Toronto Maple Leafs two-game-semi-final.

The Leafs and Maroons finish their home-and-home series in Toronto on Saturday night. It is considered unlikely that the winner would agree to open the series here on Monday night with but two days of rest, and that devoted almost entirely to travel. Under the play-off rules, the first two games of the final series are to be played on Ranger ice and the remainder in Canada.

Col. John S. Hammond, president of the Rangers, and Lester Patrick, manager, expect to leave for Montreal to-day in an effort to reorganize the playing schedule.

An attempt meanwhile will be made to delay the entry of the circus into the Garden one day. Another suggestion has been made that the Rangers name the Boston Garden, home of the Boston Bruins, as their home ice for the second game..

BOSTON AGREEABLE.

BOSTON, Mass., March 31.—President Charles F. Adams of the Boston Bruins, last night said he would willingly give the New York Rangers the use of the Boston Garden ice in their Stanley Cup games if they are unable to use the Madison Square Garden rink.

MIC-MACS GAIN ONE-GOAL LEAD

Windsor Wins First of Intermediate O.H.A. Finals By 3-2 Count.

OVER DOHERTY A. C.

TORONTO, Mar. 31.—The John Ross Robertson Trophy, emblematic of the O.H.A. intermediate championship, swayed in the direction of Windsor last night when the husky Mic Macs from the Border Cities downed Doherty A. C. 3 to 2, in a spirited contest at the Maple Leaf Gardens, which attracted only a slim crowd. The return game will be played at Windsor next Saturday night, and, on their display last night, the Mic Macs are favored to capture the round.

Coached by "Pick" Hines, formerly of Toronto, Windsor showed a neat combination attack which was a great contrast to the play of the locals. Time and again the Irish failed to pass the puck when opportunity presented itself, and in this respect they suffered. Doherty did not look as good as on previous appearances, and it is quite possible that they will step on to the ice at Windsor on Saturday, and give the homesters a great battle.

At the start the game was close-checking and rather listless hockey, both teams being wary. However, in the second period, when the players exchanged bumps continuously, the fans found plenty for which to voice their approval. Doherty "came to" in the final period, and bombarded the Windsor citadel, but Teno, the Mic Mac's clever net-guardian, proved equal to the occasion on every shot. It appeared certain that Doherty would score on several occasions, but Teno proved impregnable on every shot that came his way.

Night Football in Dublin?

The suggestion has been made that football should be played in Dublin under artificial light.

If senior clubs intend to try the experiment they might commence with the matches in the first round of the L.F.A. President's cup. The draw for the opening stage has been made for months, and not even one team has qualified for the second round.

Dispute Over the Irish Flag in Athletics is Ironed Out.

OLD COUNTRY SOCCER

There was an unusual ending to the fifteen round contest at Treaalaw recently, in which George Smith, the young Welsh heavyweight, met Seaman Tim Foley, of Plymouth. Smith, though inches shorter, kept up a persistent attack, and in the seventh round floored Foley, the bell saving him.

In the eighth session Foley was again going down from a punch near the ropes when Smith caught him another glancing blow. There were cries of foul, but Foley rose and continued to the end of the round.

During the interval the crowd kept up a continuous uproar and were warned that, unless they desisted, the bout would be stopped. Disorder again broke out during the ninth, and the referee, Mr. W. Morgan, immediately ordered the boxers to their corners and declared no contest.

Change National Jumps

The National Equine Defence League have written to the stewards and members of the National Hunt committee asking for the elimination of the open ditch and Becher's brook at Aintree as a first concession to meet modern fashions and lessened resisting power in horses.

Settle Flag Question

As a result of the final conference held in Belfast, the five years' dispute in Irish athletics can be considered at an end.

The conference settled the flag question which was a bone of contention between the Northern Ireland Association and the National Athletic and Cycling Association of Ireland.

The flag to be flown at all international contests under the auspices of the new body, the Irish Amateur Athletic Union, will be the arms of the four provinces—Ulster, Munster, Leinster and Connaught—on a St. Patrick's blue background, with the letters, I.A.A.U. inscribed thereon.

Davis Cup Dates

Dates for the European Zone Davis cup matches have been fixed as follows:

First round—Germany v. All-India, in Berlin, May 6, 7 and 8. Italy v. Egypt, at Genoa, May 7, 8 and 9.

Second round—Holland v. Poland, at Warsaw, May 14, 15 and 16. Great Britain v. Rumonia at Eastbourne, May 13, 14 and 15.

Germany has nominated twelve players to go into training immediately and from them the teams will be chosen as the competition proceeds.

Two Polish players, Stolarow and Tloczynski, have been sent to the Riviera to train under the French professional Martin Plaa.

Tourists Robbed

While the Grasshoppers, the Swiss football team were playing the Corinthians at the Crystal Palace a few weeks ago thieves raided the dressing rooms and robbed both teams of money and other valuables.

Mr Escher, president of the Swiss club, said that some hundreds of pounds were taken altogether. One of the boys lost £30 and from the pocket of another was stolen a gold watch, a souvenir of the team winning the Swiss cup.

Fortunately, most of the team's money had been left behind in the West End hotel where they were staying, or they would have been in a sad plight. As it was, enough was taken to make the episode rather a sad memory of the trip.

Surrey Captaincy

It is officially announced by Mr. Palairet, the secretary of the Surrey County Cricket club, that there is no truth in the statement that Mr. D. R. Jardine has been offered he captaincy of the Surrey eleven.

It is known that a change is contemplated in the captaincy, but the successor to Mr. P. G. H. Fender has not been announced.

Cyclists Show Deficit

The National Cyclists' Union issued their 1931 balance sheet at the week-end. It shows a loss of £87 on the year's working—double the loss in the previous year.

The deficit has been caused mainly by the total disappearance of any profits from race promotion and a fall in the revenue from the championships.

Fortunately the centres came loyally to the assistance of headquarters, and a sum of £260 raised by donation has not only covered the deficit, but left sufficient to pave the way to better times in the present year.

Alliss Succeeds Jones

Percy Alliss, the British international professional, formerly attached to the Berlin-Wansee club, has been appointed to the Beaconsfield golf club, in success to J. H. Jones.

Alliss, who is thirty-five years of age, is Yorkshire born, and has been one of the most successful of professional golfers during the past few years.

Alliss was Welsh professional champion on two occasions; won the German title from 1926-29 (inclusive); was third in the French open championship in 1925; fourth in the British open championship in 1928 and 1929 and last year tied for third place with Gene Sarazen, the American.

Alliss represented Britain against America in the Ryder cup match at Leeds, three years ago.

Is The Old Speed There

The announcement from Vancouver that Percy Williams is to endeavor to make a serious comeback for the Olympic games of 1932 will be good news to all Canadians interested in athletics.

Williams was the hero of the 1928 Olympics at Amsterdam with his double sprint victory and he also won the 100-yard dash at the British Empire games, when he suffered a leg injury at the tape in the final heat.

Private advices from Vancouver are that Williams' leg is all right again and he still has his speed. .It is all a question of condition and he is going to Seattle in May to train with University of Washington athletes in order to get into shape for the Olympic trials at Hamilton, Ontario in July.

King Loop Battles In Canadian Cities

TORONTO, Mar. 31. — (By the Canadian Press.)— Two Canadian cities, London and Windsor, will be the scenes of hockey battles tonight when the International League renew their Tuesday night's conflict in the second game of the round-robin playoff series. Buffalo Bisons will be the visitors in the Border City where they tackle Bulldogs while London Tecumsehs play hosts to Detroit Olympics.

Bulldogs, present holders of the Oke trophy, emblematic of the league title, to-day hold a two-point edge over the remaining clubs, having scored the only victory in the initial contests. As Buffalo and London drew while Windsor triumphed over Detroit, Bulldogs earned their edge as three points are allowed for a victory.

Olympics will be the only club starting with a different line-up from the opening contests. Johnny Clark, who played a sensational game in the Detroit cage Tuesday to allow Windsor a single goal in a scoreless battle, will be missing from the roster. Clark was rushed to the hospital after the game when it was found he was suffering from appendicitis and it is not definitely known who will fill his shoes.

A Duke's Tribute

The Duke of Montrose was a distinguished guest at the Scottish cup-tie between the Rangers and Motherwell and at the close he expressed himself as delighted with the sporting orderliness of the great crowd.

J. H. Thomas has intended to be present, but he had to return to London from Glasgow on Friday night.

BROOMS HIT HIT

Injuries and Have Cut Into It Major

Cochrane Infected.

BY CALBOT
(Associated Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, 31—It's a rare and happy manager today who can crow on having his strongest available for the opening of the league season.

Injuries, flu, illness and even death cut sharply into the roster ranks since the training camps started a month ago. With a month to go there probably will be casualties.

Brooklyn's two regulars out for an indefinite period, appears to have the hardest hit. Del Bissonette, first baseman, is in the hospital after an operation on the tendon and may not be able for months. Frank (Lefty) Hogan, slugging outfielder, is out with a bruised hand that is certain to keep him out at least until season begins.

Red Sinus Two

The Boston Red Sox will line up April 11 at Washington without two stars. Manager Shauno Collins has had upon. Big Ed Morris, pitcher, was fatally stabbed by he was to have left for Cuba. George Stumpf, a promising fielder purchased from Quinn, is in bed with intestinal flu.

An op for appendicitis cost the York Yankees the services of Pitcher Henry Johnson until up in the campaign and is doubtful even then he will be of much value to the Yanks. George Pipgras, who underwent a similar operation last season, did not regain pitching form until the end of the race.

Yankee parents are viewing with the utmost alarm a "kink" that sett Babe Ruth's neck the other and is forcing the big fellow to carry his head at half mast.

Two of Philadelphia Nationals' four pitchers are returning to the south in doubtful condition. Elliott, the club's ace scout, is wearing a slab of porous plaster on his back and groaning every pitch, while Claude Passeau is nursing a sore arm. Chuck Klein, the Phils' powerhouse, has a pair of ailing ankles.

Men for Giants

John McGraw is having much difficulty getting all his New York Giants on the field at the same time. Joe Vergez, third baseman is on the bench with an injured knee and Catcher Frank Hogan has an uncertain knee, aggravated by a vast surplus of weight refused to come off.

Mickey Cochrane, the Athletics' brilliant catcher, is going about in carpet slippers after an operation on an injured foot but will be ready for opening day if there are no complications. Alvin Crowder, Washington righthander, has been called home by illness in his family and will not return until after the season starts.

O.B.A. MEETING ON SATURDAY NIGHT

Judgeott Will Be Luncheon Hon Speaker at Toronto Meeting.

TORONTO, March 31.—President Kerr and officers of the T.A.B.A. are making extensive preparations to entertain the delegates to the 14th annual meeting of the O.B.A.A. to be held at the Carls-Rite Hotel on Saturday, beginning at 10 a.m. The program commences when Major Stewart welcomes the delegates and after the morning session O.B.A.A. officers and delegates will be tendered a luncheon, at which the guest speaker will be Judge Mott. The mayor, city council, President George Oakley of the Toronto Ball Club and members of the Provincial Government will attend the luncheon.

With the executive meeting taking place on Friday night, and with many of the delegates from distant points on hand, the Carls-Rite will be a hive of activity from that time on. The executive will endeavor to clean up their work for the current year.

The agenda for the annual meeting is one of the smallest on record, with most of the changes clarifying existing rules, with a few changes suggested in the minor playdowns, some members of the association feeling that home-and-home games in the lower series under present conditions being a great expense, especially where the distance is over 150 miles. There is another amendment to give the association a larger share when senior and intermediate clubs engage in a third game in the playdowns.

There will be but two contests for offices. President C. K. Jutten of Hamilton has been handed the presidency by acclamation, and W. H. Smith of Galt is unopposed as first vice. H. J. Carmichael of St. Catharines and A. J. Walsh of Toronto are the nominees for second vice. Secretary W. J. Snyder of Hamilton and A. Hillmer, treasurer, of Oakville have been returned. The following have been nominated for the executive: R. Fraser, Toronto; J. W. Scott, Kitchener; A. J. Walsh, Toronto; Wm. Kay, Peterborough; N. A. Taylor, Rodney; H. H. Berscht, Caledonia; H. J. Carmichael, St. Catharines.

Race Conspiracy Discovered

BRITISH RACER TRICKED

A conspiracy has been revealed to disqualify Charles H. Harrison of London, Eng., European champion, in the final heat of the Col. E. H. R. Green trophy, outboard motor race at Miami Beach. According to a competitor's confession, several racers beat the gun and drew Harrison over the line early, just as Gar Wood tricked Kaye Don. This allowed William Crawford of New York, a junior at the University of Miami, shown here with his trophy, to win. Nine drivers in the competition face suspension and American Powerboat Association officials plan to award the trophy to Harrison, who had a wide lead in the first two heats.

CASUAL COMMENT

The officers and executive members of the City Baseball League will meet at Foster's, Charlotte street, this evening at 7.30 to decide the question of sending two delegates to the Toronto O.B.A.A. convention Saturday. Sufficient funds are on hand and those objecting to sending representatives should be on hand to vote to-night. A full turn-out is requested.

A score-card was received at this office yesterday from Louis Potvin, who is down in St. Petersburg, Florida. The game was between Cardinals and Yanks with the latter winning out, 4 to 3, and Babe Ruth cracking out his first homer of the year. Louis says the weather is excellent and he is having a fine time, and ends with the usual nasty crack: "Wish you were here."

Word from Oshawa yesterday has it that the Motor City ball club has been taken into the T.A.B.A. for this summer. As such is the case, the old C.O.B.L. will have to get along with four teams as originally planned instead of five. Oshawa has been trying for several years to connect with a Queen City loop.

• • • • • • •

We're looking for plenty of action in baseball locally in the next week or so. The senior club will likely hold a session next week following the O.B.A.A. convention and preceding the Central League one in Kingston, the City Loop will be getting squared around soon, and we have the tip-off that something unusual will be sprung at the first East Peterborough League session, probably next week. They're all getting started in good time this year.

• • • • • • •

But to get back to Oshawa, it seems the C.O.B.L. granted that club a year's leave of absence to enter the T.A.B.A. with the West Toronto Senior League, composed now of four teams. The Toronto body was willing to take in Oshawa if the Central League did not object. As there was no use kicking, the C.O.B.L. said okay for one year, anyway.

• • • • • • • •

Max Swanston sent in his resignation as manager to the local senior club to-day, after having notified them to this effect some time ago. Lack of sufficient time to devote to the team this summer is given as his reason, so it looks as if someone else will be bossing the Petes this year. With the loss of the peppery Max, we can't think of an outstanding man who might be induced to attempt to fill his shoes.

• • • • • • •

The Pioneer A.C. had a large turnout of boxers in their new club rooms last night and they expect to stage a fight show in the near future. Some of the mittsers who have joined the club are the two Minicolas, Jack Chamberlain, Fred DeCarlo, Jack Bone, Roy Thompson, Pete Peters, Ken Berry, Jerry Belland, Mickey Donaghue, Jim Garvey, Harvey Smith, and Bat Vinette.

• • • • • • • •

Andy Dugan has taken over the job of training the Foster Club boxers, and may even be seen in action himself this spring. He has his boys rounding into shape for their fight at the Legion Hall next Wednesday when four good Belleville scrappers will be here. His young brother, Jimmie Dugan, a classy lightweight, will go on on Wednesday. Other boys from here will be Bill Hope, Art Hunter, and Jack Gardner, the others to be announced later.

An athletic meet starts at the "Y" to-night at 7.30 in connection with the Boys' Hobby Show, and the junior and intermediate cage finals take place up there to-morrow evening. On Saturday at 2.30, the finals of the Games Tournament takes place in the Boys' Lobby, and a swimimng meet is billed for the pool at eight in the evening, while the "Y" junior championships are being staged in the gym.

From the number of inquiries received at this office, there is considerable interest in the girls' basketball play-offs at the Y.W.C.A. to-morrow night. The senior girls' teams, Westclox and St. Paul's clash at eight, while Blue Petes and Choate Juniors meet at 8.45. If third games are necessary they'll be held about Wednesday. St. Paul's and Blue Petes won the first games in the titular series last week. As only seventy-five tickets are being sold, fans had better step lively and obtain their ducats from the players.

GAINS MATCHED WITH MUELLER

LONDON, March 31 (C.P. Cable)—Larry Gains, Toronto negro heavyweight, was matched to-day to fight Heine Mueller, German champion, in a 15-round bout at Albert Hall on April 21. The winner will probably meet Primo Carnera at the White City Stadium on May 30.

BITTER BATTLE LIKELY TO-NIGHT

First Time Leafs and Maroons Have Ever Met in Cup Semi-finals.

BOTH POWERFUL TEAMS.

MONTREAL, Mar. 31.— (By the Canadian Press.) — If precedent means anything, a crowded forum to-night can expect a hard-checking, battling hockey match when Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Maroons clash in the first game of the National Hockey League Stanley Cup semi-final.

Also, if precedent means anything, an occasional fist fight may be regarded as a not-unlikely development for these two teams have fought bitterly many times since the Maroons were organized in 1924.

Although the teams have been in the same section of the National Hockey League for eight years, to-night is their first clash in a play-off. One or other team has always been eliminated before the luck of the draw would have brought them together.

The second game of the series will be at Toronto on Saturday night, the team with the most gaols on the two-game series earning a chance at the Stanley Cup in a three-out-of-five game series with the New York Rangers, who toppled Montreal Canadiens from their twice-won honors as Stanley Cup holders.

Two powerfully built and fast teams will clash to-night. They should be primed and ready. Neither reported any serious injuries from their first play-off series. Toronto conquered Chicago Black Hawks in the second place play-offs and Maroons won from Detroit Falcons in the third-place clash.

On the basis of the engagements this year the Leafs hold an edge over the Montrealers. The Toronto squad won five of the eight matches between the rivals, 4-0, 4-2, 3-1, 6-4 and 6-0, while Maroons triumphed in the other three, 8-2, 3-0, and 3-1.

The Leafs were expected in town this morning.

Weight Will Count In Monarchs' Favor

WINNIPEG, Mar. 31.— (By the Canadian Press.)—Junior hockey's classic series, annual show place of the up-and-coming in the ice world, swings into action to-night with a new challenger from the east bidding for the Canadian title and Memorial Cup held by Winnipeg.

The Wolves from Sudbury, conquerors of all Ontario and the titled teams to the east, and Winnipeg Monarchs, burly successors to the disbanded Elmwood Millionaires, are the contenders. They play the first game to-night, the second Saturday and, if each scores a win, the deciding contest Monday.

Outweighed 10 pounds a man, the Wolves plan to upset Monarchs with the speed and cohesive perfection of their attack. Every player on both squads is in good shape for the series.

OLYMPIC TEAM FROM NIPPON IS AMERICA'S CHIEF RIVAL

Land of Rising Sun Plans to Send 150 Athletes and 1,000 Rooters.

JAPAN IS CONFIDENT.

(By Maxwell Stiles)

LOS ANGELES, Mar. 31 (Special to The Examiner, Copyright)—Japan, for the first time in the long history of this ancient and honorable nation this summer, will be a major contender for the unofficial team championship (there is no official team award) in the international Olympic games. Japan will send to Los Angeles not only the biggest foreign contingent of athletes, but probably the greatest number of "rooters" of any competing country.

With plans now definitely completed to bring to Los Angeles approximately 150 athletes, 50 officials and more than 1,000 supporters of Japan's athletes, the extraordinary program scheduled by the Land of the Rising Sun is staggering. Japan is America's foremost rival in swimming, and at this writing there are many experts who predict that Japan will win.

Dr. Ken Nakazawa, enterprising Olympic attache for Japan in Los Angeles, is authority for the statement that in addition to track and field and swimming for both men and women his native land will compete in the following sports:

Rowing, equestrian sports, boxing, catch-as-catch-can wrestling, gymnastics, field hockey, water polo, fine arts.

Outstanding Performers

Despite the strong team that will be entered by the United States, Japan confidently expects to win the unofficial team championship in swimming. Under the unofficial scoring systems women's points will be added to those scored by the men, and because of the strength of American feminine natators and divers coaches in this country believe that the United States will be able to amass enough points to defeat Japan.

In Mikio Oda and Chubei Nambu the Japanese Olympic team has two men on their 1931 performances must be favored to win the hop, step and jump and the running broad jump respectively. A third Japanese jumper, Oshima, appears to be headed for second place behind Oda in the hop, step and jump.

Oda won the 1928 Olympic championship with a mark of 49 feet 10 13-16 inches, a mark which he increased in 1931 to a new world record of 51 feet 1 1-4 inches. Oshima leaped 50 feet 7 4-5 inches in 1931, with Nambu doing 49 feet 3 inches.

Rival for Wykoff

On the same day they saw the creation of a new world standard in the "tri-jump," Nambu, a graduate of Waseda University and, like Oda, a present member of the Nanjwa Athletic club of Osaka, catapulted himself to a new world record of 25 feet 2 1-8 inches for the running broad jump. This was two inches better than the present accepted world mark of Sylvio Cator of Haiti.

Thus Japan is the favored nation to win the broad jump and the hop, step and jump. Japan also has a fine chance in the 100 and 200 metres, the marathon, the high jump and the pole vault. A Japanese javelin thrower who has bettered 217 feet may place.

All Nippon believes that its national hero, Ryutoku Yoshioka, who ran 100 metres in 10.5 seconds last year, will prove fast enough to defeat Frank Wykoff, Eddie Tolan and Co. in the Olympic 100 metres. Yoshioka defeated George Simpson, one of the United States best sprinters, last year.

Seije Takahashi, Kin, Seichiro Tsuda and at least four other Japanese are in the front rank of the world marathoners.

Japan's women's team was hit a blow with the death of Miss Kinoye Hitomi, rated the best all-around woman athlete in the world. But Japan has other fine women athletes who expect to make a good showing in Los Angeles.

Defend Titles In Swimming Meet

TRIO OF CANADA'S OUTSTANDING MERMEN

The greatest array of swimming talent to ever appear in any Canadian pool will compete for the international Y.M.C.A. indoor swimming championships at Central Y.M.C.A., on April 8 and 9 in Toronto. The outstanding swimmers and divers from all parts of the United States will attempt to win the new trophy which will be given by Clarence Texler, a prominent St. Louis sportsman, replacing the Kresge trophy which was won permanently last year by Central. That Canadian swimming is attracting the attention of other countries is evidenced in the fact that this will be the first time in history that the champions have ever been contested for outside of the United States, and with the Olympic Games in the offing, greater prestige than ever will be attached to the meet. Several swimmers and divers who are conceded places on the United States Olympic team will be in attendance, and they will be accompanied by a number of the leading United States officials who will be on the lookout for prospective material for Uncle Sam's contingent. Canada will be well represented, for in addition to West End, Broadview, Hamilton and Windsor, the Central Y.M.C.A. team, who have established a unique reputation by winning the last three international championship meets at Chicago, Ill., Wilmington, Del., and Anderson, Ind., will swim intact. Three of the prominent members of the Central team are shown above. No. 1—Capt. Bert. Gibson, the Canadian sprint champion, who has won the 40 yards and 100 yards in the international competition. Gibson also made a place on Canada's British Empire team. No. 2—Jack Aubin, who won the 20-yard breast stroke championship for two consecutive years, swam the distance in Chicago in 2 min. 36 5-10 sec., which was only 4-10 sec. outside of the world's record. Aubin holds all the Canadian breast stroke titles and records. He was also on the British Empire team. No. 3—Murray Griffin, won the 440 yards at Chicago, holds the Canadian back stroke record. Griffin was a member of the British Empire team, and along with Gibson and Aubin, he has been on the three international title winning teams.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

A BOLD RASCAL.

Through all of time, since days of old,
Have timid people feared the bold.
—Old Mother Nature.

Boldness has nothing to do with size. There are timid big people and bold small people. The bold are those who know no fear. If they have known it they have overcome it. They do things which others fear to do and by their boldness often get what others desire but fear to try for. So, boldness, guided by good judgment, often gains its object where lack of boldness would fail.

It was dreadful news that Whitefoot the Wood Mouse had brought to Mrs. Whitefoot in the new home in the syrup can in Farmer Brown's sugar house. It was the worst news possible. Whitefoot, who had been outside the sugar house, had seen Shadow the Weasel searching through the woodpile where they formerly lived and then running over to the door of the sugar house. He was hunting Mice and Whitefoot knew it. Shadow had been driven away by the opening of the door by Farmer Brown's Boy, but Whitefoot knew that he hadn't gone far.

Mrs. Whitefoot shivered at a thought that had come to her. "Whitefoot," she whispered, "I thought it was a dreadful thing when our home was taken away from the woodpile and brought in here, but it wasn't. It was the best, the very best thing that could have happened. Shadow the Weasel would have found us. Our babies would have been killed by this time. Oh, I do so hope he will not dare come in here."

"He will if he gets the chance," replied Whitefoot. "For his size I guess he is just about the boldest person in all the Great World. The worst of it is we are helpless. There isn't a thing we can do. In this new house (he meant the syrup can) we are safe from everyone but him. He can come through that doorway as easily as we can. All we can do is to wait and hope for the best. There is no other place for us to go." "If only Farmer Brown's Boy will keep that door shut Shadow may give up and go away," said Mrs. Whitefoot. Then she shivered. "Oh dear," she wailed in her squeaky little voice, "it is dreadful to be so helpless."

Shadow the Weasel, still in his white winter coat with a black tip to his tail, had visited that part of the Green Forest just by chance. The instant he saw that woodpile outside the sugar house he went over to investigate it. Almost at once he got the Mouse scent. It was faint and he knew that it was some time since the ones who had left it had been there. He also knew that they were not likely to be far away. He sat up and looked across at the old sugar house.

"That is the place to look for them," thought he. "That is just the place they would go to. I will look around inside there."

So he started over to the sugar house and just as he reached the door, it opened and out stepped Farmer Brown's Boy on his way for an armful of wood. Shadow dodged out of sight as only he can. He did it so quickly that Farmer Brown's Boy didn't see him at all.

"Humans! Those two-legged creatures called Humans are living in there!" he snarled to himself. Shadow has a way of snarling when things are not to his liking. He snarled again when he once more approached that door only to find it closed. "Do they think they can shut me out that way?" he snarled. "I'll get in there now if only to show them that I do as I please. I'm not afraid of them and I'll show them so."

But Shadow didn't get in that night. That door wasn't opened again and there was no hole. The one under the edge of the roof which Chatterer the Red Squirrel had used to get out and Whitefoot has used to get in had been blocked on the inside. So Shadow curled up in a retreat of his own and slept the remainder of the night. He was wide awake at the first sounds in the sugar house the next morning and slipping out of his hiding place crept to where he could watch the door of the sugar house.

"The first time that door is left open I will walk right in there," declared the bold rascal. And he meant it.

What To-Day Means To You

"ARIES"

If March 31st is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9 a.m. to 10:20 a.m., from 3 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. and from 9:45 p.m. to 11 p.m. The danger periods are from 6:30 a.m. to 8 a.m., and from 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

Both the man of thought and the man of action will meet with heartening prospects on March 31st. Astrological influences should promote unusual feelings of consideration and affection and it should be a time of "peace and goodwill on earth." A renewal of old acquaintances.

Children born on this March 31st will tend to dodge work and responsibilities. They will do most things in life under the stimulation of necessity, and if the stimulation be strong enough will exhibit both brain and talent. They will have very sensitive, impressionable nature, and will often have their feelings stepped upon.

Born on March 31st you have a very tender-hearted and sympathetic nature. You are guided by your feelings more than your intellect. Your first hunches are, nine times out of ten, correct, and you generally regret not obeying them. You are often carried away by your sympathies and realize the miseries of the world too keenly to be a truly happy being. You are unable to shut your eyes or harden your heart toward the sordid things of life.

You have remarkable holding-on qualities and do not readily let go of anything which interests or appeal to you. You are the loyal friend who still sticks when others have deserted; you are the one, also, who tries once again when others have given up in despair. You have a super-abundance of faith, hope and optimism. Your troubles will come not from quitting too soon, but from remaining too long in a fruitless place.

You are not a born student or an inveterate reader, but you try to keep well enough informed "to be in the know" of things. You are a follower of the human pack in most respects and never like to be out of fashion. You would often like to be a goat and graze in pastures of your own liking, but you lack both the nerve and initiative.

Six Bells of Easter was given by seven girls, Dorothy Fallis, Ruth Rowland, Irene Weatherilt, Bernice Wright, Loraine Jackson, Isobel Jackson and Eleanor Bigelow. Mary Thompson contributed some interesting facts about Korea and a solo by George Fallis was followed by a True Korean Story told by Pauline Thorndyke. The program was well prepared and very much enjoyed.

PRISON SINGERS GIVE GUARDS THE WILLIES

Collapse Under Strain of Dartmoor Mutineers' Noise

London.—Among the 45 ringleaders of the mutiny at Dartmoor now segregated in D block of the prison is a man with a tremendous voice From the roadway 200 yards away this man could be clearly heard during the recent disturbances.

Sometimes singing grand opera sometimes sentimental ballads and popular melodies, as soon as he starts to sing the hubbub from the other prisoners dies away.

Major C. Pannall, who has been appointed governor of the prison, has talked to the mutineers and since then they have been somewhat quieter, though outbursts of singing and shouting continue.

The reading of the daily news bulletin to the D block convicts has been stopped owing to their noisemaking.

Three principal warders have collapsed under the mental strain they have been undergoing and have been granted sick leave.

LOSES INHERITANCE ON ODD TECHNICALITY

Witnesses Signed Will Before the Testator

London.—A widow who had been left £6,100 by her husband loses the money as a result of a decision in the probate court.

The will was revoked because the husband signed it after the attesting witnesses, instead of before.

"The result," said the president (Lord Merrivale), "is that the woman is deprived of that which her late husband, at the last moment of his life, intended that she should have."

Mr. Charles William Herbert White of Beechwood, Blaenavon, Monmouth, brought the action against his stepmother. He claimed an intestacy, alleging that the will was not properly executed.

Defendant was Mrs. Gladys Lilian Spencer Jones, of Chepstow Rd., Newport, she having married again last year.

MYSTERIOUS ILLNESS IN NORTH YORKSHIRE

Attacks Children and Is Unlike Any Known Disease

London.—Experts at the ministry of health have been puzzled by a mysterious illness which attacked six children of one family at an isolated farm near Pickering, North Yorkshire.

The children's ages range from 7 to 16, and the only one that died was 13 and the first to be affected

The symptoms were intense pains with a high fever, followed by a septic rash, which was described as "extraordinary, and fitting in with no known disease." The victims were not all taken ill at the same time and adults who had shared the same food were not affected.

A post-mortem failed to determine the cause of the illness. Food poisoning was suspected, but exhaustive inquiries have failed to substantiate this theory.

GRAND OLD DOCTOR 67 YEARS IN PRACTICE

Essex Medico Has Record of Wonderful Life in 80 Volumes

Tolleshunt d'Arcy, Eng.—Dr. Salter is Tolleshunt d'Arcy's grand old man. He is in his 92nd year. When he was born Victoria had just begun her reign. In this part of Essex he is already something of a legend.

He has brought no fewer than 6,820 children into the world, and has eased the last hours of hundreds of the dying.

Boys at whose fathers' and grandfathers' births he officiated, come to him from miles around for advice.

Dr. Salter has been sportsman, physician and friend. He has bred champion dogs and thoroughbred horses. He has grown an absolutely new flower. He has been and still is president of Cruft's, and deputy-lieutenant of the county.

He can remember Lister coming down from Edinburgh to give a demonstration of his methods to King's college students.

When in his early twenties he lost an eye in a shooting accident, he gave up the career of surgeon, and settled in Essex as a country physician. He was 67 years in practice, which embraced towns so far apart as Colchester and Chelmsford, Maldon and Witham.

Sir Claude Champion de Crespigny, a neighbor and friend, will tell you "Salter was a good man with a gun."

They are old friends, Dr. Salter and Sir Claude, survivals of spacious days. There has always been a bit of sporting rivalry between them. And now they are determined to "see each other out," as they phrase it.

Dr. Salter looked a strong bet until recently. For some months, however, he has been ill.

He made ten shooting expeditions to Russia. He shot with the czar and stayed with the Grand Duke Nicholas.

He has packed into his 91 years experiences so rich and varied that it seems a miracle one life could hold them. And he has kept a complete and meticulous record of them all.

In some eighty volumes, one for every year, is his complete diary.

Edinburgh, Scotland, may make a talkie of the city to be shown in other countries.

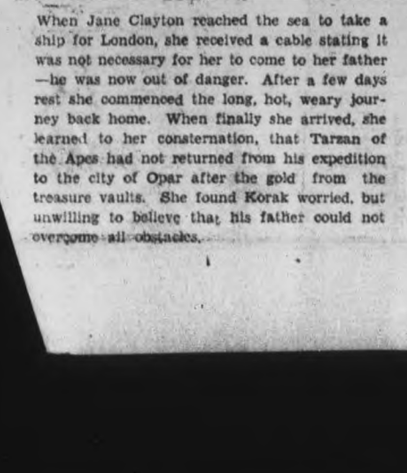
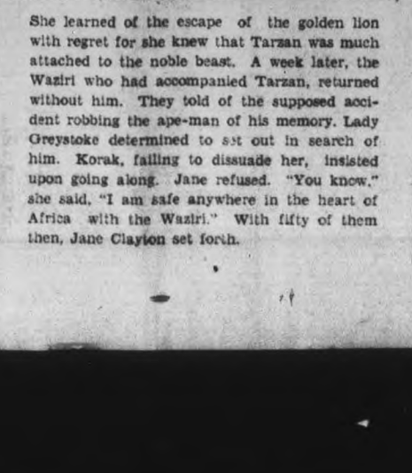
As Tarzan and LA gasped for breath in the thick smoke, fast filling the throne-room of the Palace of Diamonds, a night's ride away, Esteban, the false Tarzan, was burying the golden ingots. That unscrupulous Spaniard was bent on forestalling possible treachery on the part of Owaza and his blacks. "Suppose later," he thought, "I am unable to locate this buried treasure?" For it was necessary to march to the coast for new supplies and porters, Owaza's blacks having mutinied, a move the wily chief had instigated.

Esteban kept hidden a single ingot, planning to dispose of this on the sea coast for supplies. Also he drew upon the inner surface of the leopard skin he wore, an accurate map of the treasure's location. It was a map of blood; made with a sharpened stick dipped in the life fluid of a small animal. From Owaza he had obtained the native names of landmarks near the hidden gold. Also directions for reaching it from the coast. So far, so good. Now to do away with Owaza at the earliest chance. And Owaza awaited his chance to foil the false Tarzan.





When Jane Clayton reached the sea to take a ship for London, she received a cable stating it was not necessary for her to come to her father—he was now out of danger. After a few days rest she commenced the long, hot, weary journey back home. When finally she arrived, she learned to her consternation, that Tarzan of the Apes had not returned from his expedition to the city of Opar after the gold from the treasure vaults. She found Korak worried, but unwilling to believe that his father could not overcome all obstacles.

She learned of the escape of the golden lion with regret for she knew that Tarzan was much attached to the noble beast. A week later, the Waziri who had accompanied Tarzan, returned without him. They told of the supposed accident robbing the ape-man of his memory. Lady Greystoke determined to set out in search of him. Korak, failing to dissuade her, insisted upon going along. Jane refused. "You know," she said, "I am safe anywhere in the heart of Africa with the Waziri." With fifty of them then, Jane Clayton set forth.

Obituary

PATRICK HEFFERNAN.

The funeral of Patrick Heffernan was held on Monday morning from his residence, 843 Water Street, to St. Peter's Cathedral, where the funeral mass was sung by Rev P. Costello, who also preached a short sermon on death and the importance of being always prepared.

The esteem in which Mr. Heffernan was held was evident by the large number of people from all over the County of Peterborough who paid their respects during Saturday afternoon and all day Sunday, many coming long distances, also the large number who attended the funeral and were present at the family plot in St. Paul's Cemetery, Norwood, where interment took place.

Rev. J. J. McCarthy of St. Paul's Church, Norwood, officiated at the graveside.

The pall-bearers were Richard Heffernan, Patrick Heffernan, Michael Heffernan, Gerald Howley, John McGraw and Albert Weatherhead.

NICHOLAS IN PARIS

PARIS—Prince Nicholas of Rumania and his wife, the former Madame Jana Lucia Deletj, arrived here last night after a 16½ hour non-stop automobile trip from Cannes. The distance, approximately 580 miles, is usually considered a two-day run.

BANK SETS LIMIT.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay. — The Bank of the Republic issued a new set of restrictive measures to-day to prevent depreciation of the Uruguayan currency and limited to 200 pesos the amount of money permitted to be taken out of the country by persons going abroad.

MOUNTIES RULE PRAIRIES.

SCHOOL BOMBED.

NELSON, B.C. — Glebe school, situated among the Doukhobor communities a short distance from here, was bombed last night, but damage was small. Guards at the school were inside the building when the explosion occurred.

PINNED 11 HOURS BOY 3, IS SAVED

Tiny Lad Topples Into 250 Foot Hole, Catching 20 Feet Down.

FOLLOWING HIS FATHER.

MIAMI, Okla., April 1 (C.P.). — Brave Baby Gerald Collins lived today, saved from a terrifying prison deep in a mine drill hole by strong arms and warm hearts.

Wan and bruised, but with a courageous "I'm all right," the three-year-old, doubled up for eleven hours twenty feet below the surface of the earth at the Mary Ann Lead and Zinc Mine near Picher, was rescued through a parallel shaft last night.

"He's alive," cried a husky miner. Out from beyond the lights of the little rescue area a roar of thanks echoed through the hills from the throats of thousands of watchers.

Whirled in an ambulance eleven miles to the Baptist Hospital here cuddling in the mother's embrace of Mrs. Paul Collins, little Gerald "talke da blue streak" and didn't appear badly hurt.

Await X-Ray.

But X-ray pictures were scanned to-day for possible fractures by the three physicians who waited at the rescue shaft until the boy was taken carefully from the drill-hole.

There was danger, too, said Dr. General Pinnell, of pneumonia as a result of exposure.

Toddling after his work-bound father, Gerald stopped to pay about the 250-foot drill hole yesterday morning. Its maximum diameter is about a foot. He fell in and with his knees doubled up and his arms pinned above his head, wedged twenty feet down. There he stayed until volunteers and miners of the Tri-State Lead and Zinc District got him out after a frantic battle to pierce solid rock.

ADDRESSES KIWANIS.

Transportation is More Than a Business Speaker Declares.

Transportation with particular reference to its relationship with the culture and advancement of civilization, was the interesting theme upon which A. A. Gardiner, assistant passenger traffic agent of the Canadian National Railways, addressed members of the Kiwanis Club at their noon luncheon at Empress Hotel to-day.

Mr. Gardiner, who had journeyed from Montreal to-day was accompanied by Kiwanian James Doran, local C.N.A. passenger agent, and was introduced by Kiwanian John J. Turner, chairman of the program committee.

At the conclusion of his address, which was lightened with the frequent inclusion of sparkling wit and humor, making it very agreeable to after-dinner digestion, the speaker was accorded a hearty vote of thanks by President Harry J. Boyle, on motion of Dr. J. J. Craig.

The luncheon hour was further enlivened by the musical contributions of James Lillico, son of one of the club members and a pupil of

NOT EXPECTED CLOSURE RULE WILL BE USED

Bill Likely Be Reported From Committee This Afternoon.

BENNETT MOVED "GAG."

Premier Announces July 21 as Date for Imperial Parley at Ottawa.

OTTAWA, April 1.—(By the Canadian Press.)—Although debate on the unemployment and farm relief extension bill can go on, in the House of Commons, under the closure rule, until two o'clock to-morrow morning, there appears very little likelihood that it will do so. The feeling on Parliament Hill today is that the bill will be reported from committee this afternoon. It may also receive third reading, before the House adjourns for the week-end. The closure, as moved by Premier Bennett last night, applies only to the committee stage of the bill, and members may speak again in the regular way for third reading. It is understood, however, that there is little desire to prolong the debate.

OTTAWA, April 1 (C.P.).—The Imperial Economic Conference will open in Ottawa July 21, Premier R. B. Bennett told the House of Commons yesterday. The date has been advanced three days to meet the sailing conveniences of delegates from all parts of the Empire, Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, South Rhodesia and the Irish Free State already have signified their intention of being represented.

Another all-night sitting of the House was foreshadowed when the Prime Minister gave notice of closure late last night. It will apply to the committee stage, deliberation of the Government bill to extend until May 1 the provisions of the unemployment relief act of last session.

Second Similar Move.

It will be the second time in four days that Parliament's most drastic rule to stifle debate has been applied to a stage of the unemployment measure. Last Tuesday, closure was applied to the debate preceding the introduction of the bill.

For the entire day yesterday, the House discussed the bill in committee stage, but not a clause was passed. A barrage of questions, relating to innnumerable subjects, came from the Liberal side of the chamber, but when 11 o'clock was reached no progress had been made.

In the Senate, second readings were given two Government bills dealing with insurance. In consequence of a finding of the Privy Council, it was necessary to bring the Insurance Act into conformity with the legislative jurisdiction of the Dominion.

WAITRESS TESTIFIES IN COURT VICAR KISSED HER GIRL FRIEND

Rev. H. F. Davidson, 62 Year Minister, Goes on Trial Facing Charges of Immorality.

CALLED "THE MORMON."

LONDON, April 1.—(AP)—Violet Lowe, a pretty girl who used to be a waitress in a Chinese restaurant told today how she had seen the Rev. H. F. Davidson kiss Barbara Harris, another waitress. She was a witness in the trial of the 62-year-old minister on charges of immorality.

Dorothy Burn, another former waitress, said Dr. Davidson used to follow her around the tearoom where she worked, holding her by the hand and sometimes showing her photographs of actresses. He said he used to visit them very often to forgive their sins," the young woman testified.

"The Mormon"

Frederick Stevens, a police official said that a waitress in another tearoom at Lyons said the girls used to know Dr. Davidson as "the Mormon."

The Rev. Davidson was accused of immorality while he was vicar of Stiffkey. The Bishop of Norwich was the accuser and the trial board is headed by Chancellor F. H. North. The principal charge is that the defendant "during the past five years has habitually associated with women of loose character."

NO VOTE FOR WOMEN

HAMILTON, Bermuda.—Bermuda women lost their fight for the vote when the House of Assembly today defeated, by a 2 to 1 ballot, the latest bill for equal suffrage.

Crowd Fights To See Trial Of Horseman

SYDNEY, N.S.W., April 1 (C.P.).—A struggling crowd of 3,000 persons tried to gain entrance to-day to the court in which the horseman who dashed across at the opening of the new Sydney bridge march 19 and cut the tapes before Premier J. T. Lang could do so, is being tried, along with ten others arrested for causing disturbances.

The proceedings are expected to last some time, and intense interest is displayed throughout the Commonwealth.

A force of 150 police was needed to bring about order at the opening of the trials to-day.

SHELL SHOCKED VETERAN FOUND AFTER 11 YEARS

CHICAGO, April 1.—An 11 year search for a shell shocked war veteran ended here yesterday when he was re-united with his brother and started back to the Philadelphia home he does not remember.

Burke was shell-shocked during the World War while serving with the 108th Engineers of St. Louis. After his discharge he returned to his mothers' home. Mrs. Mary Burke, 27th street, Philadelphia.

On night he left his home to go to his brother-in-laws' next door for a medicine tablet to stop a particularly severe headache. He left the house, not to be heard from again for 11 years.

C. N. ANNOUNCES STAFF LAYOFFS ACROSS CANADA

Blow Hits Mechanical Department—May Be Only Temporary.

NO FIGURES GIVEN.

Fall in Traffic Reducing Work in Shops Given as Reason.

MONTREAL, April 1. (CP) Layoffs in the mechanical departments of the Canadian National Railways throughout the country will occur after next week. In a statement issued to-day, S. J. Hungerford, vice-president in charge of operation and construction, stated that falling off in traffic had reduced the amount of work available for men in the railway shops. It has been necessary as a consequence, Mr Hungerford said, to dispense temporarily with a number of employees.

The number of men affected was not stated and no estimate was offered. The method of selecting those to be laid off was not indicated, but it was assumed those with shorter terms of employment would be first dispensed with.

Vice's Statement

Mr. Hungerford's statement follows:

"While every effort has been made during the past two years by the management of the Canadian National Railways to retain in employment as many men as was justifiable, the continued decrease in traffic, due to conditions prevalent through the North American continent, has created a condition that compels the management temporarily to dispense with the services of a number of mechanical department employees. Arrangements were made some time ago with the consent of the men to shorten the working hours in our shops and roundhouses and thus distribute the available work among a greater number of hands. General repair work was also carried on at a level somewhat above the actual requirements of the steadily falling traffic in order to avoid increasing unemployment. However, we now find a condition in which neither of these expedients can any longer be effective as there is not work now for our present staff even on the reduced schedule of working hours. The management has therefore reluctantly been compelled to notify a number of our mechanical department employees that, after next week, their services must be temporarily dispensed with. This will affect Canadian National mechanical department forces throughout the country."

May Spread To C.P.

MONTREAL, April 1 (C.P.). — Further reductions in the Canadian Pacific Railway mechanical staffs are contemplated at present, officials of the system stated to-day. This pronouncement was made when attention was drawn to an official statement that such a reduction would be made on the Canadian National Railways after next week.

Rumors had been afloat that the railways would take simultaneous action to lay shopmen off.

Sandwich Teachers Go Without Pay

WINDSOR, April 1.—(C.P.) —This is pay day for Sandwich teachers and school janitors, but it is a payless April 1, it was disclosed this morning.

The Town Council and the Board of Education are still not in accord over the Board's 1932 budget, and the Imperial Bank is sticking to its policy not to honor school workers' cheques until the budget wrangle is settled.

FERGUSON MUM ON BEAUHARNOIS AS HE ARRIVES

Confident Empire Spirit at Coming Parley Will Bring Economic Unity.

LANDS AT HALIFAX.

Urges Canadian Made Goods to Suit Tastes of British Buyer.

(By Charles Bruce, C.P. Staff Writer.)

HALIFAX, April 1.—Confident that "a much stronger Empire spirit than has ever existed in the whole previous history of Britain" will be the driving force destined to create an Imperial Economic unity at the forthcoming Ottawa conference, Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Canada's High Commissioner in London, arrived here this morning. Landing from the liner Duchess of Atholl, he planned to leave for Toronto at noon.

About the immediate errand in hand—his giving evidence before the Senate committee on Beauharnois—the High Commissioner had nothing to say, but on his favorite subject—Imperial trade—his views were freely given. In Canada, he saw the need for closer attention to producing goods to the specificaitons of the British buyer, and for emulation of British industry's specialized organization. In the July gathering of Mother Country and Dominions, he believes, lies the key to a greater Commonwealth. "You can't, of course, do everything in six weeks," he said, "but you can lay down the broad lines on which an Imperial trade structure may be erected."

Position Improving.

Britain's financial position was improving with great rapidity. "No one who has not spent some time there recently can understand the remarkable change in public opinion and general attitude—the rebirth of optimism——that has come into being," he said. Money which had been called away was coming back to the banks of Britain. A bank rate twice lowered within a week made possible by that return was speeding the wheels of industry with gold.

He had just been reading with great satisfaction of Britain's success in balancing the Budget. Mr Ferguson said. In the past year the opinion that some general economic policy embracing all parts of the Empire must be worked out had increased to a tremendous extent. "I have seen a very marked, obvious, almost aggressive, attitude on the part of the British people in their approach to this problem," he said.

Strong Delegation Coming

"They are looking forward to the conference with the utmost confidence, with a broad and generous attitude, which should certainly enable us to work out a trade arrangement. Not only will there be a strong official delegation from Great Britain, but a large number of men connected with industry

RIVERMAN SAVES INJURED SWANS

Hill Braves Dangers of Niagara Floes to Scare Birds Into Flight.

OVER 100 FROZEN.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., April 1 (C.P.).—Ignoring orders of police, William (Red) Hill, Falls riverman, climbed out on the ice floes in the lower Niagara River below the Horseshot Falls late yesterday and roused forty or more wounded wild swans which had lain on the floes most of the day, afraid to take wing. The birds flew away and Hill believes they made their way to Jack Minor's bird sanctuary at Kingsville, Ont.

Hill had tried to get permission of police to go out on the ice and rescue the wounded swans, and when permission was not given him he turned to newspapermen standing with him at Tablerock, overlooking the gorge and the Horseshoe Falls, and declared he could stand it no longer. He made his way down the gorge bank to the river's edge, and then climbed over the ice to a point a short distance from the foot of the Horseshoe Falls, where the wounded swans were grouped.

Fly Out Of Gorge.

Shouting and waving his arms, Hill succeeded in scaring the birds

Little Chap Falls Into Large Kettle Is Badly Scalded

Gordon Curle, Son of Marcus Curle, Seymour Township Farmer, Falls Into Kettle of Boiling Sap While His Father Was Absent From the Fire

CONDITION IS SAID TO BE MOST SERIOUS LITTLE HOPE IS HELD FOR HIS RECOVERY

CAMPBELLFORD, April 1 (By Staff Reporter). — His anxiety to help his father boil down maple sap yesterday afternoon may cost Gordon Curle, five-year-old son of Marcus Curle, Seymour Township farmer, his life.

While his father was absent the little chap fell in the large kettle of boiling sap. He was severely scalded from the waist down both legs, and on both arms. Dr. T. B. Britnell is attending him, but his condition is stated to be most serious.

Mr. Curle had gathered a large supply of sap and yesterday morning built up a fireplace of bricks in his back yard in order to boil it down into maple syrup. The fire was lit and the large kettle of sap was set over it to boil. The little boy was taking a keen interest in all the operations and was out his father's elbow during all the work.

The sap was bubbling over the hot fire in the afternoon. Mr. Curle entered the house and his son went with him. Later the boy was missed. His sister was despatched to bring him in.

Screams greeted her as she went into the yard and she saw her young brother lying beside the fire. The boy was frantic with pain. Examination showed that he had been severely scalded.

Getting too close to the boiling kettle of sap, it is thought that he slipped into it. The boiling sap reached almost to his middle, but he managed to clamber out of the kettle himself.

WELLINGTON HAY TAKEN BY DEATH

Was Federal Member for Perth 1926-30—Former Ontario Liberal Leader.

HEART ATTACK.

LISTOWEL, Ont., April 1 (C.P.).—F. Wellington Hay, leader of the Ontario Liberal Party from 1921 until 1923, and a member of the Federal Parliament from 1926 to 19930, died from heart failure at his home here to-day.

Mr. Hay returned from a visit to Toronto Wednesday night, and as usual spent Thursday at his place of business. Last night he retired, apparently in good health. Early today, his wife was awakened by his heavy breathing. Medical aid was summoned but he died shortly afterwards.

A native of this town, the late Mr. Hay spent virtually his entire life here. He became associated with his father in the grain business of which he was head at his death.

He displayed marked interest in politics at an early age, and served as councillor and reeve of Listowel for some years. He next stepped into the provincial arena, as Liberal representative for North Perth. He became whip for the party, and became temporary leader in October, 1921. The following year, in March, he was appointed leader of the party.

Defeated by Monteith

In 1923, he was defeated by Hon. J. D. Monteith, now Minister of Labor in the Henry Cabinet, but in 1926 ran for the federal seat of Perth North, defeating D. M. Wright, Cons., by 580 votes.

With the death of Mr. Hay, many members of the Ontario Legislative press gallery have lost a good friend. A picturesque figure always, the former Liberal leader was a prime favorite with newspaper folk. He possessed an amazing sense of news value, and "made" front pages frequently as a result. He was a born raconteur.

He had wide business interests in addition to his political affairs. He was head of the Hay Bros. Ltd., grain firm, and vice-president of Gooderham and Worts and Hiram Walker Distilleries; Robertson Consolidated Coal Company, Ontario Bakeries, Ltd., Perfect Knit Mills and Canada Dairy. In addition, he was on the directorate of Founders Investment Trust, and Toronto Elevators, Ltd.

His widow and one sister, Miss Grace Hay survive him. The funeral will take place Monday afternoon, with interment being made in Listowel Cemetery.

Finlayson Scores Mitchell F. Hepburn

ST. THOMAS, April 1.—Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal Leader and Federal representative for Elgin West, was taken to task for his attack on the Sun Life Assurance Company at Ottawa last week by Hon. William Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests in the Ontario Government, when he spoke here to-night.

"Imagine a man who aspires to the leadership of the Ontario party, and probably to the Premiership, making such statements, attacking one of Canada's greates financial institutions," said Mr. Finlayson. "I had hoped that Mr. Hepburn would see the error of his statements, and would do like the Hon. Mr. Gordon, who made a foolish statement, and got up and apologized, but apparently he hasn't apologized for this wildest of statements. Only a man who knows something about our financial institutions and our insurance institutions would venture to talk about such things."

MORE FRIENDLY TONE IS TAKEN IN IRISH REPLY

De Valera's Revised Answer Leaves Way Open for Amicable Negotiations.

PUBLISHED MONDAY.

Republican Press Supports Dublin Theatres in Decision to Play National Anthem.

DUBLIN, April 1 (C.P. Cable).—The latest draft of the reply of the new Irish Free State Government to Great Britain's declaration that the oath of allegiance and the land annuities are regarded as integral parts of the Anglo-Irish treaty, is understood by Reuter's Agency to be "much more friendly in tone" than the original.

Insist Oath Go.

It is understood the revised reply will insist on the Free State Government's demand for abolition of the oath of allegiance, and while pressing for non-payment of the annuities, amounting to $24,000,000 at par, leaves the way open for amicable negotiation.

The reply is not expected to be despatched to London before Monday, after which the full correspondence will be made public.

A sidelight on the situation is that while the Free State Government demands abolition of the oath of allegiance, supported by the Republican press, the Dublin theatres and cinemas have decided to play the National Anthem at the conclusion of all performances.

The new draft reply was considered by the Free State Cabinet again to-day.

Considerable interest was aroused by Premier Bennett's announcement at Ottawa that the Free State has intimated its intention of sending delegates to the Imperial Economic Conference.

De Valera's Hopes?

Some observers saw in this an indication that President De Valera was hopeful any action taken by his Government in connection with the treaty would not place the Free State, technically or otherwise, outside the British Commonwealth of Nations.

SCHOOL BOARD HALTS ITS SUIT

Action Taken as Oshawa Council Passes Estimates Asked.

NO TAX BOOST.

OSHAWA, April 1.—The Oshawa Board of Education this morning instructed its counsel, Gideon Grant, K. C., of Toronto, to stay proceedings which had been started at Osgoode Hall to secure an order compelling the Oshawa City Council to provide the full amount of the board's estimates for this year.

This action was taken as a result of a city council meeting last night at which a by-law was passed granting the requests of the board that its full estimates be allowed.

The application for a mandamus has not been withdrawn, but has been held up until such time as the legality of the by-law passed last night can be established. The by-law does not increase the tax rate, but reduces the reserve fund which had been created by $12,000 the amount in dispute between the council and the board.

Falls Beneath Train Youth Loses His Feet

BARRIE, April 1 (C.P.). — After receiving one and a half pints of blood from his companion, Rudolph Kutz, Mildmay youth, who lost both his feet when he fell from a fast Canadian National freight train at Barrie Station late yesterday was making a strong fight for life to-day though hospital authorities described his condition as "still critical."

With his brother, Edward, aged 21 and Henry Webber, aged 24, Kutz had planned to jump the freight and ride the rails to Brandon, Manitoba, in search of farm work. He grabbed a rail on one of the front box cars of the speeding train, only to swing under and lose his grip. Ten cars passed over his legs before the train was brought to a sudden halt by a semaphore at the eastern terminus of the railway yard.

HOUSE MEANS TO FINISH TASK OF TAX RAISING

Congress Group Holds Extra Levies Ready in Case Shortage Appears.

RECORD VOTES IMPEND.

Second Roll Call on General Tax Sought, Though Hope is Small.

WASHINGTON, April 1 (C.P.). —A last drive on the million dollar Revenue Bill, with passage as its climax, was on to-day in the United States House of Representatives. It met determined to finish the tax-raising task.

Before turning loose the Bill the Ways and Means Committee checked its numerous items to make doubly sure that the expected yield of just less than $1,000,000,000 could be banked upon. Treasury calculations were submitted for this check, and the committee had ready a few more taxation schedules for use only if the Bill as now written appeared to fall short. Otherwise, it considered the measure complete. Record votes impended. Even a roll call on the general sales tax thrown out in the heat of bitter wrangle was sought though without real expectation that the decision would be reversed. Representative Royal C. Johnson (Republican, South Dakota) was behind this move.

Opposes Amendment.

The man in charge of the Bill, Acting Chairman Crisp (Democrat, Georgia), of the Ways and Means group, sought to have thrown out an amendment inserted earlier by the sales tax revolters to restore wartime surtax rates on incomes above $100,000. The taxes on oil imports and on foreign coal also were subject to roll calls.

Seeing the bill coming, the senator began preparations. The Democratic leader, Robinson of Arkansas, kindly disposed toward the measure, decided to call a party conference early next week. Chairman Smoot (Republican, Utah) of the finance committee, arranged for extremely limited committee hearings, with the intention of reporting the bill for debate quickly, to do all possible to assure final adjournment before the June conventions.

Talking of the tax bill to-day, Senator Robinson said:

"There is a disposition in the senate to receive it favorably, of course, it is too early to discuss particular rates but on the whole I am convinced that the members of the Democratic party, at least, are inclined to look favorably upon the measure as it stands to-day."

Effective in 15 Days

One of the last provisions tacked on to the measure yesterday provided that all the special excise taxes inserted as substitute for the sales tax would take effect 15 days after President Hoover signs the bill and would end on July 1, 1934. The bill's total revenue was brought to an estimated total of $999,000,000. All told, $255,500,000 was added during the session, by provisions for a gift tax running up to 33½ percent on amount over $10,000,000; a change in loss deduction limit on income tax; ten percent on fire arms and ammunition; eight per cent on oil pipe line carrying charges, and taxes on stock, bond, commodity futures and real estate transactions.

TRAIN WRECKED

HOLDREGE, Neb.—Several cars of the Burlington road's passenger train, the aristocrat, left the rails a half mile west of Axtell, at 6 a.m. yesterday, injuring at least 13 persons, several seriously.

Trainmen said a broken rail was responsible for the accident.

Ancient Peg Leg Stirs Controversy

NEW YORK, April 1. (CP)— The trend is to the right in a controversy about old Pete Stuyvesant's peg leg.

Some time ago the Dutch Governor of Curacoa started it by asking whether the amputated limb of the famous governor of New Amsterdam was right or left. Receiving no convincing answer he offered to dig up the leg, believed buried at Curacoa, and find out.

Now along comes Hendrick Van Loon, author, with some light on the subject. He said he knows a man who visited the governor's vault under St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie Church when it was being repaired some 30 years ago.

"According to my informant the missing leg was the right" he says.

Other evidence seems to point in that direction, too, leaving the leftists hardly a leg to stand on.

HITLER PLANNING NEW CAMPAIGN

Plans Whirlwind Presidential Drive When Political Truce Ends Sunday.

MUNICH, April 1 (C.P.). — One minute after the German Easter political truce ends next Sunday at noon Adolf Hitler, National Socialist leader, who trailed President von Hindenburg in last month's first Presidential election, expects to make his first speech in the run off election campaign.

National Socialist headquarters have announced that the second Hitler campaign will be of the whirlwind type.

"In breadth of conception and in labor accomplished," the headquarters statement said, "it will be unequaled in the history of German parliamentary or other elections."

Hitler himself is slated to speak four times a day, reaching one million voters directly. The Nationalist Socialist newspaper organ Voelkischer Beobachter will be distributed daily in an edition of one million copies.

FATHER WHO KILLED HIS SON FOUND NOT GUILTY OF MURDER IS ADJUDGED INSANE BY JURY

Hugh Greenshields of Campbellford Will Be Committed to Institution.

A "CLASSIC" CASE.

Jury is Commended on Its Verdict by Mr. Justice Raney.

(By A Staff Reporter)

COBOURG, April 1.—Reaching the generally expected climax of a verdict of "not guilty on the grounds of insanity" at the time he committed the crime, the trial of Hugh Greenshields of Campbellford for the murder on November 13, 1931, of his son, William, five years old, passed into the annals of the assize courts of the united counties of Northumberland and Durham Thursday afternoon, leaving a unanimous sentiment of satisfaction with the result and with every phase of the juridical proceedings which produced it.

Greenshields will be confined to an asylum either for the rest of his days or until his recovery of mental health can be demonstrated to the provincial authorities.

The concluding details of Thursday's session of the court were the expert evidence of Dr. William C. Herriman, psychiatrist and superintendent of the Ontario Hospital for the Insane, Queen street, Toronto, the addresses to the jury by N. A. MacColl, Campbellford, defense counsel, C. A. Payne, K.C., Belleville, Crown prosecutor, and the customary instructions from the bench by Mr. Justice Raney.

Of outstanding significance and interest was the testimony of Dr. Herriman and at least two collateral impressions of special moment or information to the average laymen.

One of these impressions was the virulence of influenza infection in many cases and its serious possibilities in after-effect upon the patient particularly upon the nervous system of which the brain is a focal part.

The other impression hinged upon the introduction of expert testimony in this case by three doctors, specialists in the study and treatment of mental diseases, appointed by the Ontario government, and in a sense virtually constituting an official board of experts. The wife of Hugh Greenshields had no money to engage special defense alienists. The three Toronto doctors were provided by the Crown but were called as witnesses for the defense. The impression may be deduced from these facts and the elimination of the apparent stalemate of opposing medical experts whenever they fail to agree and their theories and facts clash inconclusively.

A "Classic" Case.

Dr. Herriman declared in his evidence that Hugh Greenshields, after his illness of influenza a year ago, followed by and aggravated by the accident in which he was seriously wounded on the head, and in the head, when struck by an automobile truck last June, presented a classic case for a textbook on mental diseases.

The symptoms at that period included physical weakness, lack of sleep and a broken sleep rhythm, pains in the head, impaired memory, want of appetite. These and other conditions formed the background for the results of examinations made at various times this year by Dr. Herriman and his two associates and also Dr. Thomas Lapp of Cobourg.

Asked by Mr. MacColl to tell the jury what he believed was Greenshields' condition on the morning he clubbed his two sons while they were in bed, Dr. Herriman said: "He was suffering from post-traumatic insanity with an epilleptoid incident. I think there is no question about that."

Trauma is a technical term meaning injury."

Dr. Wm. C. Herriman first examined Greenshields on January 21.

"I felt then that he was suffering from conditions we know technically as traumatic insanity, the results of injury to the brain. His history is very consistent with that state."

Dr. Herriman affirmed with deliberate emphasis and assertion of conviction that the conjunction of Greenshields' accident and the after effects of influenza created a serious condition in the effect on the nervous system and possibly on the mind.

Infection By Flu.

"There is a very close connexion between his condition before the accident and after," Dr. Herriman said. "I feel very definite on that point. It is well recognized fact that an influenza attack often affects the central nervous system in a very marked way, causing a mental and physical condition that may leave a trail for a long time.

IRISH FINANCES IN GOOD SHAPE

Tax Windfall of £200,000 From Lord Iveagh's Estate Cuts Deficit to £639,234.

SMALLEST IN YEARS.

BY GEORGE HAMBLETON (C. P. Staff Writer).

DUBLIN, April 1. (C. P. Cable).—The Irish Free State has opened the new financial year in quiet confidence. An unexpected windfall of £200,000 in taxes from the estate of Lord Iveagh has reduced the budget deficit to £639,234. This is the smallest for some years. In 1930-31 it was £901,368, in 1929-30, £877,000.

Free State figures show, commented the Irish Times, that her position is still secure, that she may embark on a normal fiscal year. The predecessor of the new finance minister has left him with as clear a field as any Free state finance minister has surveyed since the Free State came into being 10 years ago.

If President Eamon de Valera's government keeps the promises and demands made upon the state purse during the coming year it will be a heavy burden. If it can satisfy them without any inequitable shifting of burdens and can reach March 1933 with a balance sheet as satisfactory as the present, it will have proved its talent for administration.

PAN-AMERICAN CONGRESS LIKELY TO BE POSTPONED

MEXICO CITY, April 1 (A.P.) — The newspaper Excelsior said today a consensus of Latin-American opinion here favored postponement of the seventh Pan-American Congress, scheduled to be held in Montevideo, Uruguay, in October.

Dr. Manuel Puig Casauranc will represent Mexico on April 6, when representatives of the 21 nations comprising the Pan-American Union meet in Washington to vote on or postponing or holding the congress.

The attitude of the Mexican Government has not been announced officially; but in other circles here a vigorous attack on the congress and Pan-Americanism in general has broken out.

SHIP LINE HAS DEFICIT.

ROTTERDAM, Holland.—A deficit of 3,755,000 guilders (approximately $1,500,000) was revealed in the report of the Holland-America Steamship Line for 1931 to-day.

The report said the 1931 business was most unfavorable and foreshadows the possibility of an arrangement with the debenture holders involving an important reduction of share capital.

Forty Are Injured In Riot At Bombay

BOMBAY, April 1 (C.P.). — Forty persons were injured when armed police were called out to-day to quell a riot which grew out of the slaying of a Pathan leader's chauffeur by Mohammedan dock strikers who resented the employment of Pathan workers on the docks during the strike.

Turmoil spread to the Mohammedan bazaar area which has been the scene of the worst of the Communal riots in the past, and the gendarmes were kept busy to prevent further outbreaks.

'H.P.' PRESENTED BY STOKOWSKI

Opera Stage is Nightmare of Pipes, Gauges, Pineapples, Tropical Fish.

FANTASTIC COSTUMES.

By William R. Spear, A. P. Staff Writer

PHILADELPHIA, Mar. 1. — A nightmare of pipes, gauges and pumps was blended with pineapples and tropical fish on the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House last night while Leopold Stokowski evoked the accompaniment from a 114-piece orchestra.

Dancers of the Philadelphia Grand Opera company ballet, artfully outfitted by Diego Rivera, performed the manoeuvres in the world premier of "H. P." by Carlos Chavez, director of the National Symphony orchestra of Mexico.

Alexis Dolinoff, the Russian dancer, was "H. P." He had the initials painted on his back and cavorted through every scene with a Rivera rivetting machine in his left hand and festive red ruffles on his right arm.

The ballet attempts to symbolize the relationship between the tropics and their raw materials and the north with its machinery. Rivera's fantastic costumes for the sirens, sailors, workmen, fruit vendors and senoritas appeared to cause more comment than the dancing itself or the music.

BENNETT DENIAL PLEASES IRISH

Press Features Statement on Free State's Invitation to Ottawa.

OATH PLAYS NO PART.

(By George Hambleton, C.P. Staff Writer.)

DUBLIN, April 1.—Big headlines in all the Dublin newspapers welcome Prime Minister R. B. Bennett's announcement that the Irish Free State accepted an invitation to the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa, opening July 21.

In a seven-column front page sweep Eamon De Valera's Irish Press itself describes it as "Canadian Premier's dramatic denial of false report." And in blackfaced type The Irish Press announces: "A dramatic denial has come from Ottawa of the statement made in the British press that the Irish Free State Government would be refused admission to the conference if it abolished the oath of allegiance."

Sean Lemass, Minister of Industry and Commerce, is likely to lead the Irish Free State delegation to Ottawa. The delegation is expected to include Dr. Ryan, Minister of Agriculture; Senator Connolly, Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, technical advisers and clerical staffs.

STRAWN FINDS TRADE OUTLOOK OF WORLD UP

Paris Meeting Faces Facts Frankly—Results Most Heartening.

ENGLAND IMPROVING.

NEW YORK, Mar. 31.—Proof that the world's business is on the upgrade was given at the session of the International Chamber of Commerce in Paris, according to Mr. Silas H. Strawn, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, who returned home recently.

Delegates at the Paris meeting, he said, voiced a degree of willingness "to meet the economic impasse with a freedom of expression and a unanimity of conviction" that in themselves were most heartening, he declared.

Mr. Strawn said conditions in France and England were better, and that in England in particular the morale of the people had strengthened. He anticipated no change in the general situation until after the German an Prussian elections next months and the French general elections in May.

Men of affairs abroad, as in the United States, Mr. Strawn said, are "fully cognizant of the imperative need for reduction of governmental expenditures," and regarded the efforts to reduce armaments and cut budgets in all directions as "encouraging evidence of the response of statesmen to this widespread demand for economy."

A chief part of the discussions at Paris, he continued, was given over to consideration of "the growing and burdensome restrictions upon trade created by foreign exchange restrictions, increasing tariffs, both in quantity and height, and the irritating and alarming series of embargoes and semiembargoes upon imports, exemplified by the so-called quota system." Mr. Strawn hopes most of them are only temporary in character.

FRANK DARLING

(Examiner Correspondence)

WARSAW, April 1.—The death occurred suddenly Thursday morning of Frank Darling at his home about six miles northeast of Warsaw. The deceased, who was seventy-two years of age, had been in good health, but Saturday was knocked down by a horse in the stable. He thought no more about it at the time, not bothering to call a doctor to treat the few bruises. About three o'clock Thursday morning, Mr. Darling called for his wife to light a lamp and when she had done so, she found he had passed away. The coroner, Dr. Smith of Lakefield said death was due to crushing by the horse on Saturday.

Besides his sorrowing wife, the deceased is survived by four daughters, Mrs. Dunsford and Mrs. Bolton of Burleigh, Mrs. Williams of Toronto and Alice of Peterborough; four sons, Udelle, Caleb, Norman and William at home; and a brother, John of Dummer. The funeral will be held from his home Saturday afternoon at 2:30 to the Warsaw United Church and thence to Warsaw cemetery with the Rev. J. W. Wilkinson officiating.

ASKING FOR A TRADE ENVOY TO HELP HUDSON BAY ROUTE

Requests Made to Governments of Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

WANT EQUAL RATES

(Special to The Examiner)

THE PAS, Man., March 30.—Advocating that the provincial governments of Manitoba and Saskatchewan should appoint a commissioner of trade with headquarters in London to promote the use of the new Hudson Bay route, the board of trade ordered 200 copies of the resolution printed and circulated to government officials, boards of trade and other interested groups throughout the west.

The resolution also requests that the two railway companies publish without delay, tariffs of railway freight rates affecting all classes of the Canadian freight classification now in force from Churchill to all points in western Canada, and viceversa.

That such terminal class rates between Churchill and all points in western Canada should not exceed the terminal class rates now in force between Armstrong, Port Arthur and Fort William, having regard to the mileage involved.

That the Canadian National extend their present existing tariff affecting wheat consigned to Churchill in bulk for export in the following particulars:

To give all points in western Canada rates on wheat to Churchill for export equivalent to the Crows Nest rates.

To cover all grains and flour at the same rates as wheat.

To give filling-in-transit privileges to the Hudson Bay route to all points in western Canada at which flour mills are now located.

That the C. P. R. published joint tariffs with the C. N. R. and Hudson Bay railways of through rates affecting grain and flour at the Crows Nest rates from points on its lines in western Canada to Churchill.

That all shippers of farm and packing house products in western Canada, as well as prospective exporters and importers to and from Europe use their best efforts to utilize and develop the Hudson Bay route with a view to obtained balanced trade and lowering of ocean and marine insurance rates.

and commerce generally are coming, anxious to meet the people of Canada, Australia, New Zealand and all parts of the commonwealth, eager to enter into a free and frank discussion of conditions and problems, to work out a satisfactory adjustment.

"We have been putting up the best battle we could," he said, in speaking of the sale of Russian timber in Britain, "and sentiment generally speaking among the dealers and larger users, such as the London County Council, is well indicated by their recorded resolutions favoring the purchase of empire timber, even at a price disadvantage."

Russia Must Sell.

Russian interests had organized a selling company, selling shares at a nominal price to dealers, giving shareholders the right to buy Russian timber on a preferred basis. This organization was out to sell the timber—would cut the price to meet any competition. "It is really not a question of competition, he said. "They have to sell the timber, because they have to get the money to pay the army of technicians they have hired."

Mr. Ferguson believes the soviet five-year plan is destined to break down. "You can't take 180,000,000 people, 90 per cent. of them peasants, and make highly trained technicians of them in four or five years," he said.

Feeling was strong in Britain for the use of Canadian timber. The thing to do was to prepare Canadian goods for market in the form in which the purchaser wanted it, not only as regards timber, but in all other lines. Specifications in Britain were often different from what Canadians had been accustomed to, but if a man bought a suit he wanted it to fit, and if he wanted three-inch timber eleven feet he would not want it four by twelve.

Spirit of Goodwill

"The greatest asset in existence now is the spirit of goodwill—it will be a great pity if we do not shape our course to take full advantage of it.

"The greatest evidence we have of the Imperial Conference's importance is the fact that every country in Europe is trying to make deals with Britain, realizing the power that lies in the trading possibilities of Imperial economic unity, its significance in world affairs."

Mr. Ferguson turned then to pay a tribute to Britain's financial position. The return of foreign funds marked the tide of world confidence. Britain's recovery was going on apace.

WARD 11 CONCERT IS GREAT SUCCESS

Fine Group of Artists Please Audience—Play Also Staged.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 1 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent).—The church hall of St. John's United Church, Campbellford, was well filled last evening when the ladies of Ward 2 sponsored what proved to be one of the most successful entertainments of the season, rich in musical talent and featuring a one-act play staged by the young people. Mrs. G. A. Ironside and Mrs. C. H. Davidson were responsible for the program which featured some of the town's best artists and drew cordial responses from the very appreciative audience.

The Rev. R. C. Tait acted as chairman for the evening. The play, which concluded the program, was entitled, "He Loved Kipling," and was full of fun and added that note of cheerfulness which a well-acted skit always does. The cast included Bill Richardson, Ted Cryderman, Frank Ree, Helen Coxwell, Lois Meyers, Grace Cairns and Eileen Hall.

Mrs. C. J. Windrim sung in splendid voice, several selections which included "Casey at the Fiddle", and "The Old Refrain." The Ionic Quartette were also heard to advantage in "Duna." "In the Garden of My Heart," and "Wonderful Man." This singing aggregation consists of Major J. M. Bygott, Dr. H. O. Richardson, Albert Hazell and Walter Henson. A very pretty vocal duet was rendered by Mrs. Windrim and Miss Ferne Weatherhill, "A Little Bit of Heaven," while Miss Weatherhill pleased the audience with two delightful solos, "Down in the Forest" and "That's an Irish Lullaby."

G. W. Lucy also proved himself a prime favorite as ever, singing "On the Road to Mandalay," and "At Dawning." Two very interesting readings with musical accompaniment were given by Miss Lillian Hay, "Earthenware" and "My Ships," while three tenor solos by Elmer Jordan, "Since Thou of Fondest," "Kashmiri Song," and "Macaushla." A piano solo was rendered by Arnold Bates.

During the evening several orchestra selections were given, this group being composed of A. Hazell, Ronald Richardson, Bill Richardson, Raymond Murphy, Walter Lowe, G. Nelson, Clark McKelvie and J. M. Benor. Accompanists for the evening were Miss Emma Meiklejohn, Mrs. C. J. Windrim, A. Hazell and Edge Dolman. At the conclusion of the program a delightful lunch was served by the ladies of the ward. A vote of thanks to the artists being sponsored by G. A. Kingston, C. H. Davidson, and A. J. Meyers.

Good Attendance at Meeting of Warkworth Young People's Association.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARKWORTH, April 1. — There was a good attendance for St. Andrew's Y.P.A., on Monday evening. The president, Gordon McCubbin, occupied the chair. Mr. Cawood gave an Easter message which was very appropriate for the season.

It was Missionary night and the splendid program was put on entirely by the men. The opening number was a recitation entitled Easter, by Donald Beatty. This was followed by a male trio, "Take up our Cross," which was well rendered. The main feature of the evening was an illustrated lecture, showing the Indian missionary work in Canada, dealing mostly with the work done in the Bertle School in Manitoba, and also the work in Kenora. Between the pictures Mr. Maycock sang a solo, "She did what she could." After the closing hymn Gordon McCubbin recited "In the Darkness," which brought to a close a splendid meeting.

Next Monday night will be Educational night with Miss Duncan as convenor.

The Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church held a very successful home cooking sale and tea in the Community Hall on Saturday afternoon.

KNIT TOGETHER BY ADVERSITY.

Out of the suffering caused by the unusual economic conditions of the last two years, it is worthy of note there is developing a splendid spirit of Canadian brotherhood that will stand this country in good stead in the years that lie ahead.

This is true not only in regard to the citizens of each particular community, but also in regard to the people of Canada as a whole, who are being knit together by adversity.

The Prairie Provinces are no longer just sections of the map of Canada to thousands of people in the eastern portion of the Dominion, and the older part of the country has lost the name, the "Selfish East," with many Westerners who had learned to associate it.

With Western farmers and their families in dire want because of successive crop failures, more fortunate people in the East have given freely of their means to send help to their stricken fellow-Canadians, and from this outpouring of assistance have been established contacts that will have a lasting influence upon the life of this country.

Through the relief measures taken friendships have been formed; hundreds of women in Eastern Canada are now exchanging letters with families in Saskatchewan or Alberta or Manitoba; they are learning something of the hardships of Western farmers in a period like the present, and the prairie residents are learning in turn that there are warm hearts and helping hands in the East.

And out of this exchange is growing something really fine, a spirit that will make this a better and a greater country.

UNLICENSED DRIVERS.

The latest report of motor accidents published by the Motor Vehicles Branch of the Ontario Department of Highways did not give as usual the number of drivers implicated in accidents who were found to be without either an operator's permit or a chauffeur's license.

Ever since these reports have been issued this record has been given, and its absence on this occasion may be due to the fact that the comparative large number of unlicensed drivers had begun to attract attention.

If anywhere from 35 to 50 motorists of those involved in accidents are found each month to have been operating an automobile without the necessary authority, the public is likely to arrive at the conclusion that there must be a good many other drivers who are not in possession of the required license.

There is something wrong when such a condition exists.

The law that provides that no person shall drive a car without a permit as an operator or a license as a chauffeur is a good law; it was designed to protect the public safety, and it should be rigidly enforced.

It has been in operation for some years, and there does not seem any reasonable explanation for the fact that every month many unlicensed drivers are mixed up in motor accidents.

If there are not enough teeth in the present act it should be amended so that every driver will realize that the law means just what it says.

RECORDING LOCAL HISTORY.

Mr. Perkins Bull, a well-known citizen of Toronto, in addressing an Historical Society meeting in that city recently made a very timely suggestion. He pointed out that historical societies and other public bodies were not making sufficient effort to assemble and preserve reliable information covering the early history of their respective municipalities.

Mr. Bull predicted that years hence it would cost the people of that time many thousands of dollars to dig up authentic information regarding incidents that may be now easily recorded at little or no cost, and which may seem unimportant to the present generation. He suggested greater interest by public bodies along these lines.

There are many who will heartily endorse the remarks of Mr. Bull in this connection. There should be in every municipality whether it is city, town, village, township or county some organization or some official of the municipal government whose duty it would be to see to it that the early history of the municipality is accurately compiled to date, with the necessary machinery organized to carry on the work as each year and each generation keeps slipping by.

For years Peterborough had a very excellent historical society and a few of the city's prominent citizens of that period took an active interest in its work. The late Col. H. C. Rogers, for many years postmaster of Peterborough, and the late T. A. S. Hay, for many years city engineer, gave unstintingly of their time to the activities of the Peterborough Historical Society. The late Frank Dobbin was undoubtedly the best posted man of our day on the early life of Peterborough City and County. Mr. Dobbin took great pains to learn from old records, old residents and numerous other sources facts concerning the lives of the first settlers, their characteristics and the stirring incidents of their time. It is a matter for satisfaction that Mr. Dobbin's work is to be continued by Mr. F. M. DelaFosse.

We have a number of excellent service clubs in the city and other organizations doing splendid work in their respective spheres, but we should have also a real active historical society to preserve for future generations the story of the life of our city and county. Take, for instance, in the field of sport. An interesting story right now would be the record of Peterborough in athletics. How many to-day can tell the story of the introduction of lacrosse into Peterborough, and how many championships, if any, ever came to the city? Similarly, in respect of rugby, hockey, cricket, curling and other forms of athletics.

There are, in fact, many phases in the life of a community, incidents in connection with which that at the time do not appear to be of more than passing interest, but which fifty or one hundred years from now will undoubtedly afford delightful reading to the people then living in the county. We should not assume the attitude that posterity has done nothing for us, so therefore why should we do anything for posterity?

In this connection there might be some official of each municipality whose duties amongst others would be the compiling of a year book, along similar lines to that very reliable and interesting publication, the Canadian Year Book, which deals with national affairs. This municipal year book need not be published, but in it could be posted a record of outstanding and interesting events throughout each year, along with, perhaps, newspaper clippings, pictures, sketches and other data pertaining to each event. This could be indexed and cross-indexed in such a manner that one could easily refer to any incident, any public man, any line of sport, and this in the years to come would be of great assistance to the historian, the lovers of folk-lore, and the people in the county in general. It could be available at either the county clerk's office, the City Hall or the Public Library.

The great obstacle in endeavoring to set in motion some machinery for carrying out this work seems to be that so few people realize that each year events keep happening in our midst that may seem unimportant at the time—a sort of nine days' wonder as it were—and so few of us realize that each year history is being made. No effort is, therefore, being put forward along these lines by an organization or by any official of our municipal government.

There are many arguments that might be used for the maintenance of a real energetic historical society in Peterborough or the establishment of an archives branch in conjunction with our municipal government, and what applies to Peterborough applies equally to all municipalities throughout Canada.

THE KOCH ANNIVERSARY.

The fiftieth anniversary of the announcement of the discovery of the tubercle bacillus by Robert Koch calls attention anew to the great German bacteriologist and to the diseases whose causative microbes he was the first to detect.

Starting as an obscure country doctor with meager resources, his demonstration of the life history of the bacillus of anthrax came in 1876. So ingenious, thorough and conclusive was this investigation that it was hailed at once as one of the greatest ever made in the field of bacteriology. At the age of 37 Koch was appointed to the Imperial Health Department. Thereafter he wanted neither capable assistants nor suitable laboratory equipment for the prosecution of his researches.

From his first discovery to the time of his death in 1910, Koch's career was productive not only of original discoveries but of methods of research which have led to important discoveries by others. Nobody in his field has ever made so many substantial contributions as this quiet, dignified, industrious, ingenious and severely logical German. Many of the technical methods which he was the first to employ are among the most common procedures in every bacteriological laboratory at the present time. The conditions which he declared must be satisfied before a micro-organism should be recognized as the cause of a disease are now universally accepted as necessary and sufficient.

Koch's discovery of the bacillus of tuberculosis was an interesting example of the fact that the indentification of the causative agent may not lead to the eradication of a disease nor even to a frequently effective means of prevention or cure. Tuberculin, originally announced as a remedy, is now regarded only as a means of diagnosis. Preventive inoculation by the Calmette method, although it has now been applied to over a million children, has not had the enthusiastic approval of the medical profession. No other method of preventing tuberculosis or treating it by means of a biological product has come into general use. Tuberculosis has resisted such efforts as have robbed diphtheria, tetanus and typhoid of much of their terror.

The fifty years since the tubercle bacillus was discovered have seen more scientific study and unselfish effort given to the eradication of this disease than have been devoted to the control of any other malady. The warfare has involved efforts in many directions. The resources of private philanthropy and of cities, States and nations have been devoted generously to the cause. There has resulted a great deal of scientific information. The death-rate has fallen materially; but it is impossible to say to what extent this has been due to any particular method of attack.

Few infections are so widely distributed, and the fact that only a certain proportion of the persons who harbor the germs ever give evidence of the disease is one of the puzzles connected with it. That practically every animal is susceptible to tuberculosis; that there are many forms of it; that almost any part of the body may be effected; that it is not inherited; that, unlike many other diseases, it is not self-limiting, and that its progress may often be arrested in its early stages, through good food and rest, are among the helpful facts which have been well established.—New York Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

A new British shell will perforate the best quality of armour of more than a foot thickness. That sounds like another good argument against war.

The Imperial Economic Conference has been postponed, but fortunately, only for three days.

Hon. Peter Veniot was presented with an onion by Eccles Gott, M.P., the other day, that being the Essex member's idea of a strong argument.

"They shall not pass" seems to be the Opposition battlecry at Ottawa. With the closure weapon available, however, Mr. Bennett has not much fear of a second Verdun.

"Get behind the highway," urges St. Thomas Times-Journal, in allusion to No. 3. We're all behind, without doubt. The provincial highway debt at last reports was $145,000,000.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

TORONTO PRODUCE.

TORONTO, April 1.—There was no butter moving on the local market yesterday. Asking prices were easier than at the first of the week, but buyers were showing no interest. To-day the Toronto storage holdings report, for the month, will be issued, and buying afterward will probably be based on the contents of this statement. Thursday's price for regraded creamery solids was 27c, while fresh makes were quoted at lower levels. Prices to retailers for creamery prints were unchanged at 29c for No. 1 and 28c for No. 2.

Local cream buyers quoted steady prices to country shippers. They offered 24c for special, 22c for No. 1 and 20c for No. 2, f.o.b. country points.

New cheese sold at the decline for the week, though trading generally was dull. New makes were quoted by brokers at 11¼c to 11½c for large, 11½c to 11¾c for twins and 11¾c to 12c for triplets. Retailers were offered new makes at 13c for large, 13¼c for twins, 13½c for triplets and 15½c for stiltons.

Trade in eggs was quiet and prices were unchanged. Receipts were not heavy, but the demand was poor. Country shippers were quoted 13c to 14c for extras, 11c to 12c for firsts and 9c to 10c for seconds, delivered, ungraded, cases returned. Retailers were offered extras in cartons at 20c, extras loose at 18c, firsts loose at 16c and seconds loose at 14c per dozen. Brokers quoted graded eggs, in free cases, at 15c to 16c for extras, 13c to 14c for firsts, and 13c for seconds. Eggs for storing were offered in new, heavy export cases, at for extras and 12c for firsts.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, April 1. — Sudden tumbling of grain values late yesterday accompanied Congressional voting of heavily increased taxes on exchange dealings in securities and agricultural commodities.

Price setbacks much more than offset earlier advances, and were apparently regardless of broader North American wheat export business estimated at 1,250,000 bushels, largely hard winter wheat from the United States. The overturn of cereal values was also in the face of continued unfavorable domestic wheat crop advices from the Southwest and West.

Wheat closed nervous, ⅝c to 1c under Wednesday's finish; corn, ⅝c to ¾c down; oats, ⅝c to ½c off; and provisions unchanged to 5c decline.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, April 1. — Butter prices dropped, while egg, cheese, and potato quotations were generally steady on the produce and dairy market here yesterday.

Following the announcement of stocks held here, which were lower than last month and also last year, but still larger than expected, No. 1 butter, in car lots or less, declined ½c to ¾c at 26c to 26½c a pound. Receipts were 207 boxes.

Ontario fresh graded eggs, in car lots or broken lots, were mainly firm, extras at 17c to 18c, and firsts at 16c holding unchanged, with seconds at 14c to 15c a dozen losing 1c. Quotations to retailers were steady and receipts totalled 1,045 cases.

Current cheese was quoted unchanged at 10½c to 11c, as was the summer make at 12c to 21½c a pound. Receipts were 25 boxes.

The potato market ruled steady, quotations of broken lots per 80-pound bag being 30c to 40c for Quebec whites and 45c to 58c for Quebec and New Brunswick Green Mountains. Car-lot prices were 10c a bag cheaper than the broken lot levels.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, April 1. — Traders moved to secure profits yesterday, and, minus support, the wheat market edged lower in dull trading. Values at the close rested ⅝c to ¾c lower for the day.

May closed at 61½c for a loss of ⅝c, while July and October each dropped ½c at 63c and 65½c, respectively.

Export trade was light, with only about 200,000 bushels worked overnight. Firmness in the Liverpool and Chicago markets proved a sustaining factor and helped in the absorption of offerings.

Chicago's strength was due principally to the lack of moisture in the winter wheat belt and to reports that conditions in Kansas were on the decline. Liverpool was guided by sterling which dropped sharply, advancing wheat prices.

No sign of heavy wheat buying loomed on the European horizon, and there was little tendency here to develop bullish enthusiasm for the present at least.

Apart from odd-lot sales, trade in cash wheat and coarse grain was dull. Prices generally were fractionally better to slightly under Wednesday's close.

DISTRICT NURSE

by Faith Baldwin

She wanted to work, she said. Why she was strong, she did find some work. No, not the stage. Never that. She told Ellen, alone with her one day, never made good. Ellen, you can't know, you don't know.

She was silent, somber, remembering. Cheap third-string road companies . . . heat and cold, odors, quarrels, dingy costumes, stale lunches . . . she had never made good.

That man. He'd disappeared. Then the drifting away, the one night stands, the company that had gone to Australia, the company that had gone broke there. Ellen said, when now and then she would stammer something: "There's nothing you need to tell me unless you want to, understand."

She'd thought herself so in love. After that, no other men. She remembered that with a curious, hard, pathetic pride. Many hungry days, hunger drawing your stomach into a hard tight knot, making you sick and defiant.

Not always the stage, the third-rate shows. A waitress in a western town. A shop girl up north. Once, as a servant. A very bad servant, she said and looked at her little hands. "I dropped things. And there was a son. Not my fault, said Coral, "but his mother fired me. Tout de suite.

"Dearest, if it helps to talk, tell me—everything. But if it doesn't—forget it, if you can. Can you?"

"I'll try . . ."

Eight crowded years. Draughty dressing-rooms, kitchens, smelling of heavy food, another woman's sedate house, the son slinking in and out. "How about going to the movies with me, Cora?" The movies, too; she tried that, landing, at the end of her rope in Hollywood. Waiting at casting offices for extra work. Getting it, for a day or two. "Not casting to-day," they told her. Weary months. . .

She told her mother only the funny things, the things which had been so comic when they happened. Her mother said, never tired of touching her, of looking at her. "But you could have written, Coral."

"I was a fool," she told her mother simply. "I wanted to come back to this man's town in a blaze of glory. I didn't. I never was much of an actress, not even a fair chorus girl. I should have known better, quit, early in the game. But you don't, you know. You grit your teeth and say, next season . . . next season, I'll knock 'em into the aisles. Just pride," she said, "that was all."

"Funny," mused Mrs. Adams once. "Pete doesn't come to ask how you are."

Coral said, through stiff lips, "Why should he? He's busy, isn't he? He's going to practise for himself pretty soon. Ellen met Doc Travers and he said he was taking Pete on as his assistant now that Mel's settled out of town."

Yes. Pete would come back to the neighborhood. Pete would live and die there and do his work there, brusque and thorough and more understanding perhaps than any one, even Doc Travers, beloved by all. Coral thought—if they'd let me go away again, and find work. So I wouldn't have to see him. But I can't go. Not again.

She lacked the will, the stamina. No she couldn't go. She was caught here, for life, caged in their tenderness, their love.

But she would never forget. Opening her eyes to the ward, hearing the sounds of it, sombre, distressing. Seeing Pete's face, young severe. Feeling, his hand on her wrist. Hearing his too casual voice. "Coral—it's Pete—"

Had she ever forgotten him. She wished she might.

He wouldn't come, he told herself. She didn't, she said to herself, want him to come.

But he did come.

Ellen saw him first. Her vacation was over and she had started back to work. "Not much of a vacation—for me," Frank told her ruefully on that last evening, taking her out to dinner. The things I had planned! But I've hardly seen you."

"I had to get Coral back on her feet." She looked at him levelly. "She's had a pretty hard time, you see."

His pleasant, attractive face was grave with an unspoken sympathy.

"So I fancied. I didn't even know you had another sister," he said.

"She's been away from us a long time," Ellen murmured. She said something vague enough about a family estrangement. Frank nodded.

"I imagined that," he admitted. "Once or twice she's said little things to me. Nothing very much. But I gathered she had been on her own for some time. She's a pretty person, isn't she?"

Ellen looked at him, radiant. She said, "I'm glad you feel that. She's—flippant, now and then. She might give the wrong impression. But that's not the real Coral. Underneath, she's so loyal and—and—" Her voice broke, and her shining eyes filled. She said, after a moment during which his hand reached out and covered her, "Well, that's all over now. The loneliness, I mean; and the wandering. She's anxious to get work, and I think she'd be happier if she could find something she liked to do. But mother won't let her out of her sight."

"Your mother's changed," he remarked shrewdly.

"I know. You've noticed, too?" asked Ellen. "I suppose that was all she needed. Some one to fuss over. We never thought of that. We fussed over her. She hasn't been so well or so active in years. And she's grateful.

"To Providence, to Fate, to God she'd say, for bringing Coral home again. She believes," said Ellen, "so she's prayed, every day, every night—"

It was on the following day the first day of returning to work, that Ellen saw Pete. He telephoned her at the office.

"My night off, tonight," he told her. "I want to talk to you, Ellen."

Her heart leaped against her side, in happiness for Coral or in fear for her, she did not know which. She asked, "Come to the house will you?"

He said, "No, I'd rather not. Not till I've seen you, if you don't mind. Will you have dinner with me somewhere? I'll get you home early. I've got to go see the folks."

Now that Coral was home and comparatively well, Ellen and Nancy were freer, less bound to consult each other about their evening plans. Ellen said, instantly, "All right. Where?"

He set the time and the place; a funny little Italian restaurant in the neighborhood. "At home she said she was going out, and made no further explanations. Her mother sighed. "Two evenings, hand running?" she murmured. Coral smiled. Her unhappy, pretty mouth was pink with health once more and touched to a brighter shade with the lipstick and rouge. "These gadgets restore my self-respect. A cockeyed way to figure, isn't? But mine."

"Ellen," she told her mother, "knows what she's doing. That's more than can be said for most of us."

Nancy lifted a dark eyebrow. Ellen spoke to her briefly, alone.

"It's Pete. I'm not saying anything to mother and Coral. He has—something on his mind."

"Coral?"

"Perhaps."

INSTALMENT 16.

Ellen met Pete, his sandy hair ruffled into a crest, at the basement restaurant, and they went into the back room, which was decorated with violent murals representing the Bay of Naples and Como, and Vesuvius in, it appeared, eruption.

The proprietor hurried up. He knew Pete. He took the order, put a fat, straw protected bottle of red wine on the table, in bland defiance of law, smiled, "Buono appetito," and scurried away.

"Decent of you," said Pete, to Ellen, "to come. But I had to see you. Look here, I haven't been able to sleep, or eat—"

She suggested, "Then eat, at least. Later, we'll talk. You do look thin, Pete."

"I feel thin," he said glumly, "and I'm liable at any moment to diagnosis a clear case of measles as phlebitis. That's how short I am."

She laughed at him.

"Nonsense. Eat your anti pasto and pass me the funny stuff which looks like celery and tastes like paregoric. And tell me about the hospital."

It was clear to him that he had no intention of ruining a meal with serious or emotional conversation.

"Doc Travers wants me to go in with him," he said, after a while, when they had almost finished and the coffee had been brought. "I'm keen about it. They tell me I'm crazy, that I'll never make any money. Well, what of it? I have a chance to go in with Mallory—too—that's the gastric man you know, on the avenue, carriage trade and all that. But somehow—I told Doc Travers I'd take him up. I wonder," said Pete, "if I'm making a mistake."

"I don't think so," Ellen answered. "What you can do down here—oh, the other isn't comparable! Besides, Pete, you know perfectly well that it would go hard with you to acquire the proper uptown bedside manner. You'd have to practice calling on patients in your soup and fish, with a gardenia in the buttonhole."

"Good lord!" exclaimed Pete, genuinely horrified.

"Mallory's the man," he said, "who gave me my chance, you see. Somehow I feel I owe it to him—do as he wishes. Yet, I wouldn't fit in. I mean, I'm more at home down here; I understand these people better. I have, perhaps more patience with them. Mallory's decent. He understands. He wouldn't hold me back, he says."

"Whatever happened to that boy of his, the one you got out of the jam?" Ellen asked curiously.

"Nothing. That's literal. He sort of drifts about. Not very bad, not very good. In a broker's office, nowadays. It just about cracked the big doc's heart when he wouldn't take up medicine. He married—some gal with money. They had me up to dinner once. She didn't approve of me. Said, I believed, that I smelled like a dispensary or such. Bert—that's young Mallory—was apologetic. He sort of regards me as a rescuing angel, a little soiled as to wings.

Dinner was over. They drank their coffee. Pete lighted a cigarette, apologizing, "I always do things backward," and offered his case to Ellen. She shook her head, smiling. "No, thanks. I don't like them, really. Now and then, if I have to. But if given my own preference, no. I leave hiding butts to Nancy. "And then, before she had thought, she went on. "You'll be astonished, but we've actually accustomed mother to Coral's smoking now and then. I wouldn't have believe it possible. But it was too hard on Coral; she'd smoked so long she was nervous. I've cut her down, for her health's sake, but she actually has mother broken in to seeing her take a cigarette, after meals. It's marvelous I—"

She stopped. Pete's fair skin was scarlet; he was red to the roots of the untamable sand hair. His steel gray eyes shifted nervously came back to hers and held them.

"You guessed it was Coral I wanted to talk to you about?"

COBOURG LOCK-UP BEING RENOVATED

Grand Jury Makes Its Report to Mr. Justice Raney.

COBOURG, April 1.—The Grand Jury's report to Mr. Justice Raney at this weeks' assize court included the following observations:

The gaol for the United Counties we found in excellent condition in every respect. The sanitary and heating arrangements are good, and the 16 prisoners are receiving careful and proper attention. The officials are courteous and attentive to their duties.

We also inspected the Court House here and find the lavatory accommodation very inadequate. We recommend that more lavatories be installed. The lock-up we found in poor condition, especially in regard to ventilation, but are pleased to note that the town authorities are now renovating same. Otherwise the building is in fair condition.

A special automobile highway across the Sahara Desert from Cairo to Suez may be constructed soon.

FIVE HONORED FOR BRAVERY

Two Bronze Medals, Three Parchments Awarded Peterborough Boys and Girls.

BY HUMANE SOCIETY.

Recognition of the self-sacrificing heroism and bravery which cost the life of Sidney Neiman fourteen-year-old Lithuanian resident of this city, is made by the posthumous award of the Royal Humane Society's bronze medal, which was announced today.

Ray Harding another fourteen-year-old boy hero who dove into icy water fully clad and shod with skates, in an unsuccessful effort to rescue Neiman, is also announced as a bronze medallist, while three local girls who featured in another heroic episode in local waters have been awarded the Society's parchment certificates for bravery. They are Dorothy Self, Lavada M. Crouter and Lila York.

It will be recalled that Neiman was drowned in the waters of the Otonabee River at a spot known as the Goose Pond, on December 29, 19391.

He gave his life in an unsuccessful attempt to save his twelve-year-old companion, Kenneth Perram, of Ottawa, who had skated out on to thin ice, which broke under his weight, after a tin can.

After Neiman got into difficulty in attempting to rescue the Perram boy, another hero of the party, Ray Harding dived into the icy waters, fully clad eve nto his heavy steel skates.

The Perram boy was assisted on to solid ice by his two heroic companions after which Harding himself struggled back to safety when he failed to locate the body of Neiman.

Balanced Budget Passed In France

PARIS, April 1. (AP) — The French Parliament after a session which lasted all night and through the entire morning approved a balanced budget to-day for the period from April 1 to Dec. 31.

The budget calls for receipts of 41,097,501,000 francs and expenditures of 41,097,501,000.

The chamber adopted the final draft of the bill by 435 to 55.

Premier Andre Tardieu was obliged to crack the whip over the deputies during the night session to force an agreement on differences between the senate and chamber bills. He raised a question of confidence three times in an effort to speed the proceedings, getting an average majority of 50 votes.

STOCK EXCHANGE SHRINKAGE IS FEARED AS RESULT OF TAXATION

Brokers Express Concern Over Probable Effects of Proposed Federal Tax.

APPROVED AT WASHINGTON

(By Frank H. McConnell—A.S. Financial Writer).

NEW YORK, April 1.—Stock Exchange brokers whose business has dwindled to about one-fifth of its 1929 volume, fear deeper inroads as a result of increasing taxes.

While they mostly insist taxes must be increased to balance the budget regardless of financial hardships that result, they express concern over the probable effects of the proposed Federal tax on stock transfers, approved by the United States House of Representatives yesterday.

In reviewing two and a half years of declining stock prices, they record the following changes in their fortunes:

Stock trading volume which in the boom period was considered normal at 5,000,000 shares a day on the exchange is now running nearer 1,000,000 shares a day.

Stock Exchange seats which then brought around $500,000 are down around $100,000.

Brokers' revenues from arranging loans to carry marginal customers, which netted many hundreds of thousands of dollars a year, are down to nominal size.

Further shrinkage is certain to develop in stock trading, they say, if the tax burden on customers becomes too heavy. They admit they cannot tell whether the new Tax Bill will be enough to stifle the day-to-day trader—but they insist it would seriously hamper him. In support of their arguments they have figured out the cost of present and proposed tax rates on the round trip process of buying and selling a unit of 100 shares of stock.

TORONTO, April 1 (C.P.). — Exchange rates at noon to-day were as follows:

so they arose from the ice and flew out of the gorge. He made no effort to capture any of them, and did not try to recover any of the more than 100 dead birds frozen in the ice. New Play-Off System For MacDonald Cup

TORONTO, April 1. (CP)—"The McDonald Brier curling championship is likely to be an entirely different event next year" the Toronto Telegram says to-day.

After the "blessing" was completed the merchant found that $17 was missing from his cash register. Market Closing On All Exchanges

TORONTO EXCHANGE.

TORONTO, April 1.— (C.P.) — The most violent reaction of the year swept security prices 1 to 21 points lower on Toronto Stock Exchange to-day.

Smelters broke to 40 in the final hour, 21 points under where it had left off last night. Towards the close there was a slight recovery to 46, but the stock still was weak.

The break in Smelters had an unsettling effect upon C.P.R. and that stock sold off a point. Ford of Canada broke more than 3 to 11. Nickel at 8 1-8 was off only a fraction from last night but nevertheless at a new low for the year.

The Oils were soft and off fractions as were Noranda, Coast Copper, the latter at $1 share, Steel of Canada, Service Stations, Page-Hersey Tubes, Canadian Dredge and several other individual stocks.

STANDARD EXCHANGE

TORONTO, April 1. (CP)—Interlisted issues again provided leadership for a downward movement on the Standard stock and mining exchange to-day, thought light volume held most changes within narrow limits.

Noranda and International Nickel both dropped around 25 cents on the day. Dome lost 40, Treadwell Yukon 20 and McIntyre 15, while losses of a few cents each appeared in Teck-Hughes, Hollinger, Wright Hargreaves and Lake Shore.

WALL STREET.

NEW YORK, April 1 (C.P.).—Although stocks commanding the largest loan premiums held firmly, selling of rails and utilities depressed the general stock list to-day and the close was heavy. U.S. Steel, American Telephone and Westinghouse, resisting the trend, showed small net gains, but there were losses of about 5 in Norfolk and Western and Delaware and Hudson, and of 2 to 3 in Northern Pacific, North American, Standard Gas, Eastman and Coca Cola. Santa Fe, Lackawanna, New York Central and Southern Pacific dropped a point or more. Transactions approximated 1,500,000 shares.

Announcement was made by President Boyle of the club's Ladies' Night, to be held at the Legion Hall on Thursday of next week. Originally planned for Friday, the Kiwanians predated the event so as not to have it clash with the play, "The Rivals," which is being produced by the Kinsmen Club in the Collegiate Auditorium on Friday night.

Kiwanis Ladies' Night is to be an inter-club affair, with visiting Kiwanians expected from Lindsay, Picton, Belleville and Riverdale.

Among the guests present at the luncheon hour was the Rev. G. J. Bousfield, rector of St. Luke's Church, and who has recently been appointed Rural Dean of the Archdeaconry of Peterborough. He was introduced by J. J. Turner.

Born in England

Mr. Gardiner, who is a native of Somerset, England, commenced his career with the Grand Trunk Railway Company as a junior under Mr. Bell. In speaking of transportation and culture, he remarked, he was at a loss to know which came first. It was certain, however, that the activities of the people who brought about civilization had been largely dependent upon the transportation facilities which they found at hand.

The development of transportation was a novel thing throughout the ages, but the last hundred years had shown greater advancement in that direction than at any other period of the world's history.

The railroads of the world, the speaker claimed, occupied a fixed and definite standing in the service which they rendered to humanity in the development of transportation.

While he deplored the economies which the two great Canadian travel systems were having to practise in common with all other branches of transportation throughout the world, he assured his hearers that such economy was being effected without impairing the service to any appreciable extent.

"Transportation is more than a business," the speaker affairmed, "and from that fact we draw some encouragement in these times."

Touching upon the value of travel as a means of culture, the speaker dealt with the valuable contribution which transportation was making from that standpoint, particularly in view of the fact that world travel was at present almost within the reach of everyone. "You may travel round the world and know the time to the exact minute and the cost to the cent," he said.

The facilities of transportation went beyond mere travel, he said, in pointing out that one might complete arrangements at the local offices of the Canadian National or Canadian Pacific offices for hotel accommodation or amusement in any part of the world. He believed that the facilities which were offered in the present day for more extensive travel, would prove to be a very large factor in the promotion of peace, in so much as travel helped one to get a broader outlook on world affairs and tended to break down inter-racial prejudice.

Associated Advertising Dinners (Registered) of Toronto have been operating in the city this week, with much success. They put on Pure Food dinners in St. Paul's Presbyterian, George Street United and Murray Street Baptist Churches, with a large attendance on each occasion, and much interest manifested in the excellent meals provided. W. J. Anderson, director of the concern, explained the system, which aims to bring to public attention pure foods of various types.

MINES ARE IDLE OVER COAL BELT

Failure to Agree on Wage Contract Leaves 73,000 Union Men Jobless.

ILLINOIS TO VIRGINIA.

CHICAGO, March 1.—The unionized bituminous coal belt of United States was a land of idleness today.

From Illinois east to the West Virginia panhandle, hundreds of mine tipples were closed; approximatetly 75,000 members of the United Mine Workers were without work. And there was no indication of when operations would resume. Last midnight was the closing hour.

In Illinois, failure of miners and operators to agree on a new wage contract, after four weeks of conferences, added between 43,000 and 46,000 diggers to the jobless lists.

Four thousand more men were thrown out of work in a similar situation in Indiana's deep shaft mines. The Indiana mine owners and laborers had adjourned their conference pending outcome of the Illinois meeting and neither group made any last-minute attempts to stall off the suspension.

No Agreement

In Illinois and Indiana, the shutdown was neither a strike nor shutout. There was no agreement to continue operations.

In both states, efforts were expected to be continued to effect compromises on contracts.

In Ohio and the West Virginia panhandle, a strike called by District 6 officials of the United Mine Workers went into effect at midnight—following the failure of operators and miners to settle wage differences.

Twenty-five thousand men joined the idle ranks in Ohio fields and several thousand were expected by union officials to answer the strike call in the West Virginia panhandle.

To-day was also a miners' holiday: commemorating the signing 34 years ago of the first agreement with operators.

CLUES POINTING TO PHILADELPHIA

Mysterious Strangers Tips Off Detectives to Watch Certain House.

POLICE SCOFF.

HOPEWELL, N.J., April 1. (CP) It was Philadelphia's turn to-day to became the "clue" centre in the Lindbergh kidnapping mystery.

Reports flew that Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., kidnapped a month ago to-night, might be found in or near that city. Police scoffed. Hundreds of other tips of similar nature have proven valueless.

Col. N. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the state police, said "There has been no investigation directly or indirectly of the report the baby was held in or near Philadelphia."

Morton Bernstein, head of a private detective agency in New York, came here last night with one of his operatives, Samuel Krasnow, and visited the Lindbergh Mansion.

A spokesman for their agency said two mysterious strangers had come to the office and warned them to watch a certain Philadelphia house the night of March 31.

"A blond woman and a man will enter the house. If you will then crash the door, you may then find the Lindbergh baby" the strangers said.

Burnstein and Krasnow left for Philadelphia planning to watch the house.

FATHER WHO KILLED HIS SON FOUND NOT GUILTY OF MURDER

Where that effect of influenza is succeeded by a traumatic injury, that is, leaving an injury to the brain, then the condition may be expected to be greatly intensified by the accident."

The two physical disabilities, one from flu, and the other from the injury caused by the motor truck together set up a very serious combination, witness said. In some cases of influenza the subsequent effects on the nervous system were quite marked and might continue for rather long periods. Dr. Herriman said he wished to call attention to this experience, because apparently Hugh Greenshields had passed through a severe type of the disease.

The headaches mentioned by witnesses who had told of the prisoner's condition prior to the day of the tragedy were a common accompaniment to the conditions shown in this case. They were one of the symptoms of the mental state that occurred in Greenshields' situation, and other common signs were the reported weakness and interruption of the rhythm of sleep.

Mr. MacColl asked Dr. Herriman to give his opinion of the mental condition of the prisoner at the time of the tragedy.

A Definite Picture.

"I find a peculiar sequence of events," witness said. "This sequence gives me a very definite impression of the typical state of affairs we know as a traumatic condition. I get a picture of his condition that makes it almost a classic for a textbook. Greenshields had an operation for appendicitis and before he had fully regained his strength he was attacked by influenza, and the infection extended to the cerebral tissue. A mental condition is caused at that stage, from which there might be a gradual recovery, or there may be a deepening of the condition. At that critical period Greenshields has a very severe injury to his head. He was unconscious nearly three days, and it was brought out in evidence that he had a period of delirium when he made accusations against a friend that were plainly false. That delirium is a recognized indication that the injury to the brain was of unusually severe character."

"Epilleptoid Incident.

Dr. Herriman declared that a serious state of mental unbalance as indicated in this case may be followed later on by an incident such as the tragedy that did result in Greenshields' history.

"We call that an epilleptoid incident. It means that the person is suffering from a mental phase which, if not definite epilepsy, is closely related to it. A sign of it is a state of unconsciousness at the time of the attack. To an observer, the person may appear to do something quite intelligently, and it may be a complicated act, but there would be no memory of having done it."

Mr. Justice Raney—Does it involve premeditation?

Dr. Herriman—Characteristically no. An epilleptoid attack comes like a bolt from the blue, and may reflect the environment where it occurs. That is, in a hospital, the epileptic patient may attack a nurse or other attendant.

"I expect it will be entirely impossible for Greenshields ever to recall what happened that morning in his home. An epilleptoid incident is the only satisfactory explanation I can think of as accounting for what came over the man."

His illness, the accident, his subsequent condition, all fitted into the usual symptoms of a traumatic effect in the brain, in other words an injury; and the possibility of premeditation was entirely precluded, witness said.

Dr. Herriman examined the prisoner four times this year. Twice this week he appeared to respond more promptly to questions than when visited in January and February.

Aware of the Trial

"I found that he did know what was going on here in this court. He did not volunteer information, but when questioned he appeared to be answering them to the best of his ability.

It is unfortunate that such persons do not come under psychiatric observation as soon as possible. I would certainly say he should be examined before the inquest, and be kept under observation at all time from the incident to the trial. I feel too strongly on this to express myself as I feel like doing. The governor of the jail may be a gentleman but he is certainly not a competent observer.

Mr. Payne—If a man was out of work and worrying and didn't want his two boys to face a hard world, would he be likely to do what Greenshields did?

Dr. Herriman—I would want to know more about the circumstances and the cause of unemployment. A father might be all the more anxious to do something for his boys.

Mr. Payne—He was examined by Dr. Wilkins who testified that he believed the accused was capable of making a statement?

Dr. Herriman—He would be capable of conversing then because the epilleptoid incident or equivalent had passed.

Mr. Payne—You can't tell us with certainty what was his condition that morning, what happened to him, assuming something did come over him as he said.

Dr. Herriman—From my experience and study of psychiatry for more than thirty-five years I don't think psychiatry or any other knowledge of mental diseases can offer any solution whatever to the situation without that of an epilleptoid incident."

This statement of opinion closed the defense, and Mr. MacColl immediately began his address to the jury.

A Maiden Address.

Making his first address to a jury in a criminal case, Mr. MacColl sketched the record of Hugh Greenshields, touching on his record overseas. The accused and his brother enlisted with the Winnipeg Rifles. The brother was killed with an early draft to France, and Hugh was twice wounded and invalided to England. After the war he obtained a farm in Manitoba through the Soldiers' Settlement Board, but after seven years' effort was unable to make it profitable. He did, however, make good as a citizen establishing a reputation of a good father, industrious, reliable, a man who did not drink, and was well liked by all who knew him.

As a result of his illness and accident Greenshields' character underwent a grave transformation, which Mr. MacColl discussed in the explanatory terms of the medical experts. His appeal to sentiment was moderate and reserved, and he concluded by asking the jury to find the accused "not guilty by reason of insanity."

In a summary of the evidence by the Crown, Mr. Payne said he considered it his duty to call the jury's attention to certain incidents that had been mentioned. Was the whittled stick an evidence of premeditation? What interpretation might be taken from the alleged act of Greenshields of wiping up blood on the bedroom floor with a towel?

Mr. Payne referred to the statement given by the accused to Provincial Constable Carey in which he said he didn't know whether he drank iodine before or after he hit the boys.

"If he knew he hit them, he is guilty of murder," Mr. Payne said. "On the other hand he may not have become aware of the nature of his act until the episode the doctors speak of left him, and he then became conscious of what he had done from what he saw, and concluded that he had struck them."

Judge's Remarks.

Mr. Justice Raney explained the sections of the criminal code pertaining to this case.

"If insanity at the time of the act is established," said His Lordship, "the court will order the accused to be detained in custody as an insane person until the pleasure of the Lieutenant-Governor is known. His detention may be for the rest of his natural life. If in the future the authorities can be satisfied that it is safe to release him, he may be released.

One of the most mysterious questions is the human mind and the relation of the brain to the processes of the mind. No one can know definitely what was going on in the mind of the accused. Perhaps he himself couldn't tell. No one can give a definition of insanity. What happened to transform this man from the character he had before his illnesses early last year to the character who should do the thing he did on November 13. You will be of the opinion, I think, that something had snapped; some function of his mind failed to work. From the evidence, apart from that of the doctors, I expect you would find that he didn't know what he was doing. But, you musn't take what I am saying as a usurpation of your responsibility as a jury. Your responsibility is to find on a question of fact—did he know what he was doing. The evidence of the psychiatrists is consistent with the fact that he didn't know what he was doing."

The Trial Jury.

The personnel of the jury was: J. L. Byam, Millbrook, foreman; Fred L. Smith, Darlington township; Gordon Moffat and Johnston McKenzie, Haldiman township; Charles Hamilton, Cramahe township; Fred G. Tufford, Hope township; Andrew Macklin, Haldimand; Franklin Cole, Hamilton township; Richard McGraw, Bowmanville; H. E. Miner, Haldimand; Andrew Brown, Alnwick; Timothy Corkery, Haldimand.

SHIPPING LINES REDUCE FARES

Cunard, North German, White Star Agree on 20 Per Cent. Cut.

STARTED BY U. S. FIRMS.

BRUSSELS, April 1 (A.P.)—Delegates to the North Atlantic shipping conference yesterday accepted a proposal, advanced by representatives of United States shipping companies, for a 20 per cent reduction in transatlantic passenger fares. They were to meet again this afternoon to discuss details.

Some time in the near future there will be another conference to deal with curtailment of the present sailing schedules and of the number of liners in the service.

The North Atlantic conference met at Brussels Wednesday and while it was in session reductions were announced by the United States lines, Cunard, the North German Lloyd and the White Star line. The United States lines is not a member of the conference. But the United States proposal for a rate cut was before the first session. It encountered opposition from most of the European lines.

BERLIN, Apr. 1 (A.P.) — The Hamburg-American line and the North German Lloyd line yesterday announced substantial reductions in passenger fares on vessels in the North Atlantic service, effective immediately.

Third-class accommodations will be reduced 10 per cent, and first and second-class 20 per cent.

Bailieboro

Mr. Gordon Lapp, Field Secretary of the Ontario Boys' Work Board, will conduct the afternoon service at Bailieboro United Church on Sunday.

A boys' choir will be in attendance and the C.S.E.T. boys from Millbrook will be present and assist with the music.

Mrs. W. D. Hibbard visited at the home of Mrs. W. H. Barnard on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Fletcher and Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Hibbard were visitors to Port Hope on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. T. Tanner was the guest of Mrs. W. H. Barnard on Tuesday.

Numbers of young men gathered at the homes in the village on Tuesday evening, where radios were installed to listen in on the Toronto Maple Leaf v. Chicago hockey game.

A social evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of the United Church was held at the home of Mrs. Edmund Dawson, on Cavan street on Thursday evening last.

About forty-five were present and a delightful evening was spent. An impromptu program and games provided amusement for young and old, while dainty refreshments served at the conclusion, brought a delightful social evening to a close.

This is one of a series of social functions the ladies of the church have arranged and the ever-increasing number present signifies the pleasure and entertainment enjoyed at each function.

The Y.P.S. meeting on Tuesday evening was under the direction of the 1st vice-president, F. Barnard, convenor of the Christian Fellowship department of the society. The convenor opened the devotional service with a song service followed by the call to worship. Mr. J. Porter then led in prayer.

The scripture reading was taken by Herbert Dean, and the president Carl Lang read a poem, "One Short Hour," which fitted in well with the theme of the service which was "prayer."

Rev. E. F. Swayne then gave an inspirational address upon "Our church and what it means to become a member." An invitation was then given to the young folk to state their intention of joining the church, among those who gave their decision were Misses B. Barnard, M. Fallis, F. Watt and Carl Lang.

Plans were then made for the members to attend the Christian Citizenship Conference at Port Hope next Saturday and Sunday.

WILD SWANS DIE AMID ICE FLOES

Hundreds Caught at Niagara Falls Swept Over Brink and Crushed.

YEARLY VISIT.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Apr 1—Caught in the swift currents of the Upper Niagara river late Wednesday night hundreds of wild swan were swept over the Horse Shoe and American Falls, many being killed and others wounded. The lower river yesterday was filled with dead and wounded swans and rivermen were prearing to rescue the wounded birds if possible.

The swans, numberin more than 500, rivermen estimated, settled on the upper river Wednesday afternoon. A strong wind blowing up stream prevented them from being carried down stream but the wind changed and the birds were caught in the river currents and carried over the cataracts.

MADAME STALIN IS CHECKED UP

Misses Classes Where She Studies to be Artificial Silk Manufacturing Expert.

IN THIRD YEAR COURSE.

(By Stanley P. Richardson, A.P. Staff Correspondent.)

MOSCOW, April 1 (C.P.).—Madame Joseph Stalin, wife of the virtual Dictator of Soviet Russia, has been cited publicly for cutting classes in the institute here where she is studying to become an artificial silk-manufacturing expert and for delinquency in returning library books.

Under her maiden name of Nadya Allilujeva, by which she is enrolled—few of the several hundred students know that she is Madame Stalin—she appears on the current list of those guilty of missing classes without adequate excuse.

The list, containing the names of more than 50 students and tacked to a large blackboard in one of the institute's central corridors, reveals that "Comrade N. H Allilujeva" was absent three days from study during a period of 16 school days

Her name also appears among the list of students who have failed to return borrowed library books for use in academic research. She is charged with having kept two volumes beyond the maximum time limit.

The 30-year-old wife of the Communist Party head now is completing the third and final year in her course of study. Mother of two children, she attends school four days out of five (the fifth being a rest day), and is the only woman member of her class of six.

MIXED MARRIAGE RULING OF POPE IS CRITICIZED

Terms Called Intolerable in Report of Federal Churches.

SEEDS OF DISCORD.

NEW YORK, April 11.—(A.P.)—The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America yesterday pronounced the Roman Catholic attitude toward intermarriage of Protestants and Roman Catholics "intolerable."

The council's committee on marriage and the home advised Protestants not to enter into such marriages. The recommendation was one of four made by the committee after a study of the subject of "mixed marriages" extending over several months.

In making public the committee's conclusions, the council said it "refrains from making any attack upon the Roman Catholic Church, but in good temper takes issue with its position on mixed marriages, on the ground that it is intolerable."

The committee protested specifically against "the requirement by any church that the children of mixed marriages should be pledged to that church."

Drafted Before Vatican Order.

Mixed marriages should not be undertaken, the committee held, where "intolerable conditions are imposed by either church in which membership is held."

The committee's report, approved at the March meeting of the council's administrative committee, was originally drafted prior to the Vatican decree of Feb. 5, requiring that the children of marriages between Roman Catholics and non-Catholics be reared in the Roman Catholic faith under pain of annulment of the marriage, refusal of participation in church activities, denial of a church funeral, and, in extreme cases, public excommunication.

As finally approved, the council report said:

"No religious body which confesses itself Christian can tolerate the imposition upon one of its own members of the requirements of another religious body by which the religious scruples of that member are aroused, or action repugnant to reason and conscience is forced upon him by authority which he does not acknowledge.

Seeds of Discord Sown.

"For example, if one of the partners to a mixed marriage submits to the dictation of such an authority and promises that his children be brought up in a faith which he does not share, reason and conscience are offended, the seeds of future discord are sowed at the very outset of married life, and the prospect of true marriage becomes remote."

In making public the committee's recommendatinons, the council says they are to be taken, "not as regulations, but as suggestions to church members for their consideration."

FASHION SERVICE

A delightfully smart model is this little crepe silk print with its new and modish points.

A small patterned crepe silk in the popular navy and white coloring made the original. And don't you think the one-sided rever a smart idea? It's a bit feminine too, for it terminates in a bow.

The bias cut of the bodice, accented by button trim, with a similar treatment at the front of the skirt, gives a charming slender appearance.

If you do not need slimming, you can indulge in the gayest of schemes in plain crepe silk and sheer wolens for this jaunty day dress.

Style No. 2749 is designed for sizes 16, 18 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust. Size 36 requires 3⅝ yards 39-inch with ½ yard 35-inch contrasting.

PLAY SCORES BIG HIT AT LAKEFIELD

"The Colonel's Maid" Presented By Warsaw Dramatic Club to Crowded Hall.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, April 1. — The Warsaw Dramatic Club scored a big hit on Tuesday evening with their three act comedy, "The Colonel's Maid," put on in the school room of the Regent Street United church, under the auspices of the Fancy Work Committee of the Ladies' Aid. The play, which has a pretty story with a Montague-Capulet family feud, in which the elders are fiercely engaged, while the young people proceed to fall deeply in love in the old-fashioned approved fashion. The story of the play deals with the efforts of the young people to overcome the objections of their elders in which they have an invaluable ally in Ching, the Chinese cook, at the home of Colonel Robert Rudd, the father of the hero, Bob Rudd. In the cast of nine persons there are three love affairs, none of which run smoothly, but all's well that ends well, and the play ends with the announcement of one marriage and the immediate prospect of two more. The cast was exceedingly well chosen and each and all were well adapted to their parts. The scene of the play was laid in the home of Colonel Rudd, of North Carolina, and the atmosphere of the Old South pervaded the whole play so that one in fancy saw the massive Colonial portico and the beautiful lawns and magnolia trees surrounding the house. The feud, which was of 28 years' standing was between Colonel Rudd, a real fire eater, and Colonel Richard Byrd, of South Carolina. Many tales are told of when North Carolina meets South Carolina, and of how the sparks fly—and they did, indeed, in "The Colonel's Maid." Both men were admirably suited to the parts, and with Ching carried off the major honors of the play.

Outstanding Character

Ching was really the outstanding character and his performance was remarkably fine, never overdone and yet always well done. Good humored, with a rare sense of humor and knowledge of human nature, Ching pervaded the whole play, and his appearance was always greeted with applause, which his performance richly deserved. This part was taken by Albert Bryan. The heaviest part of the play, that of Colonel Rudd, was done by Wallace Anderson, who was admirably suited to the part, which he played with rare skill. Colonel Byrd, although not so heavy as was Colonel Rudd, was well played by Rufus Payne, who also was a conspicuous success. Mrs. Geo. Weller, who played the part of Mrs. Emmeline Carroll, was the stately dignified lady of the old South, managing her brother-in-law's establishment as much as he would permit his daughter Julian, and finally her own love affair with her old sweetheart, Colonel Byrd. The part of the demure Julia, was well taken by Miss Mary Rose, who like all the other characters, was admirably chosen.

While the part of Marjorie Byrd, the real heroine of the play, was taken by Miss Della Tucker in her inimitable style, as Marjorie Byrd, and as "Hannah Katzenjammer," the Colonel's maid; she was excellent, filling the part most acceptably.

The part of Bob Rudd was played by Eric Jackson, and was, like every other part, well done; the part was heavy, but Mr. Jackson's impersonation was excellent from first to last.

The part of Ned Graydon, the lover of Julia, was taken by Clarence Payne, who scored a hit in the character of this absent-minded young man, who successively took the names of "Abraham Bixby," "Alonzo Benzine," and "Aaron Burr," in his effort to be near his fiancee. The small part of Lawyer Baskin was taken by Theodore Douglas in a manner quite to the King's taste. Full of humor, a clean and wholesome plot well acted, "The Colonel's Maid" provided a real evening's treat for the large crowd who saw its presentation.

Between the first and second acts Mrs. MacMillen sang very sweetly "The Garden of To-morrow," with Mrs. Moore as her accompanist.

Before the play began and between the second and third acts, the audience was entertained with a splendid program of piano selections by Miss Anna McMurray, a very talented musician.

In dramatics, music and hockey Warsaw occupies a premier place in the community.

"ALL-BRAN LIVES UP TO REPUTATION"

Her Constipation Overcome by This Delicious Cereal

If you are troubled with constipation, read Miss Bundy's enthusiastic letter:

"I would like to congratulate the one who discovered ALL-BRAN. It really does live up to its reputation when it is said to 'relieve constipation.'

"I used to feel poor all the time — just down and out — and after reading an advertisement in a magazine about ALL-BRAN I got a box. It has evermore helped me, and it is not hard at all to eat." — Miss Mary Bundy (address upon request).

Laboratory tests show ALL-BRAN brings two things needed to correct common constipation: "Bulk" to exercise the intestines; Vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN also furnishes iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of lettuce. Within the body, it forms a soft mass. Gently, it clears the intestines of wastes.

How much safer than taking pills and drugs—so often harmful. ALL-BRAN is not habit-forming. Two tablespoonfuls daily will overcome most types of constipation. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Use as a cereal, or in cooking. Recipes on the red-and-green package. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

To-day, April 1, is the one day in a year when persons suffer themselves to be made fools of, not that they relish it exactly but custom and a sense of humor carry them through it without perturbation.

* * * * * * *

So clever are some of the ways of fooling that are devised that the very ingenuity is worth appreciation, and it may be added that this appreciation is seldom withheld.

* * * * * * *

Children, of course, relish April fools' day absurdities, and their laughable little pranks are causes for adult merriment.

* * * * * * *

The historic method of fooling persons was to send them on futile errands. Fools' errands, these were called, and the term has become classic.

* * * * * * *

Another method of foolery was to send a mock gift. Perhaps a bundle had nothing in it, although neatly done up. Or should an article be contained in the package it was insignificant, or a ludicrous travesty of a present.

* * * * * * *

These are the two outstanding ways in which the fooling was carried out in former days. It is from these that a general scheme for outwitting persons on this special day in the year has come about.

* * * * * * *

There is a spirit of merriment in April fools' pranks when they do not savor too much of the obnoxious practical joke, which is annoying if not actually unkindly or dangerous.

* * * * * * *

It is when one makes a fool of oneself on this or any other day in the year that there is cause for disturbance in one's own mind. Few, indeed, are the persons who, looking over a past year on any first day of April, are not aware of a certain smarting thought of some such times when one has made a fool of oneself.

* * * * * * *

It may be that one has been quick to think ungraciously of another and has acted on such an idea, only to find that a benefit accrued to herself, and her whole judgment was hasty and unkind.

* * * * * * *

It is not youths alone who act rashly. Temper may have been shown over so simple a thing and a whole party may have been disturbed just because one made a fool of herself.

* * * * * * *

Not a pleasant reflection, it it!

DRAMATIC CLUB PRESENTS PLAY SPLENDID CAST

"The Absent-Minded Bridegroom is Ably Presented in Trinity Hall.

REPEATED TO-NIGHT.

(By Jeanet'e)

"No woman would expect to marry a man who has forgotten all he remembers."

Just one of the typically Irish remarks that make "The Absent-minded Bridegroom" a constant succession of laughs and chuckles It isn't often that an amateur play has the interest and consistent humour that make this three-act comedy entertaining from start to finish. It is one of the finest pieces of amateur production seen here in many moons, and the cast and director, George Nicholls, deserve a great deal of credit for the manner in which they presented it last night and will doubtless repeat their excellent performance to-night, in Trinity Sunday School hall on Reid street, under the auspices of Trinity Young People's Club.

An audience that laughed almost continuously at the complications of the play and the manner in which it was put over, filled the hall last night, with every prospect of a bumper crowd for this evening's second performance.

"The Absent-Minded Bridegroom," has a theme that is not at all stereotyped and still remains true to life to a certain extent. It has a widow and a deluded gentleman who proposed to her in the light of the moon and then regretted it. Aphasia stepped in, to save the gentleman and the situation. Through three acts the fun progresses, with a constant amusement. "The Absent-Minded Bridegroom" can be recommended as a real blues-chaser and laugh-maker extraordinary.

Splendid Cast

The two gentlemen who represent the long and the short of it, Bill Fanjoy as Timothy Shea, the bridegroom himself, and his friend, Patrick Rooney (Malcom Latimer), have the major roles. Their line of conversation is funny in the extreme and they have plenty of amusing remarks that are both clever and entertaining. Mr. Latimer has a manner all his own that puts it over in immense style.

Then there is the bride, a widow, "Daphnay" Rooney (Miss Edna Forster) with a peppery tongue and an unaffected manner that makes her work most entertaining; her son, Jimmy (Max Clarke); his friend, Fred Grady (John Krogh); Mr. Slade, a plain-clothes man (Bill Holgate), with a Valentino touch to his get-up and a hard-boiled detective demeanor; the women of the piece, Nora Shea, Tim's daughter, (Miss Jessie Tully), Kathleen O'Connor, her friend (Mrs. John Krogh), and the cute maid, Tessie (Miss Ann Davis). The character who does so much for the piece is not on the program, but John Krogh has plenty to do with the role of Mrs. Petersen, in a splendidly-costumed and outlined feminine role that gets across in major fashion. Then, last but not least, are the Swedish progeny of the Petersens, little Yennie (Olagg Preston) and Yaney (Ada Frizzell) and the colored boy who gums up the works, Yonnie (Kenneth Gates).

Patrick Rooney is a great little fixer, but he doesn't work for nothing. He shakes down the tall Timothy for a lot of good cash money and still the complications thicken about that unfortunate gentleman's head. Half the time he doesn't know who he is or where he is at, and, by the same token, neither does the widow, (whose wedding day is spoilt by salt in the ice cream, a dress that doesn't fit and an infernal machine in the phonograph.

Every part is splendidly taken, with the major portion of the work allotted to the three main masculine characters, those portrayed by Bill Fanjoy, Malcolm Latimer and John Krogh, with the latter's feminine impersonation as a shining mark in the production.

Harold Rehill assists with the presentation and Dick Lush does the make-up.

The time of the three acts occupies only a short space as the action is spread over only a few hours in Mrs. Rooney's house, a charming living room scene with furniture supplied by A. Comstock and Sons, and the radio used in intermissions, from Heintzman & Company.

"The Absent-Minded Bridegroom" is exceptionally fine entertainment and could well be seen for a second time, so peppered is it with comedy and entertaining dialogue.

It will have its second presentation to-night in Reid street Hall.

El Salvador expects to raise enough rice this year to feed all its people.

CULBERTSON on CONTRACT

by Ely Culbertson

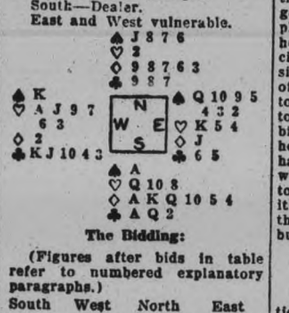
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

141

THE FINESSE COMPLEX

It is a wise Contract player who knows when to take his finesses and when to leave them alone. When players first begin to acquire expertness in play many of them develop what might be termed the "Finesse Complex." As a result they unnecessarily finesse, thereby losing contracts which might be made by correct play. Today's hand is an example.

South—Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.



The Bidding:

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
2◇(1)	2♡(2)	Pass(3)	Pass
2NT(4)	Pass(5)	3◇	3♡
5◇	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—South has a practically solid trump suit with 4-½ honor-tricks. His bid of two diamonds is therefore safe.
2—West's bid of two hearts, though vulnerable, is not too daring. The hand contains 3 honor-tricks plus and strong distributional value.
3—North knows that he will have an opportunity to give his distributional Raise later in the bidding.
4—Disclosing a stopper in the suit adversely bid.
5—In view of South's strong bid, West cannot continue with a silent partner.

West opened the Singleton diamond. The Opening lead of a heart might give the dealer an advantageous play and West was unwilling to disturb his tenace situation in the club suit. When South studied the combined hands he could see that his contract was certain if he could limit his club losers to 1 trick, as his only other losing card was a heart. This, of course, was a certainty if East held the club King, but South was without information as to distribution of any of the suits. The finesse would suggest itself at once as the way to play the hand, but South, while holding this play in reserve, decided to make it as safe as possible. He next laid down the Ace of spades and led a small trump to the Dummy to lead the Singleton heart toward his tenace combination. East won the trick to help out his partner who might have an undesirable hand from which to lead. He led a club up to Dummy's weakness. South let it run and West won, but was through. He had nothing to lead but a heart or a club.

TODAY'S POINTER

Question: On what is "valuation language" based?

Answer: On the standard table of honor-tricks, the distributional count and the ruffing values in Dummy's hand. The sum total of these values makes up the playing-trick strength of the partnership.

ANOTHER ENRICO CARUSO MAY PLEASE OPERA GOERS

NEW YORK, April 1. (CP)—Another Enrico Caruso may some day sing upon the stage of the Metropolitan Opera.

A young man bearing that name has arrived here.

"Ah, yes" he said. "I should love some day to sing at the Metropolitan, on the stage where my father sang."

Young Caruso said that the "discovery" of his voice was comparatively recent. Last year, he said, Adolph de la Huerta, once president of Mexico and now a singing teacher in Los Angeles, heard him sing and held out promises of a future. They put him right to work, he said, and now is going to Los Angeles, to study.

Leafs-Maroons Battle to 1-1 Tie in First Game

CONACHER AND TROTTIER SCORE COUNTERS OF GAME

Strong Toronto Defense Resists Montrealer's Efforts in Third Period.

LEAFS MORE EFFECTIVE.

(By Wallace Ward, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

MONTREAL, April 1.—A tie with the score at 1-1 here last night left Montreal Maroons and Toronto Maple Leafs on even terms for the game at Toronto tomorrow night to decide which shall meet the New York Rangers in the Stanley Cup series for the world's professional hockey title.

Maroons played indifferently here last night. The Leafs got an early goal on Chuck Conacher's whistling drive from the wing and seemed content to coast home with the lone tally. Maroons evened up in the last period but the Leafs did little for the rest of the game, saving themselves for the battle on home ice tomorrow night.
